John VanHouten, who has been making a three weeks visit to South Dakota, returned Monday. He reports very cold weather there, 36 below zero when he left.

John Newland spent last Friday and Saturday in East Jordan. He states he went on business. We have no doubt but what his statement was true in every respect.

Edward Hoffman left for California Monday, where he expects to get employment at the dairy farm of James and Laurence Adams, also former residents of this place.

ROMANCE OF THE BAHAMAS.

Life in Nassau Was Once a "Purple Princely Thing."

During the American war between the states Nassau of the Bahamas was very much on the tongues of men, as the devil-may-care emporium of contraband cotton, whereby hangs many a dashing sea story, some of which you can still hear from the lips of the men who took part in them.

The whole history of the Bahamas, since Columbus made his first landfall in the western seas on Watling's island, has been a fantastic record of desperate opportunism. The prose of "legitimate" business has seldom dulled the edge of precarious prosperity on these derelict islands, whose very existence still seems at the grudging mercy of the sea.

Buccaneering, wrecking and blockade running—no more tedious employ than these masculine professions occupied the Bahamians for generations, and so long as there were merchantmen to be boarded or scuttled, rich cargoes to be harvested from the white-finned reefs or cotton to be run to Wilmington at a profit of Shetland the truly life in Nassau was a purple princely thing, and even the shoebucks in Bay street played pitch and toss with gold—Richard Le Gallienne in Harper's Magazine.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

at the time of signing. His lawyer handed me a package of crisp bank notes and asked me to count them. I did so deliberately, the purchaser looking on with a sardonic smile.

"Correct," said I, laying the package on the table. He bowed very deeply. "Are you satisfied, Mr. Smart, that there are no counterfeiters among them?" he inquired, with polite irony; then to his lawyer: "Take the gentleman's receipt for the amount in the presence of witnesses. This is a business transaction, not a game of chance." It was the insult perfect.

As he prepared to take his departure he assumed an insinuating air of apology and remarked to me:

"I owe you an apology, Mr. Smart. There was a time when I did you an injustice. I suspected you of keeping your mistress here. Pray forgive my error."

Five days later I was snugly ensconced in the dual snit of the Brits, overlooking the Karterringsmaas, bereft of my baronial possessions, but not at all sorry. My romance had been short lived. It is one thing to write novels about medieval castles and quite another thing to try to write a novel in one of them. I trust I may never again be guilty of such ardent stupidity as to think that an American horn citizen can become a feudal baron by virtue of his dollars and cents any more than an American horn citizen can hope to be a real, dyed in the wool countess or duchess because some one needs the money more than she does. It would be quite as impossible, contrariwise, to transform a noble duke into a plain American citizen, so there you are, even up.

My plans were made. After a fortnight in Vleusa I expected to go west to London for the autumn and then back to New York. Strange to relate, I was homesick. Never before had my thoughts turned so restlessly, so wistfully to the haunts of my boyhood days. I began to long for the lights of Broadway (which I had scornfully despised in other days) and the gay peacocks of Fifth avenue at 4 in the afternoon. It seemed to me that nowhere in all the world was life so joyous and blithe and worth while as in "old New York." nowhere were the theaters so attractive, nowhere such restaurants. Even, in retrospect, the subway looked alluring, and as for the Fifth avenue stages, they were too beautiful for words. Ah, what a bulwark of unreal things a spell of homesickness may become if one gives it half a chance!

As for Schloss Rothboefen, I had it on excellent authority no less a person than Conrad Schmick himself that barely had I shaken the dust of the place from myself before the new master put into execution a most extraordinary and incomprehensible plan of reconstruction. In the first place, he gave all the servants two weeks' notice and then began to raze the castle from the bottom upward instead of the other way round, as a sensible person might have been expected to do. He was knocking out the walls in the cellars and digging up the stone floors with splendid disregard for that ominous thing known as a cataclysm. The grave question in the minds of the servants was whether the usual and somewhat mandatory two weeks' notice wouldn't prove a trifle too long after all. In fact, Hawkes, with an inspiration worthy of an office boy, managed to produce a sick grandmother and got away from the place at the end of one week, although having been paid in full for two.

The day on which I left for Paris still saw Turnowsky at work, with his mauls, heroically battering down the walls of the grim old stronghold, and I chuckled to myself. It was quite evident that he hadn't found the hid lag place up to that time.

After several days in Paris I took myself off to London. I was expecting letters at Claridge's, where I always take rooms—not because I think it is the best hotel in London, but because I am to some extent a creature of habit. My mother took me in Claridge's when I was a boy, and I saw a wonderful personage at the door, whom I was pleased to call the kine. Ever since then I have been going in Claridge's, and while my first king is dead there is one in his place, who looks far to like him, albeit no one shows any encouragement to him. He wears the most gorgeous buttons I've ever seen, and I doubt if King Solomon himself could have been more regal, certain, not Nebuchadnezzar. He works from 7 in the morning until 7 at night, and he has an imperial scorn for anything smaller than half a sovereign.

There were many letters waiting there for me, but not one from the Countess Alene. I had encouraged the hope that she might write to me. It was the least she could do in return for all that I had done for her not withstanding my wretched behavior. On the last day of our association while I had undoubtedly offended her in the most flagrant manner, still my act was not unpardonable. There was tribute, not outrage, in my behavior. Poopendyke figured a good deal with the scanty results of my literary labors, rattling the typed pages in a most fascinating way. He filled his machine with unsavory frequency but I failed to respond. I was in no mood for writing. He said to me one day:

"I don't see why you keep a secretary, Mr. Smart. I don't begin to earn my salt."

"Sally, Mr. Poopendyke," said I, "the cheapest thing I know of. Now I you had said power I might pause a reflect. But I am absolutely, inviolably opposed to rating anything on salt basis. If you"

"You know what I mean," he said.

stiffly. "I am of no use to you."

"Ah," said I triumphantly, "but you forget. Who is it that draws the salary checks for yourself and Britton and who keeps the accounts straight? Who, I repeat? Why, you, Mr. Poopendyke. You draw the checks. Isn't that something?"

"If I didn't know you so well I wouldn't hesitate to call you a blooming fool, Mr. Smart," said he, but he grinned as he said it.

"But he who hesitates is lost," said I. "This is your chance. Don't let it slip." He looked at me so steadily for a moment that I was in some fear—he would not let it slip.

Before I had been in London a week it became perfectly clear to me that I could not stretch my stay out to anything like a period of two months. In deed, I began to think about booking my passage home inside of two weeks. I was restless, dissatisfied, homesick. On the ninth day I sent Poopendyke to the booking office of the steamship company with instructions to secure passage for the next sailing of the Mauretania, and then lived in a state of positive dread for fear the confounded American tourists might have gobbled up all of the cabins. They are always going home it seems to me, and they are always trying to get on a single unfortunate ship. In all my experience abroad I've never known a time when Americans were not tumbling over each other trying to get back to New York in time to catch a certain train for home, wherever that may be. But Poopendyke managed it somehow. He must have resorted to bribery.

New York Nerve Specialists Tells of Ills of Society Girls.

Know the troubles of the New York society girl?

Here they are, as described by Dr. Thaddeus Hoyt Ames in a talk at the Academy of Medicine:

"Too much dancing and 'late hours' are the usual excuses put out by the faultily when a society girl gets nervous prostration, but this is not what the girl herself says when she confides her troubles to a physician.

"She says she is too much dictated to by her parents. She has to get up and go to bed and go out just when her mother says so. She has to wear just what her mother chooses and she has no life, no will of her own.

"Then, too, this society girl has become distracted by the rival claims of young men who have fallen in love with her and wish to marry her."

Didn't Know It Was Loaded.

The old, old plea "didn't know it was loaded" may also apply to the army, according to a "Tommy" in London from Gallipoli. With an empty canteen can for a bottle and six Turkish shell cases for a party of Australian soldiers were preparing tea. Suddenly there was a terrific explosion. There were no casualties, but uniforms were ruined and the tea was over. It was one of the Turkish shell cases. They didn't know it was loaded.

STRICKEN BY HEART FAILURE

D. C. Nettleton Drops Dead at Soldiers Meeting Saturday Night.

Was Reading a Paper When Fatal Summons Came—Funeral Held Wednesday.

The parting of the way—it comes to each of us—circumstances, business, duties and heart affairs are continually pulling families apart. Loved ones come and go. Life is but a great moving picture with a heart of feeling in it. New faces come, new affections are kindled and all vanish. Duty calls and we must separate. The death angel appears at a moment least expected and tears from our embrace a husband, a father, a brilliant citizen, and the loved ones of the home and the community in general are shocked and mourn his sudden passage.

Such was the fate of David C. Nettleton, a man of brain and cultured intellect. A man who had reached nearly four score of years, yet in the twinkling of an eye—while reading an article on "Wit and Humor" at an old soldiers' potluck supper at the home of Jas. M. Felts on Saturday evening about 8:30 o'clock—he was stricken with heart failure and without a word fell forward and was dead before his body reached the floor.

It is not for us to mention the poignant grief of the heartbroken wife and children, for the shock to them was beyond measure, while Charlevoix to a man and the whole surrounding country seemed dazed at the unbidden news.

No more lovable man ever lived in this community than David C. Nettleton, and his life was unselfish in the highest sense. He offered his all to his country in the war of the rebellion, and, coming back to civil life after that terrible struggle was over, he offered his life, his talents and his devotion to his family, to his friends and to the city.

David Crandell Nettleton was born January 9th, 1840, near Chagrin Falls, Ohio. He resided there until at the age of 20 years and then went into the west to engage in mining. He followed this vocation until the opening of the civil war in 1861, when he enlisted in the Second Colorado Cavalry. He was chief officer of a company of scouts who confined their operations mostly to quelling the frequent uprising of the many bands of western Indians. One of the severest battles he took part in was that of the Little Bighorn.

He came to Charlevoix in 1867 and after a short stay located on a home stead on what is now known as South Arm. He remained there off and on during the time it took to prove his homestead and then located in this city, engaging in the wagon-making business. Following this a period of time, he disposed of his interests and devoted his entire time to abstracts and surveying, which took up his time until his sudden death.

Deceased always took a prominent part in the development of the city and held the offices of county surveyor and justice of the peace. He was an honored member of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. and of the Charlevoix Historical Society since 1880. He cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln.

Deceased was married in early life and to this union two children were born—Mrs. Bryant G. Buin of Traverse City and Allen Nettleton of Chicago. His second marriage took place in 1892, to Miss Rosa Saunders. Two children—Douglas and Arthur—were born, all of whom mourn the loss of a husband and father.

Funeral services were held from the house to-day (Wednesday) at 2:00 o'clock, conducted by Rev. C. E. Taggart of the Congregational church. The G. A. R. and W. R. C. had charge of the funeral, thus paying their last tribute to a well loved and honorable member.

The floral tribute were numerous and beautiful, showing in a great measure the high esteem in which he was held. During the hours of the funeral service all business places were closed.

So passes one of the last remaining pioneers of Charlevoix county, and "the places that knew him shall know him no more forever."

Pleasant Afternoon

The members of the Ladies' Aid of Epworth M. E. Church met with Mrs. James O'Brien of Charlevoix, Wednesday February 23. A bountiful dinner and pleasant afternoon was enjoyed by all present.

CUT HUGE TREE

Mammoth Pine Measures 110 Feet from Butt to the Top Cut.

Joseph Boyer and Lewis E. Sink cut a pine tree recently for Henry Poquette on section 24, Marion township, that measured 110 feet from the butt to the top cut. The tree pronged out 12 feet from the stump and had three prongs.

These three prongs made 19 sawlogs, six 18 feet long, five 14 feet long, five 12 feet long and three 10 feet long. The tree was perfectly second from top to bottom, and measured 36 inches on the stump and 110 feet 10 inches to the top. Few pine trees, even of smaller size, are found in Northern Michigan to-day. Who has one that will beat it?

FISH HATCHERY FOR CHARLEVOIX

United States Government May Spend $50,000 to Build Here.

Congressman Scott Has Bill Asking for an Appropriation for Project.

The work of a committee of three named by the "Committee of Twenty-One," in conjunction with the help of Congressman Scott and others interested, seems to have been productive of much good in connection with influencing the government to locate a fish hatchery in this city. Papers throughout the state gave printed articles stating that the locating of the hatchery here is a certainty. The local committee state that, while as yet it is not a sure thing, everything points favorably to its being located here. Below we reprint the Washington article:

"Washington, Feb. 21—Charlevoix, Michigan, stands a good chance of getting a new fish hatchery to be established by the United States government. Congressman Frank D. Scott has been working on the idea for some time and finally has obtained the recommendation of the bureau of fisheries. Under present conditions millions of fish eggs are taken annually from Charlevoix to Northville, where they are hatched. After hatching they are taken back again to Charlevoix and planted. The expense and trouble of transporting them across the state is considerable. It is a waste of time and money. In a few years, it is believed, the saving would pay the cost of establishing the hatchery. Congressman Scott has introduced a bill asking for an appropriation not to exceed $50,000 for the fish hatchery."

That Charlevoix is the ideal location is admitted by all, and it is to be hoped that we succeed in landing the hatchery.

DESTROYED BY FIRE

Farm Home and Contents of C. Felling a Total Loss—Partially Insured.

Fire totally destroyed the fine farm house of C. Felling, five miles south of Charlevoix, on the Ellsworth road, on Tuesday afternoon between the hours of 1:30 and 2:00.

The family were eating dinner and several times heard peculiar sounds, but paid little attention to them. Soon afterwards the crackling of flames aroused them, and rushing to the second floor, they found the entire attic a mass of flames. The alarm was sent to nearby neighbors, who hurried to the scene of the fire, which had gained such headway that little could be done to save either the building or the contents. The heat from the burning building was so extreme that many pieces of furniture that had been taken from the building were burned before they could be taken a distance from the house.

The house and practically all its contents were destroyed, including the wearing apparel of the entire family. The loss will reach $2,000, with about $1000 insurance.

Grandma Vosburgh received presents to remind her of the occasion.

BLANCHARD HARDWARE STORE A MONUMENT TO CHARLEVOIX

Building Greatly Adds to Appearance of Bridge Street and Will Revolutionize the Splendor of All Business Places.—Grand Opening to Take Place Saturday, March 4th.

As Saturday, March 4th, 1916, draws nearer at hand we find a new and beautiful business house peering above all others in Northern Michigan. The Blanchard Hardware Company, now complete, offers as good accommodations as any hardware store in Michigan and will be a house of wonderment to those who will undoubtedly make it a visit on its opening day. You cannot imagine the beauty of this magnificent store until you see it as it is now, the height of architectural ambition, to whom the full credit rests in the person of Forrest L. Bartholomew, a local boy. The entire construction of the building is unique and almost sensational, it being a monument to the memory of the future of the city of Charlevoix.

Being only a two story building, its height will create no particular emphasis. The outward appearance is very inviting and the architectural design is but a sample of what is on the inside. From the street will be seen two extra large display windows oblique to the center passage way. The entire glass frontage is 39 feet, equipped with eight lights in each window for display at night. Dividing the two spacious display windows are two 3 foot 4 inch beveled plate glass doors, each equipped with Rev-o-noc door checks, making it unnecessary to use latches.

Upon entering to the main floor of the store one is first impressed by the sight of the horseshoe cases which form a square under the well, a most pleasing feature of the store. The show cases are 66 feet in length, in which will be seen three 15-foot shelves strictly devoted to the display of fishing tackle. Three six-foot shelves displaying pocket knives; three six-foot shelves showing scissors and shears; three six-foot shelves devoted to table silverware; three six-foot shelves displaying butcher knives, etc. Three fifteen-foot shelves forming the back of the horseshoe cases are devoted to lines of high grade nickel-plated and aluminum ware, such as casseroles, percolators, etc.

The south half of the main floor space is shelved with adjustable shelving devoted entirely to the display of kitchen furnishings in enamel ware, aluminum and tin goods. It is composed of seven shelves 55 feet long, a total of 385 feet of kitchen ware displayed. A table 4x16 feet is loaded with five and ten cent articles for the kitchen. Wrapping counters covered with battleship linoleum, accommodating three clerks, are found on both the north and south sides of the building. The counter has three paper racks beneath, thus enabling the clerks to work faster and out of each other's way.

The Warren system of shelving on the north side of the main floor deserves much credit. This shelving is divided in several sections, as follows: The first is devoted to guns and ammunition, an eight and one-half foot display; the second and third to carpenters' tools; the fourth and fifth to builders' hardware. The stock is carried behind the glass-covered display boards and any article on the boards is on the shelving behind them. The old method of opening the door in the customer's face is overcome by carrying stock on opposite side of the case in same relative position. The base section of the shelving is composed of different sized drawers numbered consecutively and used for stock in various lines. Any article can be readily found by the use of the index system which has been installed.

The Eclipse sectional revolving nail bin is composed of 25 compartments and holds a ton and a half of nails. A scale is hung by a chain from an adjustable arm, allowing the hopper of the scale to be placed in front of anyone of the nail bins, so that the nails can be readily removed from bin to scale and from the scale hopper to the nail bag without the clerk having to shift his position.

For the display of steel goods a Mosher adjustable tool rack has been installed. This rack will hold from 300 to 500 garden tools and other goods. Ironing Ladies Take Possession of the Home of Mrs. C. Ogden.

A number of Ironing ladies, including four past 70 years of age, gathered at the home of Mrs. C. Ogden, February 23, to bring her birthday. The ladies on the way there met "The Dean" and almost frightened him to death. He tried to get through a barbed wire fence, but, being rather large, was unable to do so and had to beg for mercy.

The hostess was so surprised that she met the ladies at the door with an up-lifted broom, but they were brave and would not be driven back. The afternoon was pleasantly spent, and the hostess, although surprised, served a delicious lunch, after which all departed to their homes wishing her many more happy birthdays.

LOOK FORWARD TO BETTER FAIR

Report of Annual Meeting of County Agricultural Society.

Both Grangers and Gleaners to Compete for Prizes in Future—Officers Elected.

The board of directors of Charlevoix County Agricultural Society held their annual meeting at the Russell House, East Jordan, on the seventeenth day of February. Practically a full board was present, there being but two absentees.

A special committee representing the board of supervisors, consisting of the Messrs. Meech, Miller and Bailey, met with the board. H. P. Hipp was elected president of the association for the balance of the year to succeed H. L. Olney, deceased. Robt. Price was elected vice-president to succeed H. B. Hipp.

Director R. S. Shapton's resignation was read and accepted and Frederick J. Meech of Charlevoix was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy caused by this resignation. Ira Olney was unanimously elected to succeed Director H. L. Olney, deceased.

The temporary finance committee reported the total receipts of the year as amounting to $3769.67, with a total expenditure of $3716.89, leaving a balance of $52.78 in the treasury.

R. A. Brintnall resigned as secretary of the association and D. L. Wilson was appointed to succeed him. The following committees were appointed for the ensuing year:

Executive—Price, Ward and Rogers.
Finance—Lewie, Wangeman and Burns.

Speed—Nat. Burns (chairman), L. C. Madison, Geo. Houghton, W. L. French and J. Adams.

The following superintendents were appointed: Division A, S. E. Rogers; B, Henry Nowland; C, F. H. Wangeman; D, E. H. Wangeman; E, F. J. Meech; F, F. J. Meech; G, Ira S. Olney; H, John A. Newville; I, Mrs. Robt. Price; J, Mrs. W. F. Empey; K, Mrs. R. Price; L, E. B. Ward; M, May L. Stewart.

Several changes were made in the rule governing exhibits, among them being the admission of the arbors of the Ancient Order of Gleaners to competition with the granges for premiums in Divisions G, H and I and in abolishing the limitation clause in Division H (fruit displays), so that in the future, instead of being limited to 300 plates, the arbors and granges may each exhibit an unlimited number of plates.

The date for the next annual fair was left open, pending the action of Emmet County Fair Association.

A general discussion was indulged in over past and future fairs, resulting in a determination to make the next annual fair one that will set a new mark in every department. The directors voiced their appreciation of the faithful work done by the retiring secretary, R. A. Brintnall, and regretted his resigning from the office. Much enthusiasm was apparent and patrons of the fair may look forward to the best county fair held in Northern Michigan.

SEED PROBLEM A SERIOUS ONE

Quick Growing Varieties Should Be Sown by Farmer.

Plant Home-Grown Seed and You Will Experience Little Trouble.

The frequent shortages of seed corn in the northern states are becoming more serious as the importance of the crop in this area increases. In 1903 the acreage of corn in the northern tier of states—New England, New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Montana, the Dakotas, Idaho and Washington—was 6,716,162 acres. Last year it was 11,121,000. If the industry is to continue to grow more attention must be paid to the seed supply, and the attempt to grow varieties which require a long season in which to mature must be abandoned.

Varieties must be found or bred which will make a rapid growth and mature in the short period between the last killing spring frost and the first killing fall frost. When man aids nature by selecting and preserving seed only from individuals which show promise, in several years the habits and characteristics can be changed considerably and perhaps a variety which at first failed to mature may be so changed that it becomes suitable.

Even when a variety has been thus adapted to a locality, so that it will mature under ordinary conditions, there will come seasons so unfavorable that it will not mature. If only one year's seed supply is gathered each year all the work of adaptation is lost. The proper way is to gather enough from a good crop to supply seed for two or three years hereafter. Good seed will keep without depreciation this long.

Go out to the cornfield before the first killing frost, gather a good supply of the best ears to be found on stalks growing in competition with others; hang these ears up in some place where they will be protected, but at the same time have a good chance to dry out quickly; when dry enough to shell do so and put the seed away where it will not be exposed to too great changes in temperature and moisture. Any man can follow the simple directions here given and plant his fields every year with good, vigorous growing seed which he knows is adapted to his farm.

The matter of a seed supply is a case of avoiding trouble, rather than trying to remedy the trouble after it has come. If no seed of the 1914 crop is available the farmer is in bad shape. He must purchase his seed, and in doing this he is in grave danger of obtaining either poor seed or seed of late-maturing varieties.

Home-grown seed that has been well cared for, even though it was not thoroughly mature, is almost certain to give better results than imported seed. By home-grown seed is meant seed grown on the farm, or in the same county, or where the same general conditions affected the crop. The point to be emphasized is that the farmer in Minnesota or North Dakota should not send for seed grown in southern South Dakota or Iowa. If this is done the resulting crop will almost certainly be immature next fall when it is necessary to harvest.

There are certain localities, even in the most northern states, where corn did mature sufficiently to provide seed for 1916. It is possible that the U. S. Department of Agriculture may be able to assist farmers in obtaining seed from these sources. In this connection an appeal is made for every grower of northern seed corn having good seed to sell to furnish the Office of Corn Investigations of the department with his name, address, name of variety, price, and amount of seed for sale. A generous response will aid the department in relieving the present critical situation.

Surprising results have been obtained by the Office of Corn Investigations with seed which was very immature when gathered. Even if your stock was in the "soft dough" stage when gathered last fall, if it was promptly dried and well cared for it will germinate and reproduce well enough to make it preferable to southern seed.

Lighting Plant Wrecked

The Bellaire end of Charlevoix's electric light and power supply was badly wrecked shortly before noon on Thursday of last week. The break is considered a bad one and will take some time before the plant can be put into running order. Meanwhile Charlevoix is furnishing her own light and power from the emergency plant, the entire cost to be born by the tax payers, other than the Bellaire contract expense.

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, prepare at forty, is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is a food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. No alcohol in Scott's.

DO IT NOW

Charlevoix People Should Not Wait Until It Is Too Late.

The appalling death-rate kidney disease is due largely to the fact that the little kidney troubles are usually neglected until they become serious. The slight symptoms often give place to chronic disorders and the sufferer may slip gradually into some serious form of kidney complaint.

If you suffer from backaches, headaches, dizzy spells; if the kidney secretions are irregular of passage and unnatural appearance, do not delay. Help the kidneys at once.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially for kidney disorders—they act where others fail. Over one hundred thousand people have recommended them. Here's a case at home:

Mrs. John Hull, 102 West Lincoln Avenue, Charlevoix, says: "About a year ago, I had a severe attack of lumbago. I suffered greatly and tried many remedies, but got no relief until I took Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at the Ivy Drug Store. Later I was again having trouble from weak kidneys and backache. I again took Doan's Kidney Pills and they acted promptly in bringing me relief."

NEW TETANUS FOUND.

Comes Without Cause and Despite Serum, Says Pasteur Physician.

Professor Lavran of the Pasteur Institute described at a meeting of the Academy of Sciences a new form of tetanus, which has been investigated by Dr. Bazy.

The new tetanus appears from thirty to fifty days after the wound has been received, whether the patient has had a preventive injection of serum or not.

The attacks can occur without apparent cause, although they manifest themselves more frequently after operation or on the fresh outbreak of inflammation in wounds.

The disease is serious, death occur-ing in from one-third to one-half of the cases. To guard against this form of tetanus Dr. Bazy recommends that injections of serum be given every week from the time the wound is first dressed.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 4 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost.

Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

Hold Fast to What You Have

IF there is anything more pathetic than the man who never had a home, or friend, or money, it is the man who had a home and did not appreciate it; friends and couldn't keep them; money and lost it.

The world is full of derelicts, and every town has its "has-beens" who once "were." It is a sad commentary on human life that men must work and sacrifice and save; practice thrift for years; accumulate a competence, and for one reason or another lose it all, and begin over again worse by far, except for the experience.

Men who were once citizens of affluence will be found in the bread line, sleeping in the parks at night, living on relatives, in the poor house, selling shoestrings on Broadway, when by better management they might have been in comfortable circumstances.

PUT YOUR MONEY IN A GOOD BANK AND LEAVE IT THERE

Experience has proven that the average man can do no better than bank his money, for in making private investments risk attends and loss often follows. There are thousands of good banks, and bank books are mighty good investments.

HOW IT FEELS TO DIE.

Going Away is Pleasant, but Coming Back to Life is Painful.
When you die everything is just a blank, says Harry Tons, who was shocked with electricity so badly that he was "dead" for an hour before he was revived by the use of a pulmotor at Cleveland, O.
Tons stepped on a live wire, and ordinary efforts to revive him failed. His heart had stopped beating, and respiration had ceased for an hour before a pulmotor was applied. Here's what he said about dying when he recovered consciousness at St. Alexis hospital:
"Dying was quick and without pain. Coming back to life was slow and painful. When I stepped on the wire it was like a jolt in the back of my head. It seemed as if millions of needles and pins were shot through me. Then suddenly everything was a blank.
"When I was coming back to life I could hear before I could see. There was a sound like rushing water and a heavy wind.
"The sounds swished back and forth for what seemed ages, and I couldn't drive them away. Then came the realization of pain. Again that pricking as of millions of needles in my flesh. I was hot. My left foot seemed on fire. I knew nothing but pain, and then gradually I could see."

SPECIAL CENSUS OF EL PASO.

Figures Show That the Town Has Had a Wonderful Growth.
A special census of the city of El Paso, Tex., made at local request and expense and taken as of Jan. 15, 1916, shows the population on that date to have been 61,362 within the corporate limits of the city. The increase since April 15, 1910, when the population was 39,270, has been 57.6 per cent.
The present population comprises 32,737 persons of Mexican descent, 27,350 whites other than of Mexican descent, 1,514 negroes, 243 Chinese, 44 Japanese and 5 Indians. The census was taken by local enumerators under the supervision of Edmund K. Ellsworth, an official of the bureau of the census.
In addition to the population above shown, there were in the corporate limits of the city, but not counted as a part of the bona fide population, 7,047 refugees or persons temporarily in El Paso awaiting settlement of conditions in Mexico and 1,763 soldiers. Of the 7,047 refugees there were 6,554 of Mexican descent, 482 white other than of Mexican descent and 11 negroes.

Are You Disproportioned?
Thirty-nine per cent of the men of the United States are physically disproportionate according to members of the International Custom Officers' association who attended the thirty-sixth annual convention in Kansas City. Military training would correct the defects. It was asserted.

ENEMY AIR MEN SHAKE HANDS.

Berlin Paper Describes Meeting After Capture of British Machine.
Two battle aeroplanes of the enemy, says the Lokalanzeiger of Berlin, tried to escape when fired on by German artillery, but only one succeeded in making off. A small German battle machine plane then appeared and attacked the remaining enemy machine at an altitude of 3,000 feet. After an exciting combat, in which both participants displayed equal bravery, the German, attacking from the front, forced his opponent to land. The German machine also landed, and its occupant rushed to the British aeroplane and shook hands with the British officer, who both were wounded. The pilot's injury being only a slight wound on the head, while the observer had been hit three times on the left shoulder.
The British pilot, who spoke German fluently, declared after learning that he was a prisoner.
"I am not ashamed, as it is I myself who brought us down."
Whereupon the German informed him:
"Well, this time it was only foolish."

DeLaval CREAM SEPARATORS

Will last from two to ten times longer than any other machine on the market today. This is the very reason we are selling them. It is not so much the cost of a separator as its lasting qualities. Some separators are sold for less money than the DeLaval, but when you take into consideration the thoroughness of separation, capacity, ease of operation and durability, the higher priced separators are the cheapest in the end. They can be operated by a woman or child, and there is nothing in the mechanism that cannot be handled by the housewife. They are easily cleaned and the construction is such that they will last for years.

Grange Column

Ellsworth Grange, No. 1198

Meets every two weeks on Tuesday evening.

I think I left off last week with a fish story, so will commence with a deer story. It was late in the fall of our first year here that my parents were over to my uncle's and left us little tots (myself and two sisters younger) at home, when a deer came scampering through the edge of our little clearing. When it saw it was out of the woods it stopped and looked around to see what had happened. It did not seem scared, but I could not say as much for us, for we did not know the name of the animal nor anything about its habits and naturally supposed it was a bear and that its chief occupation was to eat up all the kids it found.

Well, if it had been so inclined it would have had to break into the house and then crept far under the bed to find us. Later on in the winter we had something to do with a bear, not to have him eat us, but we ate him. It happened thus: An old resident by the name of Joe Upphigrove, living near where the village of Eastport now is, had a bear trap set in the swamp just west of our place, and Mr. Bruin came and stepped into it and got fast. But when a neighbor by the name of Henry Sissions (who is now a resident of Central Lake) came near him he pulled himself out of the trap. Mr. Sissions then came after my father, and, as he had only a shotgun, he took along his jackknife and dog.

Attendance of visiting members requested.

Master—D. E. Carpenter.
Lecturer—D. Patterson.
Secretary—Ava L. Bearss.

Grange was held as usual last Saturday. All the officers were present and an attendance of between twenty-five and thirty.

The program consisted of talks on the teachers' institute by Patterson, Chellis and Brail, a duet by the first and last named; a talk on shredded corn stalks by Judge Harris, and the remainder of the lecture hour was taken up by deciding the time, place and sides of the next argument.

The argument is: Resolved: "That Antrim County Should Have a County Agent." Judge Harris has the affirmative and L. K. Clark the negative sides.

The final lineup will be: Affirmative: Judge Harris, Etel Chellis, Max A. Brail, DeWitt Patterson. Negative: L. K. Clark, E. A. Dean, C. E. Bearss, E. J. Chellis. The argument will be held in the Blue store hall next Tuesday evening, March 7, at 7:30. Everyone is cordially invited to attend. Mr. Bearss has barred the "scissors" "half nelson" and "toe" hold, but everything else is fair. Judge Harris has chosen for his motto, "Everything is Fair in War," so come prepared and to see anything and everything imaginable.

Much regret was expressed here upon hearing of the death of Willis Wilkinson. John Caword and Mrs. Emery took Sunday dinner at the Crawford home. Peter Debyn passed through here on Monday leading a fine looking cow he had purchased that day. Duncen Crawford, having been called home by Co. 1 of East Jordan of which he Ice harvest is nearly over here.

Richard Hammond spent Sunday with his sister, Roxanna, at Wildwood.

Mrs. Lela McDonald left on Monday for an indefinite stay in Grand Rapids. John Stevens butchered, sold, and delivered a nice fat beef to Klooster & Son at Ellsworth last week.

LITTLE REGARD FOR TRUTH.

"I guess we will have to have a prohibition press agent for the state," remarked Governor Copper of Kansas to a representative of the Kansas City (Mo.) Journal, as he ran through a big raft of letters and communications regarding prohibition.

"It is remarkable how little regard for truth some people have," said the governor. "For instance, here is a man in Brooklyn, writing to the New York Tribune, solemnly stating that during his residence in Kansas from 1905 to 1913 he saw more boys under sixteen years old drunk in other states in all his life. Just think of such an absurd statement. He also says that the hotels in all the big towns of the state pay monthly fines for handling liquor. As a matter of fact there isn't a single hotel in Kansas paying monthly fines; nor in fact are monthly fines being charged anywhere. The supreme court knocked that system out long ago."

"All sorts of arguments are put up by the wets against prohibition, but there are two points they ignore. One is that Kansas is well pleased with prohibition, regardless of what others may think of her; the other is that if a man can't spend his nickel for a glass of beer he has that nickel with which to buy a loaf of bread for his family."

QUESTION NATIONALIZED.

"I have been forced to the conclusion that the only effective way to deal with the liquor question is by and through the action of the national government," is the declaration of United States Senator Borah of Idaho. "The liquor interests themselves have nationalized the question. The large distilleries and manufacturers of intoxicating liquors supply every state in the Union from some particular manufacturing plant so that it becomes in every sense a matter of interstate commerce and a matter which can be effectively controlled and regulated through the national government which alone can deal with interstate matters."

"If I had felt that it could be dealt with by the states alone I would have much preferred to see it dealt with in that way. But I feel sure that it has passed beyond the control of the states and has become a national question in every sense, economically, commercially and politically."

BOOZER A POOR PATRON.

A letter purporting to come from a business agency, asking for the credit ratings of certain men, was received by a banker. Discovering that it came from a liquor dealer, he replied as follows:

"The fact that you did not state the nature of your business led me to suspect that you were asking in the interest of the liquor business. If my suspicions are correct, I do not blame you for being ashamed to show your flag. I pity you for being in the business at all. I know the men referred to but have no specific information for you. I know this much, which I am willing to tell you, that they would have better credit in this bank if they did not use your stuff."

"As a bank, we know that the man who is a good patron of your business is a poor patron of ours."

WANTED, A NATION-WIDE POLICY.

The policy of prohibition has failed to achieve among us in the past an adequate success, because wherever tried it has been only prohibition in spirit. But sanitation in spots—vaccination, quarantine, sewerage, pure water supply only here and there—such an arrangement would not give us a satisfactory improvement in public health. Nothing will do but a policy of public hygiene that is nationwide. Just so with prohibition, a necessity to public health, moral and physical. The liquor power can only be struck at its vital center when hit by a national law. That blow given and then scores of minor evils, caused by drink, that cannot otherwise be reached will disappear.—The Congressionalist.

HAS LARGE BALANCE.

The treasurer of Kalamazoo county, Michigan, the county in which is situated the city of the same name, reports a balance of $25,728 for the year ending September 30, 1915. "This balance is significant when it is remembered that the county went dry on May 1 of that year and thereby forfeited $20,000 in liquor license revenue. For the year ending September 30, 1914, the balance amounted to only $6,578.30, practically $19,000 less than for 1915, although the county treasurer received for 1914 the liquor license revenue which was forfeited the following year."

DRY PRESS BANQUET.

The Missouri Press association climbed on the water-wagon at a banquet during its annual meeting in St. Joseph, Mo. Intoxicants were served. Each one of the newly elected officers is the editor of a dry newspaper and is himself an exponent of national constitutional prohibition.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY.

We were in a small sitting room, confronting Jasper Titus, his wife and his tiny granddaughter, who was ready for bed.

"You won't have to worry about me any longer, daddy, dear," said Allie, her voice suddenly breaking.

"Well, I'll be—well, well!" cried my late victim of the links. "Is this the way the wind blows?"

I was perfectly dumb. My face was scarlet. My dazzled eyes saw nothing but the fine, aristocratic features of Allie's mother. She was leaning slightly forward in her chair, and a slow but unmistakably joyous smile was creeping into her face.

"Allie!" she cried, and Allie went to her.

Jasper Titus led Rosemary up to me. "Kiss the gentleman, kiddie," said he huskily, lifting the little one up to me. She gave a sudden shriek of recognition, and I took her in my arms.

"In, in, in!" laughed I, without the slightest idea of what I was doing or why I did it. Sometimes I wonder if there has ever been any insanity in our family. I know there have been fools for I have my Uncle Elias' word for it. Mr. Titus picked up the newspaper he had been reading.

"Listen to this, Allie. It will interest you. It says here that our friend Turnowsky is going to marry that fool of a Chinaman girl we were talking about the other day. I know her father, but I've never met her mother. Old Bob Turnowsky has got millions, but he's only got one daughter. What a blamed shame!"

It must be perfectly obvious to you, kind reader, that I am going to marry Allie Turnowsky. In spite of all my professed opposition to marrying a dilettante, I argued the whole matter out with myself, but not until I was irrevocably committed. She says she needs me. Well, isn't that enough? In fact, I am now trying my best to get her to shorten the probationary period. She has taken off three months, God bless her, but I still hope for a further and more generous reduction—for good behavior!

THE END.

THREE SHIPS SINK BENEATH RECORD VICTIM OF THE WAR

Aside From That, His Home in Hartlepool Is Destroyed by Germans.

William Gow, chief engineer of the Ropner freighter Dromonahy of Hartlepool, will go down to posterity as the record breaking war victim. This is what has happened to him thus far:

October, 1914, chief engineer of the Ropner freighter Colby of Hartlepool; sunk by the German cruiser Krouprinz Wilhelm; taken as a prisoner of war to Newport News; released.

December, 1914, at his home in Hartlepool; his home destroyed by shell fire from the German cruisers during raid.

June, 1915, chief engineer of the Ropner freighter Gadsby of Hartlepool; sunk by German submarine U-30 in the week in which twenty-nine other freighters were torpedoed in the North sea; picked up by a trawler after being in the water six hours.

January, 1916, chief engineer of the Ropner freighter Dromonahy of Hartlepool; sunk by German raider in the bay of Biscay; brought in the prize ship Appam to Newport News.

And now Mr. Gow is returning to Hartlepool to get a berth on some Ropner freighter still afloat.

FLOCK OF BATS EXPECTED TO EAT ALL TEXAS MOSQUITOES

San Antonio Adopts Scheme to Rid Town of Germ Laden Pests.

An army of mosquito eating bats, several thousand strong, will be turned loose in San Antonio, Tex., soon. If, as has been predicted for it, the army succeeds in crippling seriously the activities of the germ laden mosquito population many other cities may follow San Antonio's example and establish their "municipal bat roosts."

Dr. C. A. H. Campbell, who has made a special study of bats, is responsible for San Antonio's bat roost. The institution came into existence last spring. It was not a success in its first year, owing to the fact that it was established late in the spring, and its population was not numerous enough. This spring there is a large army of bats on hand, and it is expected to get an early start.

Dr. Campbell says that one bat in the course of a single day will eat 1,000 mosquitoes. He expects border of mosquitoes to perish daily, and that by the end of the summer the pestiferous insects will be almost, if not entirely, missing from this locality.

The flight of the bats will begin at once, and from then until April 30 they will fly about all night long, trawling and devouring mosquitoes. Dr. Campbell says that the more malaria, typhoid and other germs a mosquito carries the better the bat relishes it.

After April 30 the bats grow less hungry and more sleepy. By the end of July their flight totals only about two hours. Soon thereafter the season for baby bats arrives.

A neighboring city having written Dr. Campbell asking him to get rid of mosquitoes, he replied, "Breed bats." Then he got another letter inquiring, "But when you've got rid of the mosquitoes how do you get rid of the bats?"

Difficult Churning.

On account of the numerous inquiries from people who are having difficulty with churning this winter, I will attempt to point out the several possible reasons for this trouble and suggest some things which may help to remove the cause. No one thing is the inevitable cause of hard churning. Each buttermaker will have to study his own conditions and try to locate the source of his particular trouble.

Hard and Soft Fats.

The butter particles as they exist in cream consist of hard and soft fats, which differ in relative proportions according to the feed, season and individual animal. In the control of the proportions of these fats lies the secret of easy churning to quite a large extent. Cows fed on green succulent feeds, as in spring and summer, yield a larger proportion of soft fats and churning is easy. On the other hand, the dry feeds of fall and winter tend to increase the portion of hard fats and churning becomes increasingly difficult. Knowing this, the dairyman seeks to create summer conditions in winter by feeding silage and roots which take the place of the succulent grasses and forage. The hard fats may also be made to collect more readily if a higher churning temperature is secured. While 60 degrees is plenty high enough for summer, a temperature of 65 degrees is often necessary in winter. A good dairy thermometer is almost required for successful buttermaking. The unnecessary time some people spend over a churn would buy thermometers for all the buttermakers in the county.

Some animals produce milk with a higher proportion of hard fats than others. Cows far advanced in the lactation period also produce harder fat globules than when fresh, and the fat particles are smaller, two conditions which cause difficult churning. Lack of grain in the ration causes hard fats. Much cottonseed meal tends to produce a hard butterfat. Linseed meal causes the production of softer fats. One or more fresh cows will cause all the cream to churn more easily. Feed some grain if possible.

A few other facts in churning must be mentioned. It is a fact pretty well established that sour cream churns more easily than sweet. If the cream is kept cold until the day before churning, then brought to a temperature of 70 degrees for one day, it will be about right. Ripe cream should have a mildly sour flavor, not sharp nor bitter. In thick or high testing cream the fat particles are closer together and in churning they collect more easily than in thin or low testing cream.

In a few rare cases a disease in the cow causes a frothy cream which refuses to collect. Consult a veterinarian for a remedy.

In case the churning requires more than a hour try each of these directions in turn or those which seem to apply to the conditions until a remedy is found:

1. Feed some succulent feed if possible.
2. Skim heavier cream.
3. Ripen cream to a higher degree of sourness.
4. Churn at a higher temperature.
5. Increase the grain in ration.
6. Heat part of the milk to less than the boiling point before separating.
7. Secure a fresh cow if possible.

Wood Wanted

Everyone Milks In Michigan.

(Tune: Everybody Works But Father.)

Everybody milks in Michigan,
We like the good old cow,
Our profits daily come from her
And make our neighbors bow.
Everybody milks in Michigan,
Even sister Ann,
Everybody does the milking there
In good old Michigan.

Chorus

Everybody grows alfalfa,
-Alfalfa gains the day,
Alfalfa for the farmer,
Is what makes cattle pay.
Alfalfa for the goosie,
Alfalfa for the duck,
Alfalfa tea for grandma,
So now try your luck.

II.

Everybody milks in Michigan,
Summer and wintertime,
It makes no difference in Michigan.
We milk 'em rain or shine,
Soil is growing rich and sweet.
Debts are cleared again,
Just because they're milking there
In good old Michigan.

III.

Everybody milks in Michigan,
Let me tell you that,
They're buying brand new automobiles
With the butterfat.
If the beans and taters fail,
They don't move out again,
They keep on with their milking
In good old Michigan.

VI.

Everybody milks in Michigan,
Listen to what I say,
They live on sauerkraut, honey and milk.
While the cows eat hay,
Mother has quit her washing now,
So has sister Ann,
Everybody's gone to milk the cow
In good old Michigan.

BLANCHARD HARDWARE STORE A MONUMENT

On the upper floor, which is reached by a twin stairway from the mezzanine floor, will be found a most spacious display room with a 44 foot glass frontage. Here are displayed large household furnishings such as stoves, ranges, refrigerators, washing machines, etc. Bicycles, carts and lawn swings are also on this floor. Twenty six lights illuminate the front windows and thirteen ceiling lamps light the entire upper floor. The color scheme of the upper floor is buff ceiling, tan side walls and black woodwork. On this floor the demonstration of the famous Peninsula high oven range will be given Saturday, March 4. Music, refreshments and lots of information will be given to the public Saturday.

The color scheme of the main and mezzanine floors are buff ceiling, red side walls and black wood work. The show cases have the red and black scheme carried throughout. A three circuit light system in used on the second floor.

Four eleven coil radiators in the front of the building on the main floor, two on the mezzanine floor and one on the upper floor compose the steam radiation for heat of the building. The system is known as the Kewanee.

The main floor has four small panels and two long panels. The well takes up the place of the center panel. Through this, the ceiling of the top floor may be seen. In the railing around the well are four set-in show cases displaying sporting goods, one with golf goods, one with croquette sets, one with tennis goods, and the other with base ball supplies. Each have college pennants artistically arranged. The use of steel beams made the artistic ceiling possible. There are seven of these built-in show cases in the railings in the store. The Kewanee ventilator system enables the changing of the air in the building at will and as often as necessary according to the wind.

In the basement will be found an auxiliary wired-in stockroom for the convenience of handling surplus stock in its many spacious bins. The furnace room is located here also. A carload of nails was arranged in such a way that the writer was impressed by the time saving system predominating throughout the whole building. The nail kegs are arranged in rows and the sizes most used are placed nearest the elevator. Each size of nails is numbered on the heads above the row they are placed in. The same arrangement is carried out for the care of the wire stock, roofing and building papers, and other surplus stock on shelves in the basement. A mammoth glass rack has been constructed with compartments for the many sizes and grades of glass. A cutting table is to be placed directly under the prism light in the basement. A screen door rack, covering a floor space of 16 inches, is provided and will hold in an upright position, thirteen screen doors for immediate display.

The elevator runs from the basement to the top floor and is of the Otis make. Each floor has a cage, thus protecting the public from getting into the elevator shaft when the elevator is on another floor. A workshop is fitted up in the basement for the assembling of stock and window displays. Business efficiency is the one thing that makes this new enterprise a big thing.

The ground was broken for the building the first of November. The building was under roof December 1st and completed for occupancy February 1st. F. L. Bartholomew, the architect, is deserving of great credit for the grand splendor of this modern building. The contractor was John Curtis of this city. E. Brock had the brick work under his supervision. Floyd S. Bettes did the electrical work, while Wood Brothers furnished the fixtures. The plumbing was done by Robert Bonthron, and the painting was divided among Charles Graves, Wm. E. Newman and Nelson Lindley. All Charlevoix men were the builders of this beautiful building, and each deserves credit for the efficient manner in which they did their work.

At the opening on Saturday, March 4, E. P. Oviatt of the Peninsula Stove Company will give a demonstration of modern bread baking. Hot coffee and biscuits will be served. W. H. Butler of the B. P. S. Paint Company will be here to explain all about varnishes and paints. Mr. McDonald of the Michigan Wire Company will talk about wire and prove its qualities.

The old warehouse was rebuilt and will be used as a tinshop and warehouse also. The rear windows of the building on the first and second floors are protected by iron bars.

Thus will Saturday close one chapter in the history of the Blanchard Hardware Company and open future chapters that will bring credit and prosperity to its owners and its manager, H. K. Allen. Mr. Allen is trying to make the Blanchard Hardware Co. a big institution and with the new building and up-to-date business efficiency methods now in use will, without a doubt, be rewarded in his efforts to give Charlevoix patrons the best service possible.

ANDREW ROSS DEFEATS PRIEST

In Hard-Fought Vote Getting Contest in Wednesday's Primary.

Charles Emrey for Clerk, and A. A. Henshaw for Treasurer, Verdict of Electors.

Results of the primary election held on Wednesday last are such that several new faces will be seen when the city dads call to order their first meeting in May.

It will be Mayor Andrew Ross (with a Scotch accent) who will sit at the head of the table and wield the gavel; Chas.
Emrey to keep track of the minutes of the meetings, and Alonzo Henshaw to guard and handle the city's finances.
Such are the ups and downs of the political game.

Local interest was chiefly centered in the fight for the office of mayor between Alderman Goo. W. Priest and Andrew Ross. Both played every card they had in the game of vote getting, with the result that Andy won out by a majority of 65.

In the race for clerk, Charles Emrey won over his opponent, A. L. Livingston, by a majority of 172. The contest between the two candidates for treasurer was harder fought, with the result that Alonzo A. Henshaw won out by 23 votes over S. M. Rose.

The tabulated statement printed below tells in detail of the contest in the various wards from the head of the ticket down:

CLAIM CHAMPIONSHIP

Eagle Patrol Basketball Team Lead All Patrol Teams in Winning.

The Eagle basketball team of Charlevoix defeated the Central Lake scouts
Saturday by the score of 29 to 13.

Charlevoix proved too much for them both in team work and basket throwing.
Krulick, throwing three field baskets, did stellar work for the Eagles, while Caneron starred for the losers. Carter threw 17 out of 18 tries at foul.

By defeating the Lion patrol 13 to 11
Thursday, March 2nd, the Eagles claim the championship of the different patrols.
The Eagles play the Petoskey Light-weights, who claim the championship in the fifteen year old class of Northern Michigan, next Saturday at the rink.

SHOULD TEST YOUR SEED CORN

Situation in Michigan a Serious One for Farmers.

Interesting letter from H. L. Bainum in Reference to Seed Corn Problems.

The following letter from H. Lee
Bainum, manager of the Breezy Point Farm, near Ironton, reveals the true situation of the Michigan farmer in regard to seed corn. He urges every farmer to test their corn before planting, and the information he gives in his letter is of a nature that will give every farmer in the country an idea of the seriousness of the situation:

"During Farmers' Week at the Agricultural College Prof. Shoemith of the farm crops department gave the results secured from a recent survey of the seed corn situation in Michigan. Reports were obtained from 186 farmers, of whom 110 had seeds and 76 reported that they would have to buy. Thirty three reported seed for sale.

"In connection with this survey samples of seed were collected for testing, and the average germination was found to be only 53.4 per cent. This was also the total per cent of germination and included corn which should rightly have been discarded on account of weak sprouts. Professor Shoemith urged in strongest terms germination tests by each corn grower without exception.
He said that simply increasing the quantity of seed used was the wrong way to remedy the situation. Better plant less acreage if necessary, but use live, strong seed. Where farmers have seed of poor quality a careful testing of every ear will enable them to discard weak, dead seed and keep for planting only corn of 100 per cent. germination.
The testing should be done at once, so that more seed can be secured before it is too late. A sand box, sawdust box or rag doll tester will serve the purpose."

FORMER RESIDENT DEAD

Mrs. Sarah Sherman Passes Away at the Home of Her Son in Muskegon.

Mrs. Sarah Sherman, aged 81 years, a former well known resident of this vicinity, died at the home of her son, William Sherman of Muskegon on Thursday of last week.

Deceased was the mother of H. M.
Sherman of this city, who was with her during the remaining hours. She was a resident of Charlevoix for over twelve years, making her home with her son,
H. M. Sherman of this city and Charley Sherman, a resident of Bay Shore. Her husband died here in May, 1910. About three years ago she with her son, Charles, moved to Holton, Michigan, with whom she made her home during the summer, and during the winter with her son, William of Muskegon, at whose home her death took place.

Deceased was born in Ann Arbor, her maiden name being Sarah Hunt. In 1849 she was married to Micaher Sherman. She leaves four sons, H. M. M.
Sherman of Charlevoix, Dennis and William of Muskegon, and Charles F. of Holton. Mrs. Sherman was a member of the M. E. church for the past 70 years.

Funeral services were held Saturday at Muskegon.

HELD BIG OPENING SATURDAY AT THE NEW STORE BUILDING

Estimated That Between 800 and 1,000 Persons Visited Blanchard Hardware Company's New Store—Program Was a Winner—Coffee and Biscuits Made Big Hit—Souvenirs Given Away.

The Blanchard Hardware Company held its opening day, Saturday, and it proved to be the biggest event of the kind ever held in this part of the state.
Arrived with beautiful floral decorations consisting of daffodils, jonquils, carnations and hyacinths, the store lent enchantment to the vast crowd of visitors. The miniature cherry trees made by Mrs. Bartlett added greatly to the floral settings of the stairways.
A large palm in the center of the main room made itself conspicuous. The new store spoke for itself, the artistic and neat arrangement appealing to the public at the first fleeting glance.

As an illustration of the enormous crowd of visitors, the following figures are given: Up to six o'clock from 800 to 1000 people were present, these figures being based on the amount of supplies used in serving. Up to the time mentioned 125 pounds of flour, 12 pounds of butter, 9 pounds of Kar-A-Van coffee, 18 pounds of honey and 12 quarts of cream were consumed in the feasting and in the demonstration of the Peninsular High Oven range. Mrs.
Phyllis Eagleton made the biscuits.
Mrs. William Black had charge of the coffee-making, while Mrs. L. B. Bartlett had charge of the serving, ably assisted by several ladies. The words of praise expressed by the visitors adequately conveyed an appreciation of the work done by the new company and also the ladies who so ardently worked to make the opening day a grand success.

The program was carried out in full and was a treat to the visitors. The songs rendered by Miss Benona Bartlett, Frank Poole, E. D. Pierce and the selections by the male quartette were greatly appreciated by all. The original parody, entitled "Buy a Broom" composed and sung by Miss Bartlett, deserves special mention, being very appropriate for the occasion. The selections on the latest model Edison Diamond disc phonograph filled in between the different parts of the program.
These selections kept the public in good humor throughout the afternoon and evening. Miss Doris Moore had charge of the phonograph program.

The demonstrations were highly gratifying and no doubt left a lasting impression with the public as to the articles featured. E. P. Oviatt of the Peninsular Stove Company, explained everything about Peninsular stoves and ranges that one would like to know, and left the visitors convinced that the high oven range was the best that they could purchase. Mr. McDonald of the Michigan Wire Company explained all about wire and did himself proud by the original manner in which he handled the interested fence-questioners. Both men met a large number of people and made many friends and were pleased by the friendly reception during the opening. They lent great assistance to the management in helping make the visitors feel at home.

The opening was considered a grand success and Mr. Allen desires thank the public for the words of praise and general appreciation shown by the vast attendance. Four gross of souvenirs were distributed during the afternoon and evening, consisting of safety razors four sifters, pencils, etc. The first customer at the new store was Earl Harrington, a young lad. His purchase was one and a half pounds of number 8 common nails, 5 cents. The sales ticket was placed on the front show case in a frame, where all might see it.

The presence of nearly 1000 visitors at the store Saturday proves that the thorough write-up in the Courier last week was more appreciated before the opening than it would have been following it. The public read what they would see and the opening proved that the description was accurate, un-exaggerated and given in perfect detail. The store description was news given when it was news and the opening day program and demonstration is given when it has been fulfilled in every detail. Many people live on facts of the past, while up-to-date twentieth century people live on the hopes of the future, and want the happenings of the day depicted when they are fresh, not when they are events of the past.

The accompanying views of the store will be greeted by all our readers as a souvenir of this beautiful business house. The store will be kept in this same condition of neatness and completeness by the management and with the proper support of the community cannot help but be a pride to the city and residents of the county. A complete stock and pleasing displays will always greet the purchaser who visits the store. Competent clerks have been engaged to care for the trade and perfect service is assured the purchasing public. Boost, and Charlevoix will have more big enterprises in a comparatively short time.

The Blanchard Hardware Co. has had a long career in the business world and dates back to 1883. In that year L. D.
Bartholomew began handling agricultural implements and machinery and about a year later erected the building just vacated by the present company.
At this time Mr. Bartholomew expanded his scope of business by installing a complete stock of hardware. After continuing this business two years he sold a half interest in the establishment to Forrest S. Blanchard, whom up to this time had been clerking for Mr. Bartholomew.

They conducted the business under the firm name of L. D. Bartholomew and Company until January 25, 1914, when Mr. Blanchard took over his partner's interest. At this time Mr. Bartholomew retired from all business activities and departed this life Wednesday, January 23, 1913, at Corpus Christi, Texas.

Mr. Blanchard conducted the hardware business until his death which occurred Thursday, October 15, 1914.
The business was then carried on by Mr. Blanchard's sister, Mrs. L. D.
Bartholomew, and her son, F. L. Bartholomew.
During the past year a reorganization took place and at present a stock company owns and will operate the business under the name of the Blanchard Hardware Company, Inc.
Incorporated under laws of Michigan, this company is a $15,000 organization with all paid-up, non-assessable, par value stock at $100 per share.

The officers are: President, Mrs. L.
D. Bartholomew; vice-president, Forrest
S. Blanchard; secretary and treasurer,
H. K. Allen. At a recent meeting of the board of directors, Mr. Allen was elected general manager and will conduct the business affairs for the company.

MIDGETS WON

Look Hard Fought Battle from Central Lake Saturday.

In a foul throwing contest the Charlevoix Midgets took a hard fought battle from Central Lake last Saturday by 15-13 counts. The Charlevoix boys were hampered by the small playing field but even against this they gave a good account of themselves.
Miles, Saunders, Murray, Jacobs, Halverson and Cram made the trip.

The Midgets have won six hard games this season, two with Petoskey, one with Central Lake and three with local organizations and are claiming the 100 pound championship of northern Michigan. Central Lake plays here Saturday.

NEW UNIFORMS A CERTAINTY

Local Basketball Team To Be Garbed in Proper Manner.

Benefit Supper Held Friday Night a Great Success—Committee Worked Hard.

Basketball enthusiasm reached heights unknown in local annals on last Friday evening, when Charlevoix's loyal fans showed their appreciation of the work the local quintette has done this season by crowding the Masonic Temple banquet hall to overflowing and subsequently giving a substantial lift to financing a little proposition whereby the team will be fitted out with new suits and sweaters before the curtain falls at the end of the season.

From 5:30 to 7 o'clock the march of hungry Charlevoixites to the Temple was a continuous stream, until 140 had signed up at the supper register, and the benignant smile of General Manager Glassford had reached proportions hitherto unknown, for the undertaking had been one big, grand success. The report of the treasurer showed a balance of $36 after a few minor expenses were settled. This start will warrant the purchase of the uniforms and sweaters, as the committee already have convictions that the rest of the money is forthcoming.

The benefit supper was wholly original with and managed by a committee of several of the more interested fans, who have been a great factor in the success of the local basketball team for the two past seasons. Early in the winter these began boosting for new uniforms and sweaters, but the time never seemed ripe for proposing the project until this week, when the response on the part of the citizens was, even more than was anticipated.

Besides those who so willingly provided the good things to eat, and Mr.
and Mrs. Saunders, Mrs. Weaver, Mrs.
Glassford, Mr. and Mrs. Powers, Mr.
Livingston, Superintendent Craig and the high school students, who gave their supervision and time to the arrangements and the serving of the banquet, there is one person deserving considerable praise and the laurel for his connection with the supper. That person is Frank Glassford, loyal fan and booster of the Charlevoix quintet, who has been the big spoke in the wheel from the first and to whom we give the greater praise for the entire success of Charlevoix's first basketball benefit.

Following the supper hour the tables were cleared away and for the balance of the evening everybody enjoyed dancing to the strains of music furnished by Mr. Durance and Miss Johnson. Practically all those who attended the supper remained for the greater part of the evening, either entering into the festivities or watching from the side lines.

At 10:30 the orchestra was forced to retire, but nothing put a halt on the affair until twelve bells, as the several musicians in the hall responded willingly to the call of the dancers. During the evening a light lunch was served, which materially swelled the coffers of the benefit treasury. Everyone pronounced the entire affair one of the most enjoyable social events of the season.

OCCUPY NEW QUARTERS

McCann's Bakery Sells to Move Into Recently Vacated Hardware Store.

About the first of April will see McCann's Bakery nicely settled in the recently vacated store building formerly occupied by the Blanchard Hardware Company.

Before occupancy the store will be repainted and remodeled to a considerable extent. Mr. McCann states that before occupying the new store he will install a new steam oven, electric moulding machine and absolutely up-to-date sanitary machinery to be utilized in the manufacture of baked goods.

The new location will give ample room for the installation of modern machinery and a splendid sales room with plenty of window room for displaying baked goods. Charlevoix has always been in need of a well located bakery, and in making this move, Mr.
McCann deserves the support of the entire community.

Here's Speedy Relief from Kidney Troubles

"Foley Kidney Pills have done me a heap of good." A. T. Bartlett, Brookton, Mass.

Some days it seems as if you can no longer bear the pain and misery you suffer from kidney and bladder trouble.

The ache across your back grows worse with every move you make, and with every step you take. It not only robs you of all your strength and energy, but it affects the other important organs of the body as well. Nervousness, headache, disordered stomach, liver trouble, bad eyesight, are only some of the conditions that follow kidney trouble.

Foley Kidney Pills help the sick weak kidneys to regain their normal healthy state and activity. When they are again able to do their work effectively, your system is no longer choked and blocked with poisonous waste matter. Your symptoms clear up, your weakness, pain, misery and weakness go away.

Foley Kidney Pills can do you also a heap of good.

School Commissioner's Notes

Monday, March 6th, is the beginning of "Tuberculosis Week" for the schools of Michigan. Every teacher who did not receive one of the state outlines for the instruction of her pupils this week may get one by applying at this office. Every physiology class should be taught these five lessons even if the instruction is delayed.

The commissioner put in a very profitable and enjoyable week in Detroit. The N. E. A. was splendid, but the victory of practice over theory was later so completely demonstrated that it was worth all the rest of the meeting put together. It was a pleasure to spend three hours in the W. S. Perry School at Aon Arbor. Words cannot do justice to the complete mastery of teachers over their pupils, and of pupils over their lessons. By thought and by thought applied, which is system, every teacher can solve every problem that confronts her. Every evil which the human mind can analyze it can also conquer. This school completely demonstrated the mastery of the human mind.

Chilborn County, Tennessee, has 102 rural schools. The first year the standard school idea was introduced. Fifty-two schools worked for and received their "Standard School" plates. The next year all the rest received them, and a number received "Superior School" plates. Think of it. Why, we've just got to get there.

The commissioner was invited to a party last week, a real live surprise party. The ladies of the Deer Lake Grange Aid planned it. The parents and school and teacher, Miss Johnson. They brought with them a sack of candy for each boy and girl, a flour sack full of popcorn, and scores of apples. There were songs and speeches and speeches and songs. Then at the close, Terry Barber revised the grange yell for school purposes and we all yelled:

"Good, better, best! never let her rest, 'Till our school is 'Standard.'"

Better than the rest!

1916 digests and school laws sent out this week.

The Rag Doll Junior Seed Corn Tester explained in leaflets and sent to all schools that are desirous of the same. So little corn on hand this year and so much may be wasted in the planting. Too much poor seed can be discovered in the testing.

Teachers whose certificates are not on file in this office are not qualified in this county and cannot legally draw public money. Teachers whose institute fee is not paid should know that their certificates are not on file.

The spring promotion tests for Charlevoix County will be in the hands of the teachers for April 27-28. They will be based on the course of study, and boys and girls will do well to work hard to make a good record for themselves and their school.

THE present tendency toward high prices prevailing in so many kinds of household goods and articles of clothing must be a tremendous temptation to work in all kinds of shoddy and poor material. No matter how high prices of raw material may go you can always get goods for the same old price. Leather may double in cost, but you can still buy a shoe for a dollar—if you want it.

One sure way to avoid cheats is to buy advertised goods just as far as possible. Cheap substitutes are not advertised—at least not by merchants doing business in their own neighborhood. The long distance mail order man may sell them, as the comeback is too difficult. But a store so located that poor goods can be taken back easily isn't going to say much about them in public.

The only goods that it pays to push are those made so solidly that they will give satisfaction and induce the buyer to return and buy more. That is the kind you read about in newspaper advertising.

WHEN the Creator had made all the good things he made the rattlesnakes and poisonous insects and when He had finished these He still had some scraps left that were too bad for the scorpion, hyena or skunk, so He put them all together, covered them with jealousy and suspicion, marked them with a yellow streak and called this being a Knocker.

The product was so bad that He had to make something to counteract it. He took a sunbeam and put it in the heart of a child and the brain of a man. These He wrapped in civic pride and brotherly love and gave them a mask of velvet and a grasp of steel. He made this being a lover of manly sports and a believer in justice and equality and called him a Rooster.

If there is one thing more than another that betrays a man's littleness or lack of raising, that thing is to give utterance to blood-curdling oaths on the streets regardless of who may be in hearing. Such performances strengthen the belief in the Darwinian theory without any great advancement from the point of starting.

HAPPY is the man who can satisfy his political aspirations by becoming a no-ary public.

Chicago weather forecast for June: Somewhat Rooseveltian.

DUDLEY LARNIGAN, district attorney of New York, was a man who would never be suspected of hysterical fear. His word was good. When he said a thing it was taken for granted that he knew exactly what he was talking about and that he had the facts to back up his statements. And yet he was at this time almost the laughingstock of the city that had swept him into office at the last election by an unprecedented majority. The newspapers, while they did not actually attack him, made fun of him. His own friends looked at him askance. Even his own son, Bruce Larnigan, an impudent and voluble assistant in the district attorney's office, shared the prevailing opinion, at least to a certain extent. Father and son were talking.

"I've no doubt that there's a good deal of graft. We all know there is, in fact," said Bruce. "It's not so very long since I was admitted to the bar, and, of course, I haven't been in this office long, but I've seen a few things. Still, to say that there is a syndicate made up of respectable men, big business men, that practically makes a business of crime—I think you went pretty far, dad."

Dudley Larnigan sighed. He wasn't at all angry. He looked at his son patiently and a little wearily.

"You think I went pretty far," he said. "Half the city thinks I'm in some, I believe. And yet I shall prove, if I live, every charge I have made. I shall prove that the most powerful organization in this country has ever seen has its center right here in New York—an organization founded on the determination to secure unfair advantages for its members. I shall prove that this organization will not stop and has not stopped at murder."

Bruce laughed uncomfortably.

"Can't you tell me more, then?" he asked. "Why, there must be men in this organization that I know—men who are supposed to be respectable?"

"Supposed to be respectable?" said his father bitterly. "Why, they're the leading men of the city of the whole country. They are business men who are the leaders of our greatest industries. They control the vastness of the country as it is, but they want to get everything into their own hands. They want to stifle all competition. They are not content with the fair, legitimate profit. They want to get graft in every line and so double their profits. If they are not checked they will get a strangle hold on the nation. They will control elections every where they will name one of themselves as president and this country will cease to be a republic."

Bruce hesitated to answer. He saw the wild light in his father's eyes. He knew his father better than the men outside who laughed at him, who had jeered the eyes that had started all the trouble. Never had Dudley Larnigan seemed to him so old and so grim. He failed to make good his statement, any promise. And this to believe was no hard matter. For more truth than Bruce could muster. He was about to say something of the sort when there was an interruption.

There was a knock at the door, and an official appeared, bearing a parcel, which he handed to the district attorney.

"This came by special messenger, sir," he said. "The boy said there was no answer, and he wouldn't say where it came from."

Bruce took the package and took out his pocketknife, unknifing to cut the string, but his father checked him.

"Let me see that a moment," he said. He studied the writing of the address carefully, and then, with a gesture of dislike and distrust, he shrugged his shoulders. "I thought so," he said. "It's from them."

Bruce laughed aloud.

"What do you mean, dad?" he asked.

"Are you afraid they're sending you a bomb?"

"No, I don't think so," said Larnigan quite seriously and heedless of his son's jesting tone. "I don't believe the time has come for that yet. Open it, Bruce."

He might as well see what's in it."

Bruce cut the strings, tore off the papers, and then, as the contents of the package were revealed, he started back, filled for the moment with horror. It was a yellow, grinning skull that he revealed, and on its forehead some words were written.

"I shall enforce the law."

"Let the liquor trust alone," Bruce read. "We will phone for your answer."

Dudley Larnigan looked at him.

"You see, Bruce," he said, "there are some who take this business more seriously than you do."

"But why—this is a joke—a silly, senseless, practical joke!" exclaimed Bruce. "Surely they wouldn't try seriously to frighten you with a stogy old trick like this?"

"Whether they tried seriously or not, they succeeded," said his father, "for I am certainly frightened, Bruce."

Bruce stared at him incredulously.

"You are frightened—by this?" said Bruce, looking from his father to the grinning skull.

"Dad, you need a rest. Your nerves are upset. You've been overworking. You'd better take a vacation and get back into shape."

Dudley Larnigan shook his head sadly.

"I shall take no vacation until I have beaten the grafters or until they have beaten me," he said. "I have been waiting for the time to come, Bruce, when I could take you into my confidence regarding this. I see that nothing I can say will convince you that this is a real and deadly danger that I face. But the proof will come soon enough. It will be unmistakable when it does come. I know that I can count on you, my boy—that if they succeed in getting me out of the way they will still have to reckon with you."

In spite of himself Bruce was beginning to be affected. His father was so serious, was so evidently in deadly fear, that Bruce could not help being moved. It was impossible for him to believe when he tried to think things out that there was any basis for his father's fear, but it was equally impossible for him to believe that a man like Dudley Larnigan would give way to panic without the very greatest reasons.

"You needn't wait, Bruce," said his father finally. "I have a good deal of work to do, and I can't need you."

Bruce got up and moved hesitatingly toward the door. Just then the telephone on his father's desk rang out sharply. Dudley Larnigan before he answered, polioed to another instrument, and Bruce, understanding, lifted its receiver to listen to the conversation.

A strange voice, evidently disguised, came thickly to his ear:

"Hello! Hello! Is this District Attorney Larnigan?"

"Yes."

"Larnigan, you know who is speaking. If you are in doubt look at the skull we sent you."

"I am looking at it."

"Be warned in time. That skull is the symbol of the uncertainty of life. We advise you to admire any strong and brave enemy. But do not mistake foolishness for bravery. You can never beat on, and you will sacrifice yourself if you try. We do not offer you money. Leave us alone—or you will suffer."

"I shall do my duty. You have had before the only answer I shall ever give you. I am sworn to uphold and enforce the law. I shall do as at what ever risk to myself."

"Remember, this is the last chance you will have to save yourself. We hear you up it will; we do not want to be obliged to move against you, but if you do not yield your blood be on your own head."

"I shall enforce the law. Sooner or later you will pay the penalty for all your crimes."

And on the word Dudley Larnigan, his forehead beaded with heavy drops of perspiration, slammed the receiver into the hook. He rose and stared at Bruce.

"Now do you believe?" he said.

"You heard what I said. I think I have one chance in a million to escape them. I am a marked man. It is impossible for me to guard myself effectively. Yet I shall go on."

"You said you were afraid," said Bruce.

"And so I am. I live in deadly fear. But, no matter how much I fear them, I fear my own conscience more. They can never punish me, no matter what they do, as would my own conscience if I betrayed my trust."

For the moment Bruce managed to shake off the depression that his father's mood and all the other circumstances had induced.

"They're trying to frighten you," he said. "Good lord, this is the twentieth century! They're trying to frighten you with old tricks. They'd over dare actually to use violence."

"We shall see," said his father. "At least I shall do my duty, no matter what the outcome may be, as long as I am spirited. And I have faith enough in you, my son, to believe that if the men who are opposed to me give the last proof of the truth of my words you will take up that duty and make it your own."

Bruce shook his head sadly as he went out. It seemed to him that he had hit upon the truth—that his father was breaking down from overwork and that he was talking seriously a melodramatic and absurd campaign of blackmail.

"No doubt attempts are being made to dissuade him from doing his duty," said Bruce to himself. "But he is allowing himself to be upset by threats that would only have amused him a few years ago. Poor old dad!"

Bruce himself had a pleasant errand. His steps took him to the home of Roger Maxwell, whose vast interests in the field of insurance had caused him to be known commonly as the head of what was called the insurance trust. But it was not the great thing that Bruce went to see. He seemed to be well known at the house. The servant who answered his ring smiled as she took his hat and stick.

"Miss Dorothy's in the library, sir," she said. "She is expecting you, Mr. Bruce."

Dorothy Maxwell as Bruce entered the room was standing near a window. As she heard his step she turned, with a glad little cry, and came straight to him.

"Bruce," she said, "I'm so glad! You weren't sure that you could come. He took her in his arms and kissed her."

"I usually manage to come, though, don't I?" he said, with a laugh. "Still, it did look doubtful. Dad, you know."

He stopped, and she frowned a little.

"Whatever is the matter with your father, Bruce, dear?" she said. "Father says he must have gone suddenly and to make such a speech; that he's out of control at the solid business men in New York by the wild statements he made. I think—I'm afraid he isn't quite as pleased as he was at the idea of our—at our engagement."

"It's got nothing to do with us," declared Bruce fiercely. "I'm not responsible for my father's actions. I think myself he's wrong about this; that he's been excited by things that have happened. But I can't let your father criticize him to me."

"Of course not," she said soothingly. "And he won't. I'm sure. And, anyhow, Bruce, dear, we're not going to quarrel, you and I, even if it turns out that our fathers do."

Bruce was about to reply when he looked over Dorothy's shoulder and saw two men in the next room. One was her father, Roger Maxwell; the other was Stamford Stone. And Stone, who did not know that Bruce could see him, was regarding them with such a malignant expression in his usually handsome eyes that Bruce was startled. Stone at this time was reckoned the most powerful man in the great financial world of New York. He was connected in a hundred great enterprises. Even the Sunday newspapers did not pretend to estimate the size of his vast fortune.

But while Bruce was wondering, was on the very point of saying something to Dorothy, Stamford Stone came into the room and the two other men came into the library. Both greeted him in the most friendly fashion. Bruce shook Dorothy's hand, his eyes following her.

"I hear that you congratulated your young man," said Stone, and Dorothy blushed prettily. "By the way, your father, given his friends—and I want you to remember that I'm one of the best of them—a good deal of my late lately. And you persuade him to take a rest. He ought to go some where and play golf for a week or two get rid of the strain and worry of his office."

"I suggested something of that sort to him today," said Bruce. "But it's always been very hard for my mother and myself to persuade him to spare himself in any way. His work is as hard as if he hadn't a cent in the world, and, as a matter of fact, he's a fairly rich man."

"That's always the way—always the way," said Stone. "Well, do the best you can to persuade him, my boy. He needs the rest."

"I think so, too," said Maxwell.

"Dorothy, suppose you take Bruce somewhere else. Stone and I have some business to talk over, and we'll need the papers I have in my desk here to our talk."

Bruce and Dorothy were not at all loath to go. They smiled at one another as they went, and neither turned to see the look that Stamford Stone sent after them, a look that might have aroused Bruce's fear and wonder had he seen it, knowing what he did of Stone's power.

Meauville District Attorney Larnigan had stayed at his office long enough to finish some important work and then had taken his place in his automobile.

"Drive me around the long way home, Jack," he said to his chauffeur. "The air is so beautiful today that I think it will rest me just to ride around. Go up into the country along the river and don't turn back until it's time to get me home for dinner."

"Yes, sir," said the chauffeur.

Bruce got home long before his father's return. In spite of his feeling concerning his father's fears, Bruce was worried. As for his mother, she had always opposed her husband's entry into public life, and she was worried every time he was a few minutes late in getting home.

Bruce tried to calm his increasing nervousness, but he himself was worried, and as it grew dark he stood in the hall, looking for the rays from the hall light on the car that would herald his father's coming. At last he saw them, far down the drive that led to the house. His heart leaped lightly, and he went back to call his mother.

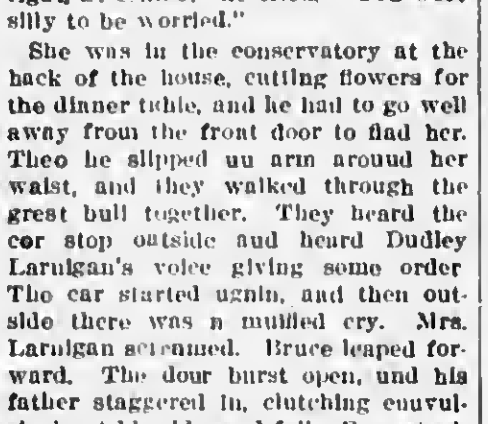

"Here he comes, mother. It's all right, at least," he cried. "You were silly to be worried."

She was in the conservatory at the back of the house, cutting flowers for the dinner table, and he had to go well away from the front door to find her. Then he slipped up arm around her waist, and they walked through the great hall together. They heard the car stop outside and heard Dudley Larnigan's voice giving some order. The car started again, and then outside there was a muffled cry. Mrs. Larnigan screamed. Bruce leaped forward. The door burst open, and his father staggered in, clutching convulsively at his side, and fell. Bruce took one look. He saw the blood that stained the floor, and then, as his mother, transformed by the need of action and gaining control of herself, went to work to stanch the flow of blood, Bruce moved for the telephone. He gave a number and waited impatiently for the answer.

"Hello, hello!" he cried at last. "Dr. Morgan? Hurry over here, doctor. Bruce Larnigan talking. My father's been badly hurt. It's very serious. I'm afraid. Yes, bring your instruments."

Then he helped his mother to do what little there was to be done before the doctor's arrival. Together they got the wounded man on a couch and made him as comfortable as they could. He had fainted and was no longer conscious. His breathing was heavy, and a growling, spreading grayness in his cheeks told Bruce, little as he was used to such scenes, that there was little hope, if any.

Then Bruce telephoned to the police. But he could give no clue—he had not taken the time to try to find the assassin. But then, as he heard the doctor's car chugging up outside, Bruce went to the door and lunged it open. Placed to the door sill was a note written on rough paper in an unfamiliar hand.

"Congratulations of the fifteen!"

"That was all. But it was enough. Bruce shuddered with terror and remorse as he realized that his father had been right—that he had been marked for death by an implacable organization, which had struck him down at last on his own doorstep. Then the doctor came. At the sight of Larnigan he looked grave. Gently he examined the wound.

"I'm sorry," he said, his voice showing his emotion. "There is nothing I can do except perhaps to bring him to before—before he—he goes."

Bruce, speechless, nodded, and the doctor bent down and used a hypodermic.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

(Conducted by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.)

LOGICAL STEPS.

Edith Smith Dairs, world's and national W. C. T. U. superintendent of scientific temperance instruction in public schools and colleges, says:

"The truth concerning temperance has been in a deep well for generations and there have been many logical steps that we have been forced to take in order to reach the water of truth. The first step is the scientific investigation which has shown the poisonous nature of alcohol."

The second step demonstrates the effect of the poison upon various organs of the body. The third step makes clear the fact that alcohol has special affinity for the brain and therefore affects the moral character of man."

The fourth step has proved that a drug that affects the organs of the body and injures moral character must render less efficient the user of it, and, therefore, its use becomes an economic problem. The fifth step places this experimental truth, with all its resultant conclusions in a form whereby the largest number of people may be instructed, that is, in text books containing scientific facts concerning alcohol. The sixth step is the placing of the facts in the school curriculum and making the text books and the scientific charts a part of public temperance education. The public school is the most democratic institution in the world and is more than that; it is, as Dr. Newell D. Hill says, the machine which takes in all kinds of material and grinds it out made over into good American citizens. In this fact we see the possibility of our reaching the final step to our goal."

RESENTS LIQUOR DOMINATION. The Milk Wagon Drivers' union of Chicago is dry, and refused to permit one of its banners to be carried in the so-called "personal liberty" demonstration of November 7. "None of our men were in that parade," said the secretary of the union, "and I don't believe there would have been very many union men there at all, outside of the beer keg drivers and other loaves of the liquor business, if they had been driven to march. I saw a letter myself sent to a member of the Joe Drivers' union threatening the loss of his job if he didn't appear in the parade. That's a nice brand of personal liberty!"

Within the ranks of union labor there is growing up a fighting sentiment against the domination of the liquor interests, and incidents like this, and others which might be cited, are giving impetus to the movement.

FOR THE GOOD OF THE GAME. A license was granted for the sale of liquor on Chicago's new automobile speedway, but the management decided to keep it dry. A member of the committee thus explains the action: "For the good of the automobile racing game and for the uplifting of the sport here and everywhere we have decided to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors on the grounds. Baseball would never be what it is today if it had not been for the prohibiting of intoxicants on the grounds, and we want to make a clean and pleasing start at our new speedway. Beer should not be allowed on the grounds, leave alone sold inside the park, and this rule which prohibits the sale will stand as the speedway races continue—and that will be for years and years."

TEACHERS TOTAL ABSTAINERS. The superintendent of schools of Ithaca, N. Y., said the following incident at a W. C. T. U. meeting: When a lady eight years old recited a temperance selection and the teacher induced him to sign the pledge. After many years he went back to his boyhood home intending to tell the teacher what that pledge had meant to him. He found her resting in an unkept country cemetery, but on his knees before God he told her what had been the saving influence of his life. "I have never hired as a teacher anyone who was not a total abstainer, neither will I sign a paper of recommendation for a teacher who is not a total abstainer," declared the superintendent.

WATCH RAILROAD EMPLOYEES. Armed with cameras, detectives of a certain eastern railroad, are taking photographs of every employee they see in the act of taking a social drink. Since September 1 several employees have been called into headquarters and discharged. One man, who asked for a reason, was shown a photo of himself in the act of draining a whiskey bottle while standing in a box car.

WETTEST CITY IN WET STATES. The city of Butte, Mont., is stigmatized as the wettest city in the wettest state. It is interesting to note that recently forty people of Butte were indicted by a grand jury on the charge of

Over and Over Again

Over and over again,
No matter which way I turn,
I always find in the book of life
Some lesson I have to learn.
I must take my turn at the mill;
I must grind out the golden grain;
I must work at my task with a resolute will
Over and over again.

We cannot measure the need
Of even the tiniest flower,
Nor check the flow of the golden sands
That run through a single hour.
But the morning dew must fall,
And the sun and the summer rain
Must do their part and perform it all
Over and over again.

Over and over again
The brook through the meadow flows,
And over and over again
The ponderous mill wheel goes.
Once doing will not suffice,
Though doing be not in vain,
And a blessing, falling us once or twice,
May come if we try again.

The path that has once been trod
Is never so rough for the feet,
And the lesson we once have learned
Is never so hard to repeat.
Though sorrowful tears must fall,
And the heart to its depths be riven
With storm and tempest, we need them all
To render us fit for heaven.

Ring Weighed a Pound
One of the largest rings is the one which was presented to President Franklin Pierce in 1852 by some citizens of San Francisco. It weighed one pound. The hoop of the ring is cut into squares, on each of which was shown some scene in the history of California. The bezel, bearing the seal, has engraved upon it the arms of the state of California, surmounted by the stars and stripes of the United States and the name of Franklin Pierce. This ring was valued at $2,000.—Washington Post.

Rubbing Out a Turner.

On New Bond street, in London, some years ago a Turner worth $60,000 was destroyed by a charwoman. The Turner was a water color drawing, and a painting in oils hung beside it. The owner pointed to the painting and said:
"That picture is dusty. Rub a damp cloth over it."
But the charwoman by mistake rubbed her damp cloth over the water color, turning it into a blot, a smudge, and thus one of the finest Turners disappeared from the world.

Fix Up That Run-Out Lawn.

"Get busy now," is the advice of the department of agriculture to homeowners who wish to have attractive lawns around their houses. When snow is melting and the ground freezing at night and thawing in the day the conditions are especially good for the application of commercial fertilizer.

Before freezing weather is entirely over, fresh grass seed should be sown, for it must be remembered that only by repeated applications of grass seed can a good lawn be produced. The ordinary seeding of grass on a new lawn is one pound of seed to every 400 square feet—that is, to a piece twenty feet square. For re-seeding a lawn one-tenth to one-half of this amount should be used, according to the condition of the lawn at the time. For the northern part of the United States, Kentucky blue grass and redtop are the standard varieties.

What Geo. Klooster & Son of Ellsworth

have to say about cream separators this week—

Ninety-eighty per cent of the world's creameries use De Laval's exclusively

CREAMERYMEN have better opportunities than other separator users to see which separators are most efficient and durable. That is why they select De Laval's. More De Laval's are in use on farms than all other makes combined. Time and experience have proved to a vast majority of farmers that no other separator gives as good service as the De Laval.

Each year in the United States and Canada alone, some 40,000 farmers discard inferior separators and replace them with De Laval's. They learn from experience that the so-called cheap separators are wasteful and costly at any price. They would have saved money if they had bought a De Laval in the first place.

If you will bear these facts in mind in selecting a separator, you will realize that the wisest course is to buy a De Laval.

We will be glad to bring a De Laval out to your farm and let you try it out and see for yourself that it does offer you the greatest value for your money. We are willing to prove every claim we make for the De Laval. Just phone us or send a post card and we will see that you get an opportunity to try a De Laval.

Sooner or later you will

Suffrage Notes

Women in Iowa have every reason to expect a suffrage victory in the election to be held June 5th in that state. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National Suffrage Association, was welcomed back to Iowa on her recent visit there by Governor Clarke, who introduced her to an enthusiastic audience in Des Moines. Governor Clarke spoke of the rapid change in sentiment in favor of suffrage and predicted victory at the polls in June.

The school children of Polk county, Iowa, were asked to join in a prize essay contest on "Why Mother Should Vote." The arguments of the children clearly and forcibly met and answered the old-time objections, and favorable evidence drawn from their own experience was abundant and convincing.

The feeling is general in Kansas that the women have exercised their right of franchise without in any way neglecting their homes.—S. M. Browster, Attorney-General of Kansas.

Arthur Brisbane of the New York Evening Journal, who enjoys the distinction of being the highest salaried editorial writer in the world, recently spoke in Des Moines, Iowa, on the suffrage question. He said: "Votes for women will add to the executive thinking machinery of the nation the great influence of the better and nobler half of the population. Unfortunately, many of the poorer and more unfortunate men stupidly and blindly oppose woman suffrage when it would in reality be their best friend—just as they opposed Arkwright when he offered them the spinning jenny; just as they opposed the steam engine and other devices which worked for their ultimate good. Woman suffrage, in spite of the opposition of poor and ignorant and conceited men, will do for them that which they cannot do for themselves."

When we moved here there were but four families on the peninsula, our nearest neighbors being a French family by the name of Benway, who lived on the farm now owned and occupied by S. W. Miller. The lake known as Benway Lake was named in honor of this family. There are at least two of them, I believe, who live in this country at the present time, Wm. Benway, a carpenter, and Mrs. Sharrow of Charlevoix.

This family could scarcely speak any English at that time and considerable difficulty was experienced by the writer of this story and them in our efforts to make each other understand what the other said. But we finally succeeded by their teaching us French and we teaching them English.

At that time fences were unknown here and cattle were allowed to roam at will. Our difficulties were not so great keeping the cattle out as they were in getting them back home after they went away. On several occasions we lost our bearings in the woods while searching for the cattle and where our neighbors' fields are now we were wandering around vainly searching for our home. It is not a very comfortable sensation to know that one is lost in the woods. I know from experience.

We had another neighbor added to our settlement the next fall after we came here in the person of Wm. Carson, a genuine Irishman, who took up an 80 on the same section with my father. Many were the good laughs we had at his expense on account of his misconception of things.

On one occasion he came to our place in a great state of excitement, claiming he had seen a fox up a tree and that it had crawled out on a limb and barked at him. What he saw I have little idea of, but I venture it was something else than a fox. He was a typical Irishman, of course an Orangeman, and when he would get overjoyed with alcohol and water mixed he would make the woods ring with the loud announcement that he was King William's horse that crossed the Boyne water.

Settlers came in faster each year, until the government land was all entered. Then, in the year 1882, arrangements were made to have a school started. Accordingly, a log schoolhouse was built on the site of our present fine schoolhouse, but was very different from it in many respects. Anyway, it was the first term of school at least. I remember the first day I attended, for it was my very first school day in my life. The log schoolhouse was not finished, the cracks between the logs were not chinked or plastered and the seats and desks were made by placing some blocks of wood on end on the floor and putting some rough boards on top of them, and then, to add to our misery, some men were clearing up and burning off around the schoolhouse. The smoke blew in through the cracks and hurt our eyes. I believe I cried more that day than I have ever since. After a few days the smoke cleared away, and many a pleasant and profitable day was spent in that little old log schoolhouse on the hill.

24 1-2 MILES OF GOOD ROADS

Present System the Only One That Brings Results.

Estimated That at Least Seven Miles More Will Be Completed Within Year.

That the inauguration of the county road system in Charlevoix county is one of the best moves ever made there is no question. When one reads of the number of miles of good roads—roads that will last for years—that have been built during the past three years we cannot but recall the struggles gone through under the old system—just keeping the roads passable, not building anything in the line that would bring back state money. Townships raised hundreds of dollars each year and expended the greater portion of it moving from place to place "patching up." The money was gone in most instances before even the "patching up" was completed.

And then the people took a tumble to themselves and voted for the county road system, with the result that to-day we have 24 1/2 miles of state roads built and 3 1/2 miles graded ready for the top dressing. The total amount expended on road building, machinery, etc. in Charlevoix county under the county road system is $97,388.99. For this number of miles built we have received back from the state $23,798.64. The cost of building a mile of road in round figures was $3,745.73 per mile.

Of the number of miles built they are divided among the three commissioners as follows: Hammond, 10 1/2 miles; Lorch, 8 miles; and Hipp, 6 1/2 miles. The above cost per mile is reached by figuring 26 miles of completed road on account of the 3 1/2 miles of graded road.

Within the next year it is expected that at least from five to seven miles of roads will be built, thus placing Charlevoix county on the map as having the best roads of any county in Northern Michigan.

Pat was digging post holes around his home. He didn't want to, but his wife made him. A lady friend to his wife was passing. "Ah, Mr. Rafferty, you're digging out holes, are ye?" she remarked, pleasantly. "No, mum," said Pat, without looking up. "I'm diggin' out the dirt and lavin' the holes."

An Irishman inviolated home from the war, says the New York American, was asked by one of his relatives what struck him most about the battles he took part in. "What struck me most?" said Pat. "Sure, it was the large number of bullets flying around that didn't hit me."

In the southern part of Arkansas, where the natives take things easy, a man and his wife were sitting on their porch, when a funeral procession passed the house. The man was comfortable seated in a chair that was tilted back against the house, and was whittling a piece of wood. As the procession passed, he said, "I reckon old man Williams has got about the biggest funeral that's ever been held round here, Caroline." "A pretty good-sized one, is it, Bud?" queried the wife, making no effort to move. "Certainly is!" Bud answered. "I surely would like to see it," said the woman. "What a pity I ain't facin' that way!"

Little Annette was blessed with a mother and doting grandmother and it often puzzled her little brain to know just which one was her rightful guardian. One day in her first term at school the teacher found it necessary to correct Annette. "I am sorry, but I will have to send a letter to your mother because you have been so naughty," said the teacher. "Better send it to grandmuddie," said Annette. "Mother got married so young that she don't know much about bringing us up. Grandmuddie has raised a big family and says she knows best what we need."

Fire Destroyed Home of John Curtis Monday
During Storm.

The home and contents owned and occupied by John Curtis and family, on the Petoskey Road near the golf grounds was totally destroyed by fire during the heavy wind and snow storm Monday forenoon about nine o'clock.

Mr. Curtis and family were in the house, when a passerby, noticing the fire, ran to the house and notified them. Mr. Curtis opened the door leading upstairs, and found the entire second floor a mass of flames.

The members of the family were gotten out and cared for at neighboring homes. A greater part of the furniture on the first floor was saved, but above all went up in smoke. The loss of the house and contents will amount to over $2,500, with $300 insurance on the furniture and $1,200 on the house.

An insurance policy fully covering all your property costs but little, but when the fire comes it is an encouraging outlook if you were not insured. Be well protected at all times. See Myrtle Young & Son about it at once. Adv. 1011.

THEATRICAL

A rare four reel drama by Lois Weber is "False Colours." It is a skilled portrayal of type—the people who are ever sailing under false colours, though professing to be true to themselves. Lloyd Phillips, an actor in love with his wife, at her death abandons his child to the care of a grasping housekeeper and her husband, who for nineteen years appropriate the money sent by the exiled father for the support of his daughter. The daughter, driven by despair, runs away a few days before her father's return and in the end of the play achieves success by picking up the threads of her father's career. Interwoven in the drama is the silent love of the theatre maid for the actor. Her daughter, Florence, unhappily marries the son of Phillips's housekeeper and is urged on by her husband's people to play the part of Phillips's daughter. The lie is discovered after Phillips has become deeply interested in his spurious daughter. They are brought together by the death of the girl's mother who sends her daughter on a mission to deliver to Phillips the life long tokens of her memories of him. Mr. Phillips Smalley plays the leading role of Lloyd Phillips. With character and strength Mrs. Smalley is beautiful and sincere in the pathetic dual role of the theatre maid and her daughter. Adele Farrington, Courtenay Foote, Charles Marriott and Herbert Standing are in the cast in strong dramatic roles. At the Majestic, Friday, March 10.

CRAFTY WETS' NEW SCHEME

Petition to Reduce Prohibition Unit to Confuse Voters.

Would Vote by Towns and Townships—Will Veto Home Rule and Plead It is for Temperance.

"They are a crafty lot, these men whose highest ambition in life is to restore the rule of King Boozie to Michigan, whose hearts are sad at the sight of the workman going home on Saturday night sober and taking his whole pay with him; who find life dull without the grief of the beaten wife and the sobs of the neglected children of their customers to cheer them up and amuse them.

"For some time those wets have been in a quandary. County after county has gone dry. Concentrate as they might, they have seen city after city where the foreign vote might have saved them voted dry initially by the ballots of the surrounding county under the county option system, only to stay dry by choice after they had once tried it.

"So many counties have gone dry and so many cities forced at first to be dry have stayed dry because they found it was a good thing for them that the natural evolution has been the statewide prohibition constitutional amendment to be submitted next fall, an amendment that most of the regular folks believe and not a few of the saloon men fear will be carried.

"And the trouble of the wets has been that they did not see just how they were going to line up their forlorn adherents in the already dry territory to help bat back this impending avalanche of decency. The liquor adherents in the territory now wet have plenty of incentive to get out and fight the amendment, for its passage means that their flow of dirty money would stop and they might even have to go to work.

"But the liquor men of the dry territories have been able to see no very strong reason why they should spend their time and money that comes harder for them now than it did in the good old wet days when the best they could hope for in the event of the defeat of the amendment was to see other men get all the profits, leaving them only a chance to spend still more time and till more money in efforts to win back their own particular territories.

"But now these brilliant booze leaders in Detroit, whose facility for thinking up schemes to help the state saloon keepers win their battles has always been one of the marvels of the age, have come through with a scheme to make up-state chaps get in and bear their usual part of the load. Recently the Wayne wets submitted to the secretary of state for his approval a form of amendments to reduce the local option unit to cities and townships in place of counties.

"As soon as that amendment is prepared and the work of securing referendum petitions has got fairly under way we will hear the good old chorus of 'Home Rule' from the wets and all sorts of perverted arguments about the rights of cities and townships to settle the booze question for themselves. The argument will, of course, come from the same men who talked themselves blue in the face about the crime of allowing so small a unit as a county to settle the drink question for itself, but what does that matter?

"The all-absorbing fact is that the Detroit brewers have once more been able to think out a scheme to make the up-state wets pull their chestnuts out of the fire for them."

The above editorial from the Lansing Journal of recent date shows to what length the liquor forces of Michigan are going in their effort to defeat statewide prohibition. Not daring to fight it on its merits, the Wayne beneficiaries of this vicious business have devised this scheme of submitting at the same time a vote for a smaller unit. That is, instead of local option by counties, they now pretend to be in favor of local option by townships, villages and cities. They hope in this way to so confuse the issue as to defeat prohibition in the state, repeal local option by counties and sweep away practically all that has been accomplished. It is well to keep this in mind, that the only temperance proposition which will be submitted next November is statewide prohibition. All other so-called "home rule," "smaller unit" amendments, if they come up, are the work of the liquor forces.

LOCAL EXPERIMENT ASSOCIATION

Formed Monday Evening by Farmers in Vicinity of Ironton.

Idea of Movement to Make United Effort to Better Local Conditions.

Monday evening at the Grange Hall in Ironton the farmers of the vicinity organized a Local Experiment Association. This local association is merely a branch of the State Experiment Association and has for its purpose, the trying out of such new and improved seeds as are recommended by the state experiment station.

I. K. Maystead, extension worker from the Farm Crop Department of the Agricultural College, was present to explain the methods used at the college in discovering new and better varieties and improving old varieties of grain crops. He also helped in organizing the local association.

A local association may be formed wherever there are six or more persons in a community interested in improving their grain or other crops. Officers are elected, meetings held occasionally and a fee of fifty cents paid annually by the members. Most of the fee is used by the state secretary in advertising improved seed for sale by members of the association. Each member is entitled to small quantities of improved seed free to try out on his farm alongside of his own varieties. The idea of the whole movement is to discover what crops or varieties of crops are best adapted for each section of the state. Crops commonly selected for trial are oats, corn, beans, winter barley, Rye, soy beans, etc.

The Ironton association begins with a paid up membership of 25. William Sanderson was elected president and H. L. Barnum secretary-treasurer.

V. M. Shoemith, professor of farm crops at the Agricultural College, is state secretary. Any community interested in organizing an experiment association should communicate with the state secretary.

The Ladies of the St. Mary's church will serve an oyster supper on Friday evening, March 17, in the Odd Fellows' hall from 5:30 to 7 o'clock. Adv:1012

RESULTS OF THE CAUCUSES IN FIVE ADJOINING TOWNSHIPS

Norwood, Marion, Eveline and Charlevoix Electors Will Have Two Tickets to Choose From—Hayes Township Has But One Ticket in the Field.

Citizens not taking an active part in local politics, and those who have no desire to, are commenting on the evidence of dissatisfaction, or, perhaps, we might say, the longing to get into politics, displayed by residents of our neighboring townships. These are the only reasons why practically every township in the vicinity of Charlevoix will have two tickets to make their selections from at the April election. Ticket No. 1 and Ticket No. 2 seems to be the prevailing style nowadays. Townships that for years have been able to make their choice from one ticket have apparently deemed it necessary this year to put two tickets in the field.

With but one exception the attendance on caucus day was larger than usual, both factions mustering together their full fighting strength. In most cases but a part of the second ticket was filled, the fight being centered upon the heads of the ticket. Below we publish the result in five townships adjoining Charlevoix:

Miss Marjorie Hall became the wife of Victor C. Breece of Flint, Michigan, and Miss Beatrice Hall the wife of Darwin L. Sawtelle of Harrington, Delaware. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. W. E. Martin of the Trinity M. E. church.

Mr. and Mrs. Breece will make their home in Flint, where Mr. Breece is employed by the General Motors Company, and Mr. and Mrs. Sawtelle in Detroit, where he is employed by the Ford Motor Company. They have the hearty congratulations of their many Charlevoix friends.

How Flour is Made

Millers Association Offers Short Course in Milling to All School Children.

That every school child in Michigan may receive practical instruction in flour milling is the plan of the Michigan Millers Association, according to Stephen J. McDonald of Grand Rapids, who has the work in charge.

Demonstration charts and specially-prepared treatises on milling processes will be furnished free to all public and parochial schools, whether or not domestic science is taught.

The need of these instructions is apparent from the large number of requests for information received, and the short course furnished by the Millers' Association is the first of a series of educational activities to be promoted by this organization.

SATURDAY LAST GAME OF SEASON

Local Herks to Play Fast Lake City Basketball Team.

Traverse City Wins Northern Michigan Championship by Defeating Local Team.

In a game featured by some of the finest teamwork of the season and excellent basket throwing Charlevoix, fans saw the local quintet surpassed by the Olympic aggregation from Traverse City last Friday by a 13-point margin and carrying away with them the championship of Northern Michigan, which became local property a year ago by defeating the same quintet. The final count of Friday's joist was 38-25.

During the first half it looked like a repetition of last year's contest and it was practically settled thus when the first session closed with the Herks leading by a 16-14 tally. Traverse came back strong in the last half and by fast and excellent teamwork, along with Hanson at the foul line, managed to ring up another victory.

For the Herks, Vogt, Livingston and Durand did stellar work, while Hanson and Miller were the big performers for the visitors.

C. H. S. copped an easy victory from Bollaigh high in a preliminary contest the same night, 47-26. The local boys were in fine form and played good ball. Krulik, Felts and Hallett starred. Carter, who appeared in fast company for the first time, was a little nervous, but held up his end in a creditable manner. The Bellaire boys showed class at times, but were unable to cope with the locals' tactics.

Saturday night Lake City Independents will clash with the Herks in what will be the closing contest of the season. Lake City has coupled up with several of the southern state teams and has one of the best records in this locality. This is your last chance to yell yourself hoarse for the local Independent team. Don't forget the date.

Quick and satisfactory service is our motto. Benj. Brown, Ford Agent. Adv. 9tf.

W. C. T. U. HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

Former Officers Were Re-Elected for the Ensuing Year.

President Jennie Akon Presented With Substantial Birthday Gift—The Program.

The W. C. T. U. met March 10th for its annual meeting and election of officers at the home of Mrs. W. J. Weikel on Bridge street. Mrs. C. E. Taggart had charge of the devotional exercises. Special guidance was asked for in the work before us in the earnest prayer offered by Mrs. Taggart. "We All Belong" was then sung from the song cards.

After the reading of the minutes by the secretary it was moved and carried that the temperance column in the Courier be continued for this campaign year.

Just a word on the side to all who read these lines: Look up the temperance column each week in the Courier and not only read it, but call attention to it and pass it on to others to read. These items are dependable and worth while.

It was decided to observe Mary T. Lathrop Day and make it a big day. Arrangements for it were put into the hands of a committee.

It was decided to help in a small but substantial way the Curtis family, who were recently burned out.

The special service for new members was carried out, the president pinning on the white ribbon badge.

The election resulted in the choosing of the old officers, as follows: President, Mrs. Jennie Akon; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Julia Lewis; recording secretary, Mrs. Sarah M. Wilkinson; treasurer, Mrs. Grace Cooper. The vice-presidents and superintendents of the departments will be named later.

A short program followed: Solo, Miss Audrey Correll; readings, Mrs. Metcalf and Mrs. Geiken; instrumental duet, Wilma Stevenson and Margaret Saunders. Adjourned for the potluck supper and social time and celebrating of the birthday of Mrs. Akon, president of the local union. During the supper Miss Himes in a nice little speech presented to Mrs. Akon in behalf of the union a birthday reminder—five silver dollars on a plate covered with a napkin.

Mrs. P. J. Howard, district superintendent, though not present, had a good share in the gift. Mrs. Akon thanked the donors, and those present gave the Chautauqua salute.

Thus ended another Red Letter Day in the annals of the Charlevoix Women's Christian Temperance Union, which we believe was enjoyed by all as well as by Mrs. Weikel, the hostess.

NO LIQUOR ADVERTISING

Leading Papers in Country Refuse to Print Any Liquor Advertising.

A total of 840 American daily newspapers published in the English language decline liquor advertising, according to an investigation conducted during the latter part of 1915. Since this time the number has been greatly increased, the Detroit Evening News, Michigan's great daily, being one of the latest added to the list.

The total circulation of the "abstaining" newspapers will over-reach 5,664,888. The above figures do not include the weekly papers, which would be far greater in number.

Says Counties Must Pay For Primary Ballots

Auditor General Fuller Settles Much-Disputed Question—More Bugging Legislation.

Who is going to pay for printing the ballots for the coming primary for national committeemen is a question being asked at Lansing.

The primary law says that the state shall pay for the ballots. Auditor General Fuller, whose official approval for the bill is needed, says the state will not pay for them. He declares that the only way he will approve the bills is when the supreme court forces him to do so. He says the intention of the legislature was to have the counties foot the bill. The original law for primaries for national committeemen was passed in 1913. In the law was a section by which was appropriated a sum sufficient to cover the cost of printing the ballots by the county clerks. The auditor general was authorized to incorporate in state tax for 1916 and every four years thereafter an amount of money to foot the bills.

Early in the session of 1915 somebody found this section and called the attention of the auditor general to it. The printing of all ballots for primaries is paid for by the counties, and Mr. Fuller could not see why the national committeemen should be excepted. He had Senator Jas. Wood of Manistiquette draw up a bill repealing that section, which was passed.

Toward the tail end of the session someone discovered that in another part of the 1913 law there appeared these words: "And the expense of printing these ballots shall be borne by the state."

"If any of the counties don't want to pay for these ballots I don't care. I will not authorize the payment of the bills for printing them unless the supreme court says so," said Mr. Fuller. While the cost to each county will not be large, it would be quite a pretty sum for the state to pay.

SIGNS OF DANGER

That Should Be Heeded by Charlevoix people.

There's serious danger in neglecting any weakness of the kidneys. The warning that Nature gives should not be overlooked. If troubled by too frequent passage of the kidney secretions; burning or scalding; if the secretions are highly colored and contain sediment when left standing—if you have back-ache, too, with frequent headaches and dizziness, make up your mind that your kidneys are affected and begin using some reliable kidney remedy. Deaths from kidney disease have increased in the United States alone, 72 per cent in the last 20 years. The risk is great—you can't afford to delay. Charlevoix people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Can you ask for better proof of merit than the statement of this Charlevoix resident?

Mrs. R. M. McKeel, 214 Mason street, Charlevoix, says: "I had been troubled for several months by kidney disease. My body bloated quite badly and I had a weak back and severe pains in my kidneys. My rest was broken at night. I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills at the Ivy Drug Store and they gave me relief in every way."

Turn Silage Into Beef

At one time the word "silage" suggested only brimming milk pails and big milk checks. According to Professor J. L. Torney of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture silage is nowadays an important factor in putting on the finishing touches on choice sirloin beef. Silage is a great contributor to economy of production. It cannot be considered as a substitute for other necessary materials in the ration, but if fed intelligently is a great food saver.

This Quaker Cooker

We have supplied perfect double Cookers to over 700,000 homes, to make Quaker Oats more delightful. They are made to our order to bring out the fullness of the flavor and aroma.

Such a Cooker as this, if sold at retail, would cost more than most homes would pay. But our purpose requires it in every home where Quaker Oats are used, so we ourselves supply it.

Our purpose is this: To create more Quaker Oats users, by making this the best-loved morning dish.

To this end, we use queen grains only in this brand—just the big, plump grains. We get but ten pounds per bushel. That means that two-thirds of the oats as they come to us are discarded in making Quaker Oats. The result is large, luscious flakes. They make this dish doubly-delicious. Yet they cost you, no extra price.

These savory flakes have won the world to Quaker. In a hundred nations this is the favorite brand. Millions of oat lovers send thousands of miles to get it.

Our next object is right cooking, and we offer this Cooker to every home to attain it. But we supply only one to a home.

Get this Cooker next week under this special offer. You want children to delight in this yim-food. You want them to eat an abundance. The way to attain that is to serve Quaker Oats cooked in this Quaker Cooker.

THE Michigan primary law is clear on a number of things. You cannot buy a drink or a cigar or a stick of chewing gum for a voter if you are a candidate for office at the primary. You cannot hire political workers. That means, too, that the regular political grafters with an alleged pull cannot hold up the candidates for cash or considerations. If you can prove that candidates for office do any of these things in violation of the primary law you can keep them from office should they be elected. But there is one other thing that the primary law is plain about: Voters or candidates cannot issue slanderous statements regarding candidates for office. They cannot talk slander in the presence of voters. They cannot impute evil to candidates or office-holders seeking reelection unless they are prepared to prove allegations in law courts. There are a lot of things in that primary law, things calculated to help the poor man who is a candidate, calculated to prevent the use of money for political influence. They are good things. But they must be observed. And they will be, observed, too. For the man who wins can be deprived of his winnings if violations are proven. Think these things over, Mr. Candidate. Think them over, Mr. Political Hold-Up Man.

Dear Editor:

I have noticed several times in your paper reasons why we should buy from our local merchants, rather than through mail order houses.

The farmers, many times called "Rubes," are not so blind but what they can see good sound reasons for sending out for many things. Nearly every one deals where their dollar goes farthest. Exactly! and the merchant is no exception.

If the farmers haul a load of wood to town, and many times needs the money to buy necessities of life, he finds the merchant is using coal which can be bought cheaper than their wood and he is not slow about telling the farmer so, either.

Last fall we had several hard frosts which cut the corn crop and other crops on the farm to such an extent that the farmer was obliged to sell pork early on account of a shortage of feed. What did some of the local merchants pay for our pork? Did they pay more than seven cents a pound? Not that we remember of. But still pork was high outside. But when pork is cheap in Chicago they don't want any from us. Why? Well, they can buy it cheaper off the car they tell us, and of course their dollar goes the farthest.

How many of you business men with your wives go to Detroit or Grand Rapids once or twice a year to get a good supply of the things you do not handle because "its cheaper?"

How many of you fellows buy things out of your line of your fellow merchants? Don't Sears and Roebuck or some other outside dealer look mighty good sometimes because "its cheaper?"

But when the farmers organize and try to purchase a plot of ordinary dirt near the city limits to erect a warehouse to handle their potatoes, beef, pork, poultry and fruit, so they can ship out with advantage the surplus food produced, but not consumed by the little towns that are always overstocked, the merchant thinks he will lose a few dollars and to protect his interests he boosts the price of that lot above the purchasing power of the farmers. And further more, is backed by the city council.

We "Rubes," Mr. Editor, are not all the simple minded people some think we are. More "gold bricks" and "green goods" are sold to "business men" than to "Rubes."

There is not a farmer but knows that if he gets credit he pay good and plenty for it and the books are balanced with every transaction.

We appreciate the friendship of you business men, but we are wise to the fact that we keep your old "buzz wagons" going if they go at all. We like your company but do not need your sympathy.

You have no right to expect from us a higher sense of loyalty to the local town than you exhibit in return to the farmer.

We would like to be a co-worker in the upbuilding of the local town and would heartily congratulate you if you would put forth an effort and make it worth while for us to try.

If the merchants fail in the future as they have in the past they must get over the notion that they have any vested rights in our trade.

"All we ask is a square deal." A Farmer.

At a recent wedding the bride was Miss Jane Helper and the groom was Mr. Newton Lord. The groom, however, was very angry when he saw in the newspaper an account of their wedding headed in the usual way: "Lord-Helper."

"Sorry, Brown," said the doctor after the examination. "You're in a very serious condition. I'm afraid I'll have to operate on you." "Operate!" gasped Brown. "Why I haven't any money for an operation, I'm only a poor working man." "You're insured, are you not?" "Yes, but I don't get that until I'm dead." "Oh, that'll be all right," said the doctor consolingly.

While the editor of a certain paper was away from home for a time he left his paper in charge of a minister of the gospel. During the minister's stay in the office the following letter came from a subscriber: "I know very well I paid my subscription to your paper the last time I was in your office. If I get any more such letters from you as I received last week I will come in and maul h I out of you!" The minister answered: "I have been trying to get that out of the editor for ten years and if you will come down and maul it out of him, then, my dear sir, I have twenty members of my church I will let you operate on."

SYNOPSIS

Dudley Lerolgan, district attorney of New York, attacks the liquor and vice trusts. He is killed by an agent of a secret society, the committee of fifteen. His son, Bruce Larnigan, is elected district attorney and takes up the fight. Bruce is in love with Dorothy Maxwell, whose father is head of the insurance trust.

BRUCE LARNIGAN had won the first battle in his fight against the fifteen, a mysterious graft syndicate which, composed not of cheap politicians, but of great business men, had strangled New York in its nefarious grip and was planning to spread its activities to cover the whole country. But Bruce had no illusions. A hard and desperate attempt to beat this election day itself by attempting to prove that he had accepted a bribe from the liquor interests to secure enforcement of the law had failed; thanks partly to his own cleverness and partly to the help of Dorothy Maxwell, his fiancee.

But Bruce knew that the real fight was only just beginning. The graft syndicate was entrenched in power. It had warned his father, Dudley Larnigan, that death would be his reward if he did not desist from his efforts to expose its corruption. It had made good the warning, and Bruce had sworn not only to flush his father's uncompleted work, but to avenge his death as well. To Bruce, Stanford Stone appeared to be a great capitalist, a distinguished financier, a man justly honored by the community and worthy of respect and confidence. Yet Stanford Stone was the head of the graft syndicate. It was Stanford Stone who had decreed Dudley Larnigan's death and Stanford Stone who had led the assault upon Bruce himself. Moreover—and this Bruce did not suspect, either—a personal motive lay behind Stone's enmity for him, for Stone was in love with Dorothy Maxwell.

Bruce had determined that his first move must be to strike at the evils of the tenement house district, which his father had been planning to take up. "I want the man higher up," he told his mother. "I know there is one, and "Look at this," said Bruce, showing Stone the letter.

It is he that I must get. I don't know yet who he is, but I'm going to find out!" He was at home when he said that, leaning over his mother's chair. And even as he spoke a tiny dart whistled by his ear and was buried in the back of his mother's chair. So faint was the sound, so tiny the missile, that his mother knew nothing of it. Bruce got it out and found that around the dart was wrapped a note. He read it. It was brief:

"Warning: Stop investigating the tenements. The fifteen."

Bruce smiled rather grimly; there was a drawing of a skull on the note. He stepped to the window, hoping that whoever had thrown the dart might be within sight. But no suspicious character of any sort rewarded his searching glance, instead he saw Dorothy Maxwell and Stanford Stone approaching the house. They looked up and waved to him.

"I certainly didn't expect to see either of you," said Bruce, laughingly. "Have you seen any suspicious looking characters around?"

"No one except you—you look pretty suspicious," laughed Stone. "Why?"

"Nothing—no matter," said Bruce. "Come in and see my mother, won't you?"

"I'll tell you why I asked you that question, Mr. Stone," said Bruce when they were alone. "Look at this." He handed him the note, first drawing a line through "The fifteen."

"Only fourteen now," he said. "I got rid of Murphy! I'll run them down and get even with my father's murderers!"

Outside they separated. Bruce and Dorothy to go downtown, Stone to hurry to his office, his face set in lines of grim determination. He strode rapidly toward his office. And there he called a meeting of the fifteen. Antou Dow, head of the tenement house trust, appeared, angry because of newspaper stories about Bruce's determination to get the man higher up in the tenement evils. Dow knew, as Bruce did not, that he himself was the man higher up, and his nervousness was unconcealed.

"We've got to strike at him before he can hit us!" said Stone angrily. "Our whole position is menaced by this one man. Dow, you are the one chiefly interested. You own some property in the tenement district of a well-known questionable sort?"

"I suppose I do," said Dow. "I'm not responsible for my tenants."

"Well, trap Larnigan with a woman in one of your houses."

"Yes—that can be done," agreed Dow, after a moment's thought. "We'll plan the details later, Stone."

There was more talk, and then Dow had to hurry home to lunch. Dow was a model father and husband. He was devoted to his wife, and his love for his two children, Harold and Lillian, knew no bounds.

And meanwhile, even while Dow played with his own children in his luxurious home, Bruce and Dorothy were seeing other children in a house that was also owned by Dow. But this house was a tenement that disregarded law and decency alike. There were no fire escapes; the heating system was out of order, and there was running water from only one tap on each floor. Dorothy and the woman's two children went to look over the building. Bruce, sickened, went to the street. Other children came to talk with him, and he sat down on the stoop and played with them. Across the street was a saloon, and from this emerged a burly, ill-favored man, at the sight of whom the children shuddered.

"Hey, youse! Bent it? We don't want no nudes reformers down this way—see?" said the fellow, whom Bruce recognized as a cheap ward politician named Black.

Bruce scolded, took a pin and made a note. Black shook his fist in his face and, turning, made a signal that set several roughs across the street in motion. Bruce started to rise; Black knocked him down, and the gang came tearing over.

"Kick him till he's a stiff!" yelled Black.

But a sudden and remarkable intervention came to Bruce's aid. As if by instinct the children flung themselves upon him, covering him with their soft bodies. The gang stopped; even their brutality shrank from attacking the children. Bruce had time to draw his revolver and rose, the weapon in his hand. Black turned and ran; the gangsters drew guns and looked for shelter. But the children's screams had brought the police, and Bruce was safe for the time.

From that moment Bruce went to work with redoubled energy. And Dorothy, painfully impressed by what she had seen, had helped by trying to do what she could for the tenement children. She knew she could not do much for the whole city, but in that one house she improved conditions vastly. One night she was visiting the Dows, old friends of her father's, and described the class she had established for the children of the tenement house.

"And tonight," said Dorothy—"tonight we're going to have a Christmas tree for them down there. I'm going down now to give out the little presents."

"Mother, can't we go and see?" cried Lillian.

"Oh, yes—please!" echoed Harold.

Mrs. Dow hesitated, but they pleaded so eagerly that she gave in at last, and Dorothy took them with her. On the way she stepped and telephoned to tell Bruce and ask him to join her. His voice as he answered was excited.

"I'll come if I can—as soon as I can," he said. "Dorothy, I'm on the trail at last, I do believe! Tonight I've got a chance to get the evidence I need."

What had happened was that that afternoon a woman had come to Bruce to his office, a woman whose profession no one could mistake.

"What?" said Bruce sharply. "He is, eh? Well, that might make a difference!"

He hesitated, questioned her sharply. But in the end he decided to go—taking certain precautions.

The time came, and Bruce, still hesitating a little but determined to face the risk that he saw could not be avoided, went with the woman to her house. The whole thing filled him with disgust; the woman herself and the girls he saw in her house revolted him.

"You see, you can find out what's going on here," said the woman. "It's plain enough—my God, what's that?"

There was a thunderous knocking at the door. Heavy blows fell against it, and it came crashing in. A squad of police followed.

"They double crossed me—the joint's plucked!" screamed the woman. Abruptly Bruce saw what had been planned and went white. But just as a policeman stepped up to him another man in plain clothes appeared.

"Officer, leave Mr. Larnigan alone," he said. "He's here to get evidence. Arrest the woman—no one else."

"Yes, Mr. Commissioner," said the man, saluting.

This was Bruce's counterstroke. He had arranged for the police constables.

"There's one of your houses—burning up!" he cried.

stoner to accompany any raiding party and had told him his plans in advance. His reputation was safe.

But now a new factor came into sight. Antou Dow, furious at the frustration of his plans, suddenly appeared. "Arrest both those men!" he cried. "I demand it!"

"Antou Dow!" cried Bruce. "So you are the main guy here! You are one of the fifteen—one of my father's murderers!"

Dow realized his mistake. But he tried desperately to secure Bruce's arrest. Only a sudden commotion outside the house checked him.

"Fire!" yelled some one at a window. "The house across the street!"

Bruce tore over to look. Flames were pouring from the door and the lower windows of the house, which had no fire escapes! He understood the full horror of it in a moment. Dorothy was there! He turned frantically to Dow.

"There's one of your houses—burning up!" he cried. "No fire escapes! Dorothy Maxwell is there, trying to help the children you oppress! And with her are your own children!"

Dow, stricken, never doubting, collapsed. Bruce ran to the street. The policemen followed. Firemen were arriving. Ladders were going up. Bruce knew the whole where Dorothy must be. He was the first ladder and found her with the two Dow children. He brought them to safety and then helped in the work of rescue. Dow, smothering, headstrong, came to Bruce.

"I've been wrong—I've been a snail!" he said. "I see my whole mess. I will reform every building I own. And tomorrow morning I will give you the evidence against the rest."

"Come to my office at a o'clock," said Bruce.

Neither saw that Black, lurking near the house, saw that Black and went to the street. Bruce was up at night. The Christmas morning was a bad one for him. He had done all he could for the fifteen sufferers, he went to his office to call for Dow. He looked at his watch. It was twelve. His mother called him up. She said she had come to see him at once. But she must see him. He hesitated. Then he scribbled a note.

"Dow," he said, "I will be back at twelve. Wait."

Dorothy had a note from Bruce. "I was afraid," he said. "I wanted you to come here."

"Come with me," he said with a laugh. "I must hurry back, but I'll have breakfast at home with you and mother."

Dow came, found the note and sat down to wait. He had gone to places. The escape of the children had unnerved him. He looked at the clock. Nine o'clock.

In his own office, Stanford Stone, too, looked at his clock. He watched the minutes pass. Now it was five. And at the half minute, when, as Stone supposed, Dow would just be beginning his revelations to Bruce, an explosion started in Bruce's room.

He rushed out. With the risk was great, and Dow was hesitating. But only an accident had saved him from sharing his fate.

MICHIGAN STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT. FRANK F. ROGERS, COMMISSIONER STANDARD ROAD SIGN FOR STATE REWARD ROADS.

IN COMPLIANCE WITH ACT 282, PUBLIC ACTS 1915.

APPROVED Lucy Smith JAN 25 1916
 Deputy Commissioner

The illustration shows two types of standard road signs that are required under the state law to be erected along state reward roads. The legislature of 1916 enacted a law to provide for the naming of public roads and highways and the placing of signs thereon, with a penalty attached if the proper authorities do not live up to its provisions. The illustration also shows the added designation if the road is on the Dixie Highway.

The law stipulates that every state reward road, if not already named and designated, must be designated by appropriate names in their entirety by the state highway commissioner, and the county road boards, respectively, or boards of supervisors in counties not operating under the county road system. Sign boards must be erected at every branch of every state reward road or cross and shall have on it the name of the highway and the distance to the nearest important town, village or city. The signs must be placed by the county road commissioners or, if the county is not under the county road system, by the supervisors, and the expense must be paid out of the general fund of the county where the sign boards are erected.

of a misdemeanor and subject to a fine of not more than $100, or by imprisonment for not more than ninety days in the county jail, or by both fine and imprisonment, together with the cost of repairing the sign board. The amount thus collected for repairing the sign board shall be credited to the general fund of the county. It shall furthermore be the duty of every supervisor, county road commissioner and township highway commissioner who has knowledge of such defacement, destruction or injury of a sign board to make a diligent effort to ascertain the name of the guilty party and make complaint to the prosecuting attorney.

In the primary at Charlevoix on Wednesday of last week "Andy" Ross was nominated as mayor by the Republicans, having carried every ward. The Democrats do not appear to have been very numerous as in the entire city the highest number of votes polled at the primary was 14 for clerk, while their candidate for mayor received but 12. In this connection a question arises that possibly is not thoroughly understood. Under the primary law enacted by the last legislature when at a primary any party candidates who received less than five per cent of the total vote at the last election, are not entitled to have their names on the official ballot. Now if at the last election the Democratic party cast more than seventy votes, are any of the Democratic candidates, entitled to a place on the Charlevoix city ballot?—East Jordan Enterprise.

SHOOTS HIS WIFE

After Firing Three Shots Oscar Richards Turned Weapon Upon Himself.

Because his wife had refused to move from East Jordan to the camp where he was employed, Oscar Richards, 25 years old, threatened to kill her. His wife did not think he had the nerve to do so, but after continued taunting and nagging Richards made good his threats by pulling a revolver and shooting her three times. One bullet struck her a glancing blow on the forehead and another struck her in the back, but was deflected by the steel stay of her corset and she got away without serious injury.

Before the police arrived Richards turned the weapon upon himself, the ball entering his left temple, inflicting a bad wound, from which he may recover. The affair took place at the home of David Williamson of East Jordan, where Mrs. Richards was staying. The shooting was the result of jealousy, their three years of married life having been one continual series of family jars.

Richards was brought to this city on Monday afternoon and placed in the county jail and will be bound over to the circuit court.

A few years after we came here a man by the name of Walton, who owned the farm where Henry DeGroot now lives, conceived the idea of making commercial use of the waters flowing out of Toad Lake.

Accordingly, with the aid of his sons, of whom he had several, he constructed a dam across the creek on the Wiltse place and built first a little sawmill, (one of those old-fashioned kind of mules) that went up to-day and down to-morrow. It was a great improvement over the true and Injun mill. Later a circular saw was installed. He also built a grist mill where we could get our wheat ground into Graham or corn into meal. The mill was not installed till later—not before I had eaten Graham until I could not bear the name of it, nor cannot do so yet.

Our first grists were taken to the mill on our backs, as there were no roads opened from here. Later we got a road brushed out and I remember on one occasion my father sent me to the mill with three bags of wheat we had flailed out by hand. It was in the fall on the first little run of snow. The bags were put on a jumper or home-made sleigh without thills or tongue, just a whiffletree, and drawn by a two year old colt.

Everything went lovely until I started down the long hill nearing the creek, where the road was better beaten. The sleigh seemed anxious to make better time than the colt. It crowded against his heels and he also seemed anxious to make better time and before the bottom of the grade was reached we were all making such good time that I was all off the sleigh, except my hands, which were holding onto the reins, the balance of my body following closely behind.

I was wearing a pair of top boots with my pants inside, there being more

FROM DIEKEMA BOOSTER CLUB

Over One Hundred and Fifty Signatures Appear on First List.

Slogan to Be "Antrim Solid For Diekema"—Dr. B. J. Beuker Chosen President.

Another proof of their willingness to pull together for the common good was furnished by the farmers and businessmen of Banks township by organizing a Diekema Booster Club at a rousing meeting held at Ellsworth on the 9th day of March.

More than one hundred and fifty signatures appear on the first list. Dr. B. J. Beuker, George Klooster, Judge of Probate E. R. Harris and E. W. Ross were elected respectively as president, vice president, secretary and treasurer. Committees on membership and publicity were nominated and an ambitious program of propaganda instituted. Among other things this includes the forming of endless chains of members as well as a systematic effort to induce other townships to do likewise. The slogan will be: "Antrim Solid For Diekema."

Ellsworth by the way, a few years ago started, or rather originated, the idea of combining the farmers and businessmen into a Township Board of Trade.

The fundamental soundness of this idea has been amply proven by results, namely, by enabling the township to raise $20,000 in one year for good roads, by local harmony and subsequent prosperity. Another boast of this thriving community is that, relatively, they pay taxes on a higher valuation and draw less "Poor Fund Money" than any township in Northern Michigan.

FEEDER STEERS.

Points That Indicate the Animal Which Will Make Best Gains.

The sort of a feeder steer that will show the best gains will have a short neck, short legs, straight back and deep body. The legs should be short and straight, but should not stand far apart. Deepness of the body is one thing that must be found in the steer, as you are picking an animal with the ability to eat and digest a large amount of feed. This means that the body should be deep in front to give plenty of room for the vital organs, and it must be roomy at the hind flank.

Other points that should be watched are these: Pick the steer with the heavy muscled forearm, as this indicates a thickness of lean meat all through the carcass. An indication of early maturity is the shortness of the cannon bones. See that the loin is wide, the hook bones far apart and the rump long and wide. The muscled of the thigh should come well down toward the hock. While the handling quality of steers when fattened is important as an indication of the quality of the meat, it is necessary in the selection of feeders to get a loose, pliable and "mellow" skin with a heavy covering of fine, vigorous hair. All of this indicates thrift, health, vigor and the ability to turn feed into a good grade of beef at a comparatively small cost.

Suffrage Notes

It has long been known that the liquor interests were opposed to equal suffrage. That was shown conclusively in the equal suffrage campaign in Michigan in 1912 when after weeks of delay the amendment granting votes to women was counted out with a majority of only 760 against it. But in the recent election in the eastern states the opposition of the liquor interests was again plainly shown. The Philadelphia American says: "The government has evidence of large liquor funds having been used to finance the anti-suffrage campaign last fall in New Jersey, Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania."

Are not men "too emotional" to be trusted with the ballot when in the Oklahoma House of Representatives, on February 18, the honorable members threw books, ink wells and paper weights at one another? If women attempted to use such "arguments" would they not be counted as "illogical" to put it mildly?

The opposition to the Owen-Keating child labor bill in Congress all came from non-suffrage states. Every Congressman from the state where women have the ballot voted and worked for the bill. An enfranchised motherhood means a safer, better protected childhood.

Louis F. Post, assistant secretary of commerce and labor said in a recent address in Cleveland: "Government is nothing more than a kind of housekeeping. Man needs the woman's vote and she needs his."

The Premier of Saskatchewan has taken the first steps to introduce an equal suffrage bill in his legislature. The Premier of Alberta has taken similar steps. The influence of Manitoba which granted full suffrage to its women recently is making itself felt.

ELLSWORTH, MICHIGAN

What Geo. Klooster & Son of Ellsworth

have to say about cream separators this week

BUYING a cream separator is good deal like hiring a man to work on your farm. A hired man that does poor work and is lazy is an expensive proposition, no matter how little you pay him. A cream separator that is hard to turn, hard to keep clean and doesn't skim close, would be expensive even if you got it as a gift.

Creamermen and dairymen all over the world recognize the superiority of the De Laval.

About the only reason why any one ever buys any other cream separator is because they can get it a little cheaper.

Then they soon find out they have lost ten times as much from separation inconvenience, poor skimming and a machine that quickly wears out, as they saved in the beginning.

Remember that a De Laval will soon pay for itself, and if you have no separator now, or an inferior machine, we can sell you a De Laval on such terms that it will pay for itself while you are using it.

The best cream separator is the cheapest. Let us prove it for you on your own farm.

Sooner or later you will buy a DE LAVAL

"COLD-CASH BILL"

"COLD CASH" was Bill Smith's motto—"just simply had to feel the 'long green'" when he paid out any money.

He often had difficulty in making correct change, and on one occasion in searching his pockets for his "roll" he found—not his money, but the hole where $51 had disappeared.

He felt a little bit "peeved" when one day he was called upon to pay a bill he "knew" he had paid some time before—couldn't show a receipt for the first transaction, however.

Smith realized there was something wrong with his system—knew it when some thin-fingered stranger "relieved" him of his purse and $20.

Smith now lets the bank handle most of his cash, and whenever he pays a bill it is a simple matter to draw a check on The Charlevoix County Bank.

Thus, in a simple, single operation Smith now makes change instantly and correctly; each check acts as a receipt, and he has a complete record of all his expenditures.

There's a lesson in this for YOU, perhaps.

NINE NEW RAIDERS BUILT BY GERMANS

Fleet Constructed Especially to Prey Upon Commerce.

TWO ARE NOW ON HIGH SEAS

Pass British Battleships Disguised as Innocent Merchantmen—Guns Concealed on Decks—Appam's Passenger Toll of Plot to Ratska Ship, but It Was Afterward Abandoned.

Identity of the disguised German ship in the Atlantic which captured the British liner Appam off the Canary Islands on Jan. 15 and sent her to Norfolk a German prize of war has been made known by officers of the other British steamships she captured and sank.

These officers went on board the raider and had ample time to look her over from stem to stern. They agreed, as Lieutenant Hunsberg, who took the Appam to Norfolk has insisted, that the captor was the Moewe. But she was not the surveying ship Moewe or any other Moewe known in maritime circles. She was a new freight steamship equipped with guns, and as one of the sailors from her in the detail to the Appam told Mrs. Francis Fuller, wife of the consul-general of Ashanti, who was an Appam passenger, the raider was one of a fleet of nine such vessels fitted out by the Germans to prey on British merchantmen, two of which already have made their way out of the Kiel canal to the high seas.

Saluted British Warships.

Mrs. Fuller said she talked with this German seaman on the Appam several times and that he confided to her one day about the blue craft, saying that the captor of the Appam made her way to sea on New Year's day and, with a Swedish flag flying, passed and saluted three British war vessels of the North sea fleet.

She was named the Moewe, which is German for seagull, because she was painted white originally and because German craft of that name have been favored by fortune for many years past.

Several of her crew were from the surveying ship Moewe and wore their old hat bands. Others had hat bands marked Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, the North German Lloyd liner, which was sunk on Aug. 26, 1914, off the African coast, near the Canary Islands, by the British cruiser Highbury.

The British officers described her as a new freighter that apparently had been selected for hurried converting into a cruiser, because all her fittings had not been installed, and she could be equipped easily with guns without any ripping away. She may have been the Panga, a new German ship, they said, as she was the same size and had a lifeboat with the name Panga on its bow.

A Vessel of 6,500 Tons.

They described her as about a 6,500 ton vessel, with a large coal capacity as well as fittings for fruit carrying, so that she was designed for roving and would have been classed as a tramp. She had one funnel and two masts. There was no warship construction about her except the supports for the gun turrets, which had been riveted roughly into her frames. She carried five fifteen-centimeter guns, or about six inch ones. Four were installed forward, two on either side and one aft. Those forward were set low on the deck and hidden by wooden shields that lifted up beside them like trapdoors, and with a cover on them appeared like nothing more harmful than a well stowed forward deck load of freight.

Her holds were filled with coal and supplies enough for her to remain at sea as long as two months without replenishing. None of her foodstuffs was given to the Appam though, and there was a shortage of food on the British liner. There was no suffering, but during the last four days on the voyage across the Atlantic from the Canaries to Norfolk those aboard her had nothing but rice and cheese to eat. Lieutenant Berg ate this with the rest of his crew and his captives. He even permitted Captain Harrison of the Appam to retain his seat at the center table in the saloon.

Quickly Suppressed Plot.

Both the Appam's passengers and the officers from the sunken ships admitted that a plot brewed on the Appam to overpower Lieutenant Berg and the German sailors of the prize crew with him, but the German officer calmly warned every one not to start anything. He pointed to the bombs he had placed about the Appam and explained how he had wired them all to the bridge so that they could all be set off from there by a mere throwing of a switch with his fingers.

He said he had made up his mind if a British cruiser overtook the Appam he would signal to her that he had many British subjects on board and that if she interfered with him he would set off the bombs.

"I'll go with you," he said quietly and firmly, but without a bit of bravado. Then he added, "Nothing would make me surrender this ship to the British."

Prior to this the Appam's passengers had prayed that a British vessel would appear and rescue them. After that they prayed that no British gunners would find them.

Here's Why G. & B. PEARL Wire Cloth Stops Screen Expense

Painting—repairing—replacing screen—those are the expenses which make inefficient wire cloth a source of annoyance and money loss. When you screen with genuine G. & B. PEARL you do away with painting, repairing, replacements—simply because PEARL is rust-proof as metal can be made, consequently makes a screen that's practically wear-proof.

G. & B. PEARL represents true screen economy. It outwears all imitations so far that no other similar appearing wire can be placed in the same class. From points of appearance—sanitation—durability and economy G. & B. PEARL is the one choice of the man who wants permanent protection.

C. S. SOCIETY CHANGES NAME

To Be Hereafter Known as First Church of Christ, Scientist.

Society first organized May 24th, 1909, and has since rapidly gained in membership.

At the semi-annual business meeting of the Christian Science Society, held January 3rd, it was voted to organize a church to be known as "First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Charlevoix, Michigan." The necessary requirements have been complied with and the church legally incorporated.

In the summer of 1906 a few loyal Christian Scientists who were spending the summer at Charlevoix started public services. For some years previous to this services were held irregularly in various private homes. The two following summers these services were continued with increasing attendance. In the fall of 1908 the town people who were interested in Christian Science decided to continue services during the winter. On May 24th, 1909, this little band of earnest truth seekers—wishing to establish on a firmer foundation the teachings of the Bible and Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy—organized a Christian Science Society with nine charter members. From this time on the society carried on the work of a regularly organized church.

This church holds Sunday morning services at 10:45 and Wednesday evening at 7:45. The Wednesday evening meeting includes testimonies of Christian Science healing. Sunday school is held at the close of the Sunday service. This church maintains a public reading room, the object of which is to provide a place where all who desire to read the literature of Christian Science are made welcome. The Bible and all authorized Christian Science literature may be obtained there. A loan library consisting of all of Mrs. Eddy's writings, also publications of the Christian Science Publishing Society, is maintained and is operated on the public library plan, books being freely lent to any responsible person who has become sufficiently interested in Christian Science to read the authorized literature.

Each year since the organization of this society it has presented free of cost to the public, authorized lectures on the subject of Christian Science. As is the custom with all Christian Science organizations, this society has responded lovingly and liberally to the needs of those in distress, whether at home or abroad, including several generous contributions to the European War Relief Fund.

The public library is supplied with all of the writings of Mrs. Eddy, the discoverer and founder of Christian Science; also the Christian Science Journal, Sentinel, and Monitor, a daily newspaper.

This church is built on the Rock, Christ, and it desires to consecrate its activities to the sacred cause of establishing truth on the earth through its services to humanity by healing the sick and reforming the sinner. The Christian Science church has no creed. It takes for its foundation the entire Bible and the religious tenets of this denomination include "As adherents of truth we take the inspired word of the Bible as our sufficient guide to eternal life." "And we solemnly promise to watch and pray for that Mind to be in us which was also in Christ Jesus; to do unto others as we would have them do unto us; and to be merciful, just and pure." (Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures, page 497).

When Jesus asked "Whom do men say that I, the Son of Man, am?" the answers showed no comprehension of His works or mission, but when He said "but whom say ye that I am?" the questioner's response was from Peter, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." The verses that follow—"And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father which is in heaven. And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My church"—show that Peter comprehended the true Messiahship and that this acknowledgment was the perception of truth, the rock which Jesus expected to establish in human consciousness, the understanding of the true church, which church, though it has always existed as an ideal, has not been fully comprehended, and against which Jesus said "the gates of hell shall not prevail." Peter's discernment of this divine ideal enabled him to heal the multitude, and these inevitable "signs following" must accompany this perception throughout all ages. It is this church of the "living God" which Christian Scientists are striving to assimilate.

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE

Death of Mrs. Helen A. Newson Took Place
March 17.

Death claimed Mrs. Helen A. Newson, aged 64 years, wife of Horace Newson of Burgess, on Friday, March 17. Mrs. Newson had been ill for some time from a nervous breakdown, and her demise was not unlooked for.

She had been a resident of Charlevoix county for a number of years and was held in the highest esteem by a large circle of friends.

Funeral services were held Monday from the Burgess schoolhouse, Rev. L. C. Vinyard officiating. Interment at Brookside cemetery.

THEATRICAL

"The girl of the golden west" is the keeper of a saloon in the California mining camps—a girl so honest and so fearless that she commands the respect of the rough "forty-niners" who crowd her bar and dancehall. Her love for a gentleman road-agent comes as a shock to the gambler-hermit who has thought to marry her himself, and who naturally to wreck this romance, Jesse L. Lasky, in association with David Belasco, presents these unique "features," which will be the offering at the Majestic on Tuesday, March 28.

AFTER A NEW PUBLIC BUILDING

Boyer City Getting Into Line for a New $75,000 Postoffice.

Congressman Frank D. Scott Introduces Bill—Government Already Owns Site.

Boyer City is making a strenuous effort through the aid of Congressman F. D. Scott to convince the authorities at Washington that she is badly in need of a new postoffice building, and from the present outlook her chances look mighty favorable in landing the appropriation.

Congressman Scott has introduced a bill asking for an appropriation of $75,000 for the building. The city has a population of 5218 and the receipts of the postoffice for the last year were about $12,000 from all sources.

The government already owns a site there and all that is necessary now is to obtain the appropriation. According to the Boyer City News, Postmaster William Lewis has had considerable correspondence with the United States treasurer regarding the matter and he has been informed that a schedule has been prepared and adopted relative to the amount of appropriation for certain sized cities. Up to 5000 population the amount is $30,000, and it is believed the maximum for Boyer City would be near $40,000. This would put up a building of which to be justly proud. However, Boyer City would not reject the $75,000 if Mr. Scott puts it through.

Chances, look good for Boyer City having a new building within the next four years.

Saturday Dollar Day

Don't get excited now, just wait until Saturday and see what a dollar will buy. Charlevoix merchants, not all of them, but a large majority, have adopted the Dollar Day plan or will give values equal to a Dollar Day sale. In most places where Dollar Day sales have been held, the merchants have been quite conservative in the values they have given for a dollar. With the Charlevoix merchants it is different. In some instances, they have simply put goods on sale for a dollar, worth from $5.00 to $10.00. Goods that have sold as high as $2.50 have been placed on sale for $1.00 on Saturday. A lone cart wheel ($1.00) will buy more goods on Saturday of this week, and with some on Saturday of next week, than it ever has in the history of the city.

Charlevoix merchants want your business. They have the goods, a variety of styles to select from, and at the prices they are quoting in their advertisements in this issue, deserve your trade. Read the advertisements of the following:

Auction Sales.

Two auction sales appear in this issue of the Courier. During the month of April a number will take place in various parts of the county. Those published this week are:

Wednesday, March 29.

On page 7 will be found advertised the sale of Mrs. T. K. Wielenga at her farm three miles south of Ellsworth. The stock list in this sale is the largest so far this season. Nineteen head of cattle and four horses, besides a large amount of farm implements, will be disposed of. The sale will commence at 10 o'clock. Wm. E. Byers, auctioneer; H. J. Timmer, clerk.

Thursday, March 30.

On this date will occur the sale of the stock and implements of the late Thomas Hartwell at his farm eight miles southwest of Charlevoix. Charles J. Zeitler, administrator, will conduct the sale, which will commence at one o'clock. William E. Byers, auctioneer; J. H. Bugbee, clerk. Read the adv. on page 12.

Tuesday, April 4.

On the above date Henry Paquet will have a sale on what is known as the Bert Brown farm on Toe Hill, five and one-half miles south of Charlevoix. Watch for the advertisement in the issue of March 29.

CITY TO BE ADVERTISED

General Publicity Plan Adopted at Meeting Thursday Night.

Pere Marquette Railroad and the Inn to Put Up Dollar for Dollar Raised in City.

Citizens of Charlevoix in conjunction with several officials of the Pere Marquette Railroad thoroughly went over the proposition of completely advertising the city as a summer resort at a meeting held in the court house last Thursday evening. Considerable enthusiasm was manifested by those present, all seeming to have the same opinion regarding the matter.

Mr. Wolfenden, general passenger agent of the Pere Marquette, outlined the scheme of advertising. In his remarks he stated that the people we wanted to reach lived in the southern and middle western states, and that the only way to reach them was by setting forth the merits of Charlevoix, informing them who to get in touch with, and to do this in a general advertising campaign.

The railroad officials propose to take charge of the advertising and to put up dollar for dollar against whatever Charlevoix raises, as will also the Inn, of which Mr. Creamer is manager. Thus from two sources, Charlevoix will get $2.00 worth of advertising for every $1.00 put up.

Others spoke upon the proposition, all holding the same views as to its advisability. Advertising a business pays. Merchants advertise, manufacturers advertise, as do also mail order houses—and they get the business. Why should not a city of the character of Charlevoix, with its unsurpassed facilities as a summer resort, do the same thing? Let the outside world know of our surroundings, and they will come here to spend their vacations.

In the past what little advertising that has been done has been spasmodic. In the future an effort will be made to conduct it in a systematic manner, which will without a doubt produce surprising results.

In the past the bulk of the advertising has been paid by individual subscriptions. Business men have cheerfully donated from $5 to $25 each year. Every property owner, merchant, hotel or boarding house keeper and laborer who failed to contribute to the fund has received the benefit without expending a cent. According to our present charter no moneys raised by taxation can be expended for advertising purposes. It should be a city charge, and within the coming year the charter will be amended in such a manner that certain moneys can be expended for advertising the city. It is a good move and should have been accomplished years ago.

The Pere Marquette plan of advertising was adopted as outlined and $500.00 will be raised by popular subscription. This with the $500.00 from the railroad and the $500.00 from the Inn will be expended to exploit Charlevoix as a summer resort. It is to be hoped that those who have the subscription paper in charge will receive a liberal response and the money will be raised within a short time.

FUNERAL SERVICES MONDAY

H. L. Oldham.

It is with deep regret we announce the death of Mrs. H. L. Oldham Oldham, the wife of the late Rev. James Oldham Oldham, M. A., of Staffordshire, England, which occurred shortly before nine o'clock Thursday evening, March 16, at the home of her son, H. L. Oldham.

The funeral took place on Monday, the 20th, at 2:30 p. m. Services were conducted by Rev. Henry Harris of the Episcopal church. The casket was covered with family wreaths and surrounded by them were as many affectionate tokens of esteem and respect from her old friends and the new ones she had made during her brief sojourn in Charlevoix.

The pall-bearers were: Captain O. E. Wilbur, W. J. Rachow, Oluf Nordrum, J. L. Crane, Captain Willard A. Smith and Captain William Fleucon.

Historical Musicales.

The annual musicale of the Historical Society occurred last Friday evening at the Congregational church. A large audience was in attendance and the program rendered was much appreciated, as evidenced by the encores demanded and responded to in every instance. The talent displayed was a credit to the society and to the city and, without individual distinctions, it may be said that all the performances were praiseworthy. Occurring only once a year, the public seems to welcome these musicales most heartily.

M. E. SUNDAY SCHOOL RECORD

Wonderful Increase in Attendance During Month of February.

Total Enrollment Reached High Mark of 271 for Month—Good Church Attendance.

The officers and members of the Methodist church of this city are pointing with considerable pride to the record of attendance in both the Sunday school and church during the month of February. Below is a reproduction of their record for the month:

The average attendance for February was 244, as against 189 for January, or an increase of 55. The total enrollment for February was 271, the average attendance being 90 per cent. of the enrollment.

It is interesting to report that out of the average attendance at the Sunday school 63 per cent. attended church service and 46 brought their Bibles with them to the Sunday school.

It was also discovered that 57 per cent. of the attendance never missed a Sunday, or, in other words, 138 out of 244 were present four Sundays in February. Better results are expected in March.

They also have a lively corps of 20 teachers and a bunch of officers to do efficient work, a good orchestra and whole-souled singing. Regular attendants from 19 months to 79 years attend each Sunday.

CALLED TO A BIGGER JOB

County Agent C. B. Cook of Allegan to be Promoted.

Booked to be Superintendent of County Agents for the State of Michigan.

If current reports are true, C. B. Cook of Owasco, the well-known county agent of Allegan, will probably be the first man to fill the recently created office of state superintendent of county agents, or, agriculturist-at-large. The following paragraphs tell briefly of his work during the last three years, the success of which is recognized by this promotion.

When C. B. Cook went to Allegan county three years ago as agricultural agent, the farm bureau idea was in the balance. It was not only a new idea in the county but in the state as well and was accepted with reluctance. For two years the board of supervisors allowed the farm bureau to struggle along without an appropriation. The banks in the county and the interested farmers bore the county's share of the expense. In 1915 the board of supervisors woke up to the fact that the best thing which every struck the county was not being recognized as it deserved and they appropriated $800.00 for its support. This year the board raised enough to cover all of the county's share of the expense, about $1200.00.

These supervisors were from Missouri and they did not propose to plunge hastily into the support of a new movement until its value to the county was shown. C. B. Cook was just the man who could show them. A graduate of M. A. C. and a practical farmer besides, he went over the county and sized up the situation. More time for the whole county, vetch for the sand plains of the west end and alfalfa for the dairymen of the east end were three things which he decided were necessary at once.

As ground limestone was high priced, Mr. Cook noted about and soon found several good marl beds which he induced the owners to open up for general use. Then he conducted an alfalfa and vetch campaign which resulted in many farmers trying out for the first time these two important forage crops and soil builders. At present the county has 3000 acres of alfalfa and 10,000 acres of sand vetch.

Mr. Cook is often asked to tell the fertilizer requirement of soils in certain fields. He generally answers the question by saying: "Try various fertilizers with various crops and find out for yourself." This sort of advice is a puzzle to many men, for they feel that the county agent should be able to tell at a glance just what any soil requires, which, of course, is impossible. What Mr. Cook has done, however, to answer such questions is to use certain farms in different parts of the county as demonstration farms, and on these he puts into practice his advice. Meetings of farmers are held occasionally on these farms and the results of the experiments examined and discussed.

Another unique plan used by Mr. Cook to settle soil problems is the use of clay pots such as are used for house plants. In these, of which he has hundreds, he puts soil alone or soil and some fertilizer and plants seed. From the growth of the plants themselves he learns the things which most farmers expect him to discover by a mere glance.

These are some of the many things Mr. Cook has done for Allegan county. The future will reveal his full value and usefulness. His wonderful success in the work as county agent is recognized, however, by the state board of agriculture in his call to the new position just created.

The above is but an illustration of what would be accomplished in Charlevoix county with the help of a good county agent. Soil problems that have confronted our farmers for years would be solved, with the result that better crops would be obtained each year. The value of an agent cannot be estimated and with but a little hustling on the part of those who stand for better conditions and a more prosperous community will result in Charlevoix county being classed among the progressives. Get in line and be a booster for a County Agent.

Attention, Ben Hurs.

Let all members be present at our next meeting, March 30, at the I. O. O. F. hall. W. N. Steel, claim instructor, from Crawfordville, Indiana, and M. W. Voira, state manager, from Detroit, will be here for installation of officers. The members from Court Amy of Boyne City are also expected.

RHEUMATISM ARRESTED

Many people suffer the tortures of lame muscles and stiffened joints because of impurities in the blood, and each succeeding attack seems more acute until rheumatism has invaded the whole system. To arrest rheumatism it is quite as important to improve your general health as to purify your blood, and the cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is nature's great blood-maker, while its medicinal nourishment strengthens the organs to expel the impurities and rebuild your strength. Scott's Emulsion is helping thousands every day who could not find other relief. Refuse the alcoholic substitutes.

FARMERS QUERY COLUMN

Mail All Questions to This Office or to H. L. Barnum, Ironton, Michigan

Question—What treatment is used to increase the germination of a sweet clover seed?

Answer—Sweet clover and alfalfa seed are often subjected to a scarifying process to reduce the thickness of the hard seed coat. This is essentially a sandpapering process and is being used by most seed houses. Scarified seed need no other treatment. There is another method of softening the seed coat which is simple and can be used by any farmer who plants his own or any unscarified seed. This is the sulphuric acid treatment and consists of soaking the seed in commercial sulphuric acid for twenty minutes. The acid is then drained off and the seed washed with water to remove the acid. The seed is then dried and is ready for use. This seems like a severe treatment, as the acid is used full strength, but it has been successfully used many times and the increased germination secured by it will repay the cost of treating.

Question—Will the use of carrots dry up cows?

Answer—Because the quantity grown is often limited carrots are not often fed extensively to cows, but are kept for the horses. There seems to be no good reason, however, for not using them for cows if one has a sufficient quantity of them. I know of no authentic reports of cows being dried up by eating carrots. If they are used instead of silage or mangels in a ration with hay and grain there is no reason why they should not be very satisfactory. In his great book on feeds and feeding Professor Henry remarks: "Carrots also serve well for other stock (than horses), especially dairy cows." He also quotes Hills of the Vermont station, who says: "Carrots far surpass beets in feeding value."

Question—What is the method for treating oats for smut?

Answer—All seed oats, no matter what the variety or source, should be given the formalin treatment for smut. The smut spores, which are the seeds of the disease, are on the oat hulls and are ready for business as soon as the seed starts to grow, but the formalin gas will destroy every one that it reaches. Watch your fern papers for full detailed accounts of the method of handling. Briefly, the treatment consists of wetting all the oats, either by sprinkling or dipping, with a solution of formalin and water in the proportion of one pint of the formalin to 40 gallons of water. If the solution is sprinkled on the seed one gallon will suffice for four bushels. Thus a pint of formalin used in this way would treat 160 bushels of seed. After sprinkling and mixing to insure every seed being wet the pile should be covered and left several hours in order that the gas may penetrate to every hidden spore. Sacks, grain drill and everything which comes in contact with the grain should be treated also.

Will someone who reads this kindly tell us how the smut disease gets from the spores on the seed in the ground to the head of oats two or three feet above ground?

HAVE a little pity on the newspapers these days. If you please. Life is not all cakes and syrup to the newspaper publishers these war times. It costs them more in every direction, but especially are the materials with which he works advancing in price at an alarming rate. Paper, ink, type, metal are away up in price, and going higher, it would seem. Some of these days you will see the newspapers printed on what looks like a cheap grade of wrapping paper, because they can't be whitened nor toned up as they should be.

They are starting a movement in Detroit to induce people to save rags and paper scraps, so alarming is the scarcity of raw materials. The price of rags used in making some paper has quadrupled since the first of the year. The price of bleach has jumped from one cent to fifteen cents.

Other elements used in paper making show equally startling price advance. Paper men state that the clay required for coating high-grade paper in the "calendar" process was largely imported from Germany and cannot be obtained now.

Aniline dyes, chiefly produced in Germany, sold for 40 cents a pound in 1914. Now some of the difficult colors run as high as $22 to $30 a pound.

Bleach, whose elements are now being used to make chlorine gas, formerly sold at nine cent per pound and now sells at 15 cents.

Sulphite pulp, which is used in medium grade papers for books, magazines, catalogs and bound papers, was formerly worth but $10 to $15 a ton. It now sells at $90 to $100 a ton.

Even enamel, which was imported for finishing processes, has quadrupled in price, since it is used for making cheese for the soldiers.

Articles such as soda ash have gone "sky high," according to the jobbers, and all the paper mills are from five weeks to one year behind their orders.

War is no unmixt blessing to the newspaper publisher.

Why do merchants encourage the credit system? You answer that you don't. Yes, but you do. If the system were not encouraged by the merchants it would not be in existence to-day. Did you ever stop to think that the mercantile community of the country are the only body of men that tolerate the credit system? Let's see you buy postal notes, postage stamps, money orders, etc., on credit. Try it and see what you will be told. Go to the theatre and you pay money. Express companies demand cash. Railroad tickets are cash on delivery to the purchaser. Why should not a merchant demand cash? Simply because he encourages the credit system. It may be an impossibility to completely eradicate the system, but strict limitations on credit is a step on the right road and its evolution will be practically a basis system of doing business. It is worth a trial and should be started at once. It would quickly spread and when it does it will solve the great problem for all time. When sifted down it would be found that the credit system is the progenitor of and responsible for more evils that affect the financial business than all other agencies combined. Not only this, but it fosters extravagance—the purchaser buys goods which can well be done without.—Industrial World.

The dissatisfaction of members of the Grange over the demoralization of the rural mail service has certainly not abated. Mortimer Whitehead, editor of the National Field, expresses the opinion that the Post Office Department undertook to reduce expenses by curtailing the rural delivery service on the theory that the farmer is "easy" and "won't kick like the other fellow." Commenting upon this, Mr. Whitehead says: "We'll see if he won't kick this winter and at the ballot box next fall. That's business for the farmer and all the rest of us." Mr. Whitehead insists that this is not a partisan question, but that the farmers must make their protest felt in a substantial manner.

WHEN a congressman's ideas of preparedness consist of sending out garden seeds to the voters of his district he is the wrong kind of a congressman.

AND some men never realize how mean they have been until they run for office.

MARCH came in like a German offensive.

GEE! Give us some of the hunk.

New Variety of Cotton in Egypt.
Consul General Olney Arnold of Cairo reports the development of a fine new variety of Egyptian cotton, which has been named pangalo, having been produced by careful selection on Mr. Pangalo's estate at Mit Ghamr. Mr. Arnold adds that this new cotton, which is brown and of a most silky texture, has a staple which is probably stronger than any of the other varieties of Egyptian cotton. One of the most characteristic features of the plant is its shortness and the fact that it is covered with bolls, over 100 having been found on a single plant.

Remedy For Sticking Tires.
Just in the rim of a wheel makes it difficult to remove the tire. When tires are removed scrape the rim or rub it with emery or sandpaper. Then apply ordinary stove polish or graphite both to the rim and to the bead of the tire. If this be properly done the tire will not stick the next time it is removed.

Farm and Garden

KEEPING CABBAGES.

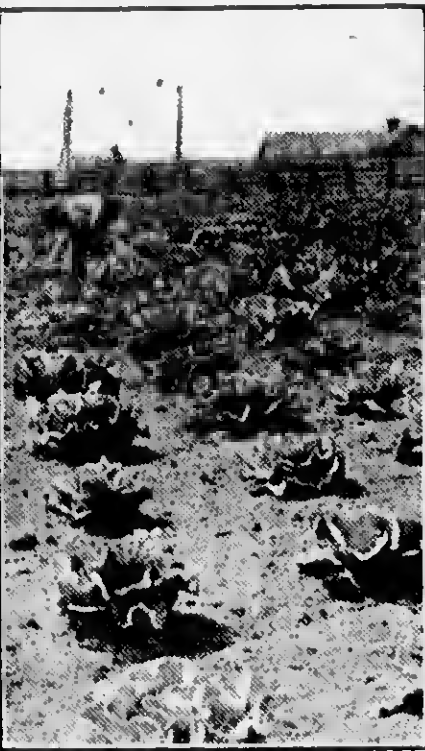

Can Be Stored For Winter Use in a Barrel Out of Doors.

When the cellar is too warm and you must devise a plan to keep a few cabbages for family use try putting them in a barrel out of doors. Put a headless barrel into the ground, leaving the top slightly above the surface, and put in the clean trimmed heads. Leave room enough at the top to put in a little clean straw or hay—or papers—and spread an oilcloth over it or some boards to keep the rain out.

It does not harm even if the cabbage freeze, and you can open your cache any time in winter and take out a head.

But one may say: "Oh, that's no good. I've tried it and they all rotted." The answer to that is, "You may have tried it, but you didn't do your work carefully." Failure will follow careless disregard of rules.

In following any such plan use a little good horse sense. You must plan to keep water out of the barrel, so let it be tight enough to keep out seepage. Then so fill up and level the surface that the drainage will be away from the barrel. Another point is that the cabbage must be carefully trimmed, removing every broken or decaying leaf and putting in only sound, smooth heads. If you put in any rubbishy you not only invite decay, you make it certain.

It is well to put a few sticks in the bottom to leave an air space. And do not try to see how closely you can pack them, but rather lay them in loosely and so place them that there will be air spaces all through.

If you aim to keep the frost out it will require considerable covering, and if you do that you will be likely to make your cache too warm and that will induce rot. The best way is to plan to keep the cabbage close to the freezing point and far better have it frozen than too warm. But if it freezes it must be kept frozen, for it will never do to have it freezing and thawing out a half dozen times during the winter.

After the cabbage is in and you have filled up the top of the barrel with a little clean straw or hay, rounding it up in the center, then put over a piece of oilcloth or heavy canvas. This is to turn off the water. Have it large enough so that all of the dripping will be outside the barrel. Then turn a square box over it and it is done. The box should be just big enough to hold the cloth in place.

Barnyard Manure.
Barnyard manure has value on the farm aside from that as a fertilizer. It improves the physical conditions of the soil and makes it easier to handle. Its decay produces heat and its presence aids chemical and bacterial processes. Moreover, it absorbs and holds a large amount of water and helps to aerate the soil. The benefits of these indirect aids to plant growth are in some cases worth as much as the fertilizing power of the manure.

These are observations made by F. L. Kennerd, agronomist in the northwest experiment station at Crookston, Minn., in response to numerous questions received from farmers.

When it is added that barnyard manure is worth perhaps $2.50 a ton and that each farm animal produces from five to seven tons per 1,000 pounds of live weight each year, it is easy to see that as a fertilizer the material should not be wasted.

The best practice is to haul the stuff directly from the barn to the fields. If this is done there is little loss through fermentation or leaching.

Marketing and Co-operation.

It is not enough to grow a good crop or even to grow a good crop at low cost. To make a big crop a business success it must be disposed of as efficiently as it is grown—must be so graded and packed as to meet market standards and so marketed as to bring the farmer the highest current price. The farmer who is too suspicious to get together with his neighbors in order to do co-operatively what no one can do alone is sure to pay dearly for his incapacity for team work.

MAKES CAR RUN STRAIGHT.

New Form of Axle Lightens Work of Auto Driver.

A new feature in automobile construction that is expected to add greatly to comfort and convenience in driving is an arrangement of the front axle that causes the front wheels to straighten out automatically with reference to the car body after the car has turned a corner, says Popular Mechanics.

In the ordinary type of car the axle of the knuckle joint on which the front wheel is turned in steering is vertical while in the new car the axle of the joint is inclined so that the lower end of the joint is ahead of the upper end. The entire axle is built on this angle and, owing to the drop in the middle of the fixed axle, the supports of the front end of the car body are an inch or more ahead of the wheel center.

The spring supporting the body is also inclined at this angle, the front end being several inches higher than the rear end, and as a result of this the weight of the car acts as a thrust forward on the axle. This thrust combined with the fact that the supports of the car are ahead of the wheel centers causes the wheels when freed from the control of the steering column to trail into position at right angle to the fixed axle, for exactly the same reason that a caster trails into line when an article of furniture is being moved. With the knuckle joint inclined in the way described, the wheels lean inward toward the center of the curve when the car is rounding a corner.

SCHOOL VENTILATION.

Cloth Screens Take Place of Glass Windows in New System.

A way to ventilate schoolrooms without giving the pupils colds has been tried successfully in Syracuse, N. Y., by John B. Todd, M. D., and is described by him in the New York Medical Journal.

In these "fresh air schoolrooms" the lower sash is raised in four or five windows and the opening fitted with a wood frame covered with medium weight unbleached sheeting. The room in which the experiment was first tried had five 30 by 40 inch windows facing the east. Steam pipes extended across the room under the windows, and a hot air inlet thirty inches square was on the north side, midway from the floor to the ceiling, with an exit opening of the same size near the floor.

In the morning before the school opened the room would be warmed by hot air driven by a fan. When school began this hot air inlet would be closed and all the windows opened, so that there would be fifty square feet of open window space guarded by the tulleen screens.

"The cold fresh air," says Dr. Todd, "would suffice slowly into the room and would be met by the hot air rising from the steam pipes, so that there were no perceptible drafts. Children sitting within four feet of the open windows all the winter days experienced no inconvenience. The temperature of the room was maintained at 68 to 70 degrees as easily as before the screens were used."

The fresh air schoolrooms, he says, are free from odors. He urges the abolition of the system of ventilation by fans, which, he says, bring in dust and leave it there.

Air Drills.

The simple rotating drill for hand use fills a very important place among the useful tools of any metal or wood-working shop. This form of drill usually consists of an air motor, either of the piston or turbine type, inclosed in a casing and geared to a drill spindle. The machine usually has two handles for the convenience of the operator, the lighter machines having only one, the "spoke" handle. The air is admitted through one of the handles, the throttle being arranged so that it is always under the hand of the operator. On some of the lighter drills a breast-plate is furnished for the workman to use in forcing the drill into the work. On heavier types a bracket or "old man" holds the drill in place, and the bit is forced into the work by a feed screw—Engineering Magazine.

Fatigue of Metals.

Experience has shown that engines do break down from fatigue, says Pawer. Two beam engines built from the same patterns were supplied for driving a large textile mill. Both engines were put to work at the same time and under the same conditions. After working for nearly twenty years the beam of one engine broke. Within a short time the beam of the other engine similarly failed. During the years these engines had been running each beam had made about 200,000,000 oscillations.

Aluminum and Copper.

The most important of the fifty alloys of aluminum and copper is said to have 92 per cent of aluminum and 8 of copper. With a tensile strength of 20,000 pounds, its special fault is excessive shrinking in casting.

At Last—A One-Adjustment Cream Separator

BEFORE you buy any cream separator, come in and look at the Primrose. One adjustment is all that is necessary to keep it in perfect operating condition at all times. This adjustment is a simple one for keeping the bowl at the correct height—an adjustment that you or your wife can safely make, whenever it's necessary. The adjustment is made from the outside of the separator by either raising or lowering the bearing containing the hardened steel point, upon which the spindle revolves. A slight turn with a screwdriver, perhaps once a year, does the work. The Primrose is a well-constructed, close-skimming, durable cream separator. It will make a saving of $10.00 to $15.00 per cow in your herd every year. It is made in four sizes to separate 350 to 850 pounds of milk per hour, or from about 40 to 98 gallons. Ask for a catalogue giving a complete description, or, come in and look over the Primrose yourself.

Grange Column

Ellsworth Grange, No. 1196
Meets every two weeks on Tuesday evening.
Attendance of visiting members requested.
Master—D. E. Carpenter.
Lecturer—D. Patterson.
Secretary—Ava L. Bearss.

(Too late for last week.)
Grange was not called to order last Saturday afternoon. Instead a debate was held. The debate was "Resolved, That Antrim Should Have a County Agent." The affirmative side was at odds by having a loss of one man, as Mr. Brail was called away. However, D. E. Carpenter took his place and did very nicely. The debate was fiery and warlike. The sides were lined up as follows:

Affirmative	Negative
E. R. Harris	L. K. Clark
B. Ruel Chellis	E. A. Dean
DeWitt Patterson	E. J. Chellis
D. E. Carpenter	C. E. Bearss

E. R. Harris had the rebuttal. It was a long and stormy contest. As there were no judges, the result was not proclaimed. However, the affirmative side claims the victory and so does the negative.

LOST TO EAST JORDAN

Home Team Goes Down to Defeat by a Score of 29 to 15.

On Saturday night of last week the Ellsworth basketball team went down to their first defeat on the home floor before an East Jordan team by a score of 29 to 15.

Patterson, the regular forward, was unable to play, causing much shifting about, which put the team to the bad in the way of teamwork. The boys also have not had any practice since the last game, some three weeks ago.

Cross, the huge center of the East Jordan team, played a star game and made nearly all the points for his team, both in field baskets and foul throws. The lineup:

East Jordan		Ellsworth
Dicken	Forward	Brail
Milford	Forward	Townsaend
Cross	Center	Chellis
Jepson	Guard	Fowler
Porter	Guard	Smith

Score:

First half—East Jordan 9; Ellsworth 7.

Second half—East Jordan 20; Ellsworth 8.

have to say about cream separators this week

It will be worth your while to find out what some of your neighbors who use De Laval Cream Separators think of their machines before you buy any separator.

About the best thing we can say for the De Laval is that all the farmers around here who use it are boosters.

It does good work for them and pleases them, and we know it will please you.

Make it a point to ask your neighbor about his De Laval

There are nearly two million satisfied De Laval users throughout the world. More De Laval Separators are in use than all other makes combined. It isn't the cheapest, but the majority of separator users have found out by experience that it is the best and by far the most economical separator to own.

We want to tell you about an arrangement we have whereby you can make partial payment at time of purchase and pay the balance on such liberal terms that the De Laval will save its cost while you are paying for it.

Come in and see us the first time you have a chance and talk it over.

Sooner or later you will buy a DE LAVAL

GOOD ROADS AND PREPAREDNESS

State and Government Aid Advocated For Highways.

THE NATION'S ARTERIES.

A. G. Batchelder Says That the Country Must Have a Maximum Opportunity For the Maximum Transport of Men and Munitions by Means of the Motorcar and Roads.

Roads of America may mean the very existence of the nation, according to A. G. Batchelder, chairman of the executive board of the American Automobile association. Roads that go somewhere, arteries of communication that bind the nation together, roads serving to the fullest extent commercial and social and possibly military needs—these are the highways now demanded and obtainable by that logical federal co-operation with the several states which has been accentuated by the facts set concisely forth in the stupendous European conflict, according to Mr. Batchelder. The chairman points to the fact that in exactly the same manner as it became necessary that the states should help their county units in the construction of comprehensive road systems it is now essential that the national government shall lend aid to its state parts in the early realization of a road plan that will in the greatest degree weld together coast and coast and lakes and gulf.

Mr. Batchelder says that the country must have a maximum opportunity for the maximum transport of men and munitions, and the motorcar and the roads are the means for its accomplishment. Thirty thousand miles of road would gridiron the entire United States with interconnecting and interlocking highways and would embrace every state in the Union, giving each one a big main artery for highway travel, according to Batchelder, who believes that four direct east and west roads from the Atlantic to the Pacific, with one "Y" from the great lakes to the Pacific coast along the northern border, five north and south roads—border to border—and three prominent diagonals for important interconnections would be included in this total mileage. At $10,000 per mile Mr. Batchelder estimates that this would mean a road requirement of $300,000,000. This $10,000 per mile is based on an average of extremes from low cost because of topography and nearly material to high cost per mile because of contra-conditions, and the figures also include bridges and culverts. At the present population and the normal increase during the period of ten years this would mean an equated payment of 31 cents per inhabitant per year. Mr. Batchelder points to the fact that a state which does not provide interstate road connection with adjoining states is plainly at a disadvantage and says that a road brings commensurate value for the expenditure and is available to those living in the territory traversed, as well as those who come from a distance. He believes that the commonwealth should build arteries of communication and meet the wants of the largest number of people just as it is done by the railroads.

Congress and Road Building.

At a meeting of its executive board the American Automobile association went on record as favoring federal aid in a good roads measure which has been drafted by the executive committee of the American Association of State Highway Officials. Briefly, the bill provides for national and state co-operation on whatever roads may be mutually decided upon, with the state matching every federal dollar it receives on the basis of its area, population and road mileage in proportion to the total for the whole country.

It seems to be generally recognized that any bill which the congress of the United States will pass is likely to include a requisite that a state shall establish a highway department in order to have a centralized direction in construction and maintenance of roads. Just six of the forty-eight states have yet to establish highway departments. Georgia, South Carolina, Mississippi, Nebraska, Indiana and Texas are the six states which have yet to recognize the need of a state highway department.

Cost of Hauling Contrasted.
In 1905 France expended $500,000,000 on her roads, the best in Europe, about $15.38 per capita.

It costs 7 cents a ton per mile to haul tonnage upon her public roads, an average of 25 cents per ton per mile in the United States, 18 cents per ton per mile more than in France. Over 2,000,000,000 tons in this country are hauled seven miles average upon the road. Thus average haul upon the public road before it reaches rail or water transportation costs $1.20 per ton more for seven miles than it would cost in France, a loss we pay in haulage of freights for the privilege of having bad roads of $7,500,000,000 a year. The French average, $15.38 per capita, on our 100,000,000 of population would be $1,538,000,000.

School Commissioner's Notes

"The Agent Man"

Will the Germans take Verdun? Why of course they will. Oh, no, I'm not German, but I love their language and I love their literature. They are a gritty race, aren't they? Well, here we are at the school house. School has just closed, Mr. Schmidt. Air isn't very much like the outdoors, is it? What you'd call stuffy, you know. All the good gone out of it, used up in the lungs and then filled with poisons that those boys and girls eat out in every breath. I hate this stuffy air, don't you?

"Ach, it isn't so good yet, but sometimes we open the windows. It don't matter so much already."

It is in the warm weather that you open the windows, I suppose. Then you don't cool the room off too suddenly and waste your wood. It costs like everything, you know. Of course the thing I was thinking of mostly was the danger in such air as this. You know people have to have air to live, but it's just one part of the air that we use. You couldn't think that air was a mixture, would you? Well it is. We use the oxygen that is in it. That is what keeps us warm. It kills germs and it gives us strength to fight sickness of every kind. Our lungs are regular separators. You ought to see the little disks working. Why they just take out that oxygen, it's the cream you know, and send it right into the blood, but the carbon dioxide in the air isn't any good for us at all. So it just goes right out again and there you are. When the boys and girls have breathed and exhaled every bit of air in this room. The rest of the day they are breathing the same air over and over again. It can't help but weaken them.

"The air comes in the cracks yet?"

"Oh, yes, surely Mr. Schmidt, but do you like to have Heine sit near one of those cracks?"

"Not so gut. Mein Frau, she wants teacher to stuff them; we have rags in ours at home already."

"I suppose so. You know Mr. Schmidt we use to think we just had to be sick a part of the time in the winter. We doctored through all the cold weather and then shut ourselves up in close room and breathed in all the poisoned and separated air we could. In the spring we take sulphur and molasses to get rid of these poisons. Of course we know now that it isn't the cold weather at all. It's just had air. Is at so?"

"It certainly is. Ask your German doctors. Ask any doctor. Have nothing but fresh air evenly hot or evenly cold and you'll never have a sore throat. Do you know if our homes and school houses were properly heated and ventilated we could do away with three fourths and maybe all of the catarrh? Inflamed tonsils come from weakened throat conditions and many of those dreaded operations are from the same cause. Our whole state, our whole nation is ringing with the fight against consumption and no animal that never slept under a roof made by man has ever had consumption. Consumption cannot thrive in the open. In the sunshine and God's great out of doors, it's little bacilli wither and are no more. I tell you, man, if we are to keep this disease from taking two from every ten students in this school we've got to bring the out doors right into this room. We've got to warm the outdoors and bring it into this workshop for our boys and girls."

"And how you do that?"

"Just as easy as can be. You see, you have a pretty good stove here. It's about the right size and a pretty good shape. The one we make is a little heavier, that is all to stand extra firing. Well, suppose you had a hole right through the wall of this building here about a foot or two from the floor."

"Vy you do that?"

"We do that to get fresh air and then we pipe it straight to the stove. Around the stove we put a jacket that shuts the cold air in until it is warm. When your kitchen get pretty warm, Mr. Schmidt, have you ever noticed that it is warmest near the ceiling and coldest near the floor?"

"Himmel, the floor he's always cold."

"Of course, when you have an ordinary stove. Now notice what this jacketed stove does. The cold air is boxed in until it is warm, then it rises, the cold air keeps coming in, forces it right out of there and it settles down all over the room, warm and fresh, an even temperature in every part of the room. You don't have one or two scorched to a sizzle and the rest freezing. But I'm getting switched of here. It is so wonderful, that I forget I'm selling it and go off into raptures about it."

"Ja dat is a gut system."

"Oh, but the heat is yet to come. That air as it came down would get cool again and would be impure after the children had used up the oxygen. Well, we care for that too. We have a pipe—a flue that draws that foul stuff right off from the floor and sends it out of the roof."

"How so it do that?"

"This is the way it do that. It is heated in one place so that the air in that flue just has to rise, but it comes from the floor. All the air that enters has to come from the floor. That's what we'd do with all this stuffy air here, send it right out of the roof."

"I think maybe that's a pretty good stove already."

"It's guaranteed to work. We can show you a hundred schools using this stove and glad to recommend us. You will never regret signing your name here, Mr. Schmidt."

"How much cost it?"

"Oh that depends on the size and the make. We can give you a pretty good one for $125. You will save that much in doctor bills in one year."

"You think so. I think maybe the treasurer and mein brudder Heinrich say that is pretty much. They have no heard you talk."

"Oh, but I've seen them, too. They leave it all with you."

"Ach, it is a gut stove. Ja, but the district. She is poor. Our tax, she is so heavy. We pay $50 every month to that teacher already. The district maybe they no want me to buy that stove."

"Now I thot of that, Mr. Schmidt, and they have all signed their names here, see. They want you to take it."

"Ach, mein Gott, ja, I buy him."

Suffrage Notes

Montana has cleaned up her polling places. One of the objections sometimes urged against equal suffrage is that the polls are not fit places for women. The interesting thing is that when women are granted the ballot, presto! the polling places are cleaned up. The Butte Miner says: "Arrangements are made for polling places which will afford better surroundings than have heretofore been provided."

Harry Lauder, the famous Scotch comedian, says emphatically: "I believe that women should have an equal right with men in voting. I am a firm believer in equal suffrage."

The ballot is an educator and women will become more practical and more wise in using it.—Edward H. Griggs.

Newton D. Baker, the newly-appointed secretary of war, is a suffragist of long standing. He is the youngest member of President Wilson's cabinet. Mr. Baker is a member of the Men's League for Woman Suffrage of Cleveland and speaks for suffrage whenever a chance comes up. Mrs. Baker is a staunch suffragist and has taken part in a number of pageants for the cause. —Woman's Journal.

Philadelphia women are trying to follow the example of Kansas women in demanding proper care in the handling of food in stores and market places. It is declared that food exposed for sale when uncovered soon becomes unfit for use.

The New York Evening Post in speaking of the recent appointment of a woman inspector for women and children in factories says: "She will do what men inspectors cannot do. They do not understand women's needs. She will work first to preserve the health of the women and children. This is not usually thought of by men."

SYNOPSIS.

Dudley Larnigan, district attorney of New York, attacks the liquor and vice trusts. He is killed by an agent of a secret society, the committee of fifteen. His son, Bruce Larnigan, is elected district attorney and takes up the fight. Bruce is in love with Dorothy Maxwell, whose father is head of the insurance trust. Bruce Larnigan is decoyed to an evil resort in an effort to frame him up. He beats the conspirators by having the police commissioner present. A fire starts in a tenement across the way. Larnigan saves the children of Dow, one of the conspirators. This man agrees to expose the trust. He is murdered by the gang.

BRUCE LARNIGAN'S crushing defeat of the insurance trust, resulting in the murder by the graft syndicate itself of Anton Dow, who was about to give Bruce evidence against the fifteen, served to show Stanford Stone and the remaining members of the graft syndicate that in Bruce they faced a foe far more dangerous to them than his murdered father had ever been.

Stanford Stone, the secret head of the powerful graft syndicate, had despised Bruce in the beginning. Now he was beginning to fear him. And the fact that he was in love with Dorothy Maxwell, the girl who was Bruce's fiancée, only increased his determination to get rid of Bruce.

It was impossible for Stanford Stone to work in the open. It seemed to him vitally important to add secret his own connection with the graft syndicate. Even Bruce Larnigan was so far from suspecting it that after the death of Anton Dow he could count on his plans for the future to Stone.

"Dow's death is unfortunate," he told Stone. "He was a villain, but he was about to turn over a new leaf. He would have been a useful witness too. However, I have other lions in the fire. I am more and more convinced that all the graft in this city runs ultimately to a central spot; that one man dominates all the corrupt elements. I can't strike at any particular form of graft, no matter what it may be, without weakening that great central power."

"That sounds reasonable," said Stone sympathetically.

"Now, for instance," said Bruce, "I am planning to look into the operations of the traction trust. I am convinced that whole organization is riddled with graft and that the city is being looted right and left in connection with the new subways. I haven't got all my evidence yet, but I'm going after it. And I may need your help."

"I am at your service," said Stone. "As I've told you before, I feel, as a public spirited citizen, that it is my duty to uphold you in the fight you have undertaken."

But no sooner was Stone alone than his face was transformed and twisted by hate and malice. Without delay he sent for Amos Black, one of his confidants. He told Black that Larnigan must be killed.

Black was one of a number of characters of the underworld through whom Stone worked at times.

Through men and women known to him he got into touch with Bruce Lar-nigan's chauffeur. This man, seemingly respectable and actually faithful enough to Bruce, had a dark spot in his life. Black managed to learn of this and so got the man nearer to his grip. He arranged to have Bonner drive Larnigan through the park while gunmen were planted there.

Stanford Stone by means of a dictaphone was able to keep in close touch with Black's movements, since he never for a moment trusted Black. On the day after his conversation with Bruce, however, Stone, listening over the dictaphone, added with approval.

"We're not really together, Mr. Stone," she said gaily. "I'm looking for papa. I thought he might be here."

"I'm sorry he isn't, Miss Dorothy," said Stone. "But if you'll call up Boyd Penrose's office I think you'll get him. I'll take Larnigan outside while you telephone."

Dorothy smiled her thanks. She was left alone and by pure accident picked up the dictaphone receiver. To her horror and amazement she heard Black giving the final orders for Bruce's murder. Her heart almost stopped, but she managed to control herself and heard enough to put her in possession of all the details of the plot. Then, schooling her features, she went out and joined Bruce and Stone.

"I think I'll go straight home. I can't reach papa," she said. "Coming, Bruce?"

He nodded a farewell to Stone and went down with her. At the curb she seized his arm.

"Bruce, where are you going?" she asked herself.

"To see an old friend—Jim Stevens," he said. "He's a newspaper man, and we're going to pull off a stunt together."

"Let me take you there," she urged. "Please, Bruce! Send Bonner home alone. I want to show you how my new car runs."

He thought nothing of her request and was glad to yield. Bonner, startled and dismayed, saw what had happened, and at once, instead of going home as he was told to do, he hurried to Black.

"Larnigan!" said Black. "Well, we'll have to get those fellows and plant them near Larnigan's house. Come on, take me through the park. It's riskier, but that can't be helped."

Bonner obeyed. They hurried into the park, and at the fatal spot, as Black stood up, a volley rang out. The gun men had mistaken their employer for their victim. Black fell dead!

Meanwhile Dorothy had waited for Bruce during his talk with Stevens and had then driven him home. They found Mrs. Larnigan in tears. The holder of the mortgage on her house had arbitrarily refused to give her more time, and her lawyer had told her that he had found no one willing to take it up, good as was the security.

Bruce saw his life in a plot on the part of the fifteen to push him, that Dorothy, without telling him of her intentions, determined to save him.

"Everything will come out all right," Dorothy assured Bruce.

She had some property of her own, and she went straight to her father and asked him to advance her a large sum on certain securities. He laughed as he did so, giving her the money in cash.

"What do you want it for?" he asked.

She told him, and, though she saw the startled look that came into his eyes, she did not know the reason nor that it was Roger Maxwell's insurance company that had threatened to foreclose on Mrs. Larnigan's house. Yet it was true—she had unwittingly deflected a plan suggested by her father and Stanford Stone.

Maxwell said nothing to Dorothy of the truth. Perhaps he dared not. Perhaps it was because just after he learned what she meant to do that he had died. He was old and his daughter, Mabel, one of Dorothy's best girl friends, were announced. Penrose was head of the traction trust. He and Maxwell had many interests in common. And in the course of the talk the incident of the mortgage seemed to be forgotten.

It was the next day that Bruce and his friend, Jim Stevens, the reporter, went to work on the new subway, having decided that this was the best chance they had to secure first hand evidence of an incontrovertible sort against the trust. Nor were they wrong. In a very short time they discovered the truth of what they had suspected—that a city inspector was being bribed to pass an inferior grade of cement in the construction work.

"The graft in that might run to millions!" said Jim, appalled. "And the danger—my God! The whole thing will collapse in any minute."

"Get the facts down—and print them!"

them," said Bruce. "I'll stay here to get more evidence if I can. I don't think they suspect us yet."

Stevens obeyed. But at the office of his paper instead of being praised for his enterprise in securing a wonderful story he was bitterly attacked by his managing editor. Stevens had not known it himself, but his paper was a tool of the graft syndicate and was preparing at that moment to launch a bitter attack upon Bruce Larnigan. The story Stevens turned in was torn up. He himself was suitably discharged.

But that, as it turned out, was a false move, for it only roused the fighting blood of Stevens. He went from newspaper to newspaper, until finally in the office of the Independent he found an editor with courage enough to face the consequences of defying the trust.

"They may smash us," he said, "but Larnigan is in the right, and we'll back him up. We'll begin by printing your story and putting you on our staff. Go out and get as much more stuff of this sort as you can."

A new danger threatened, however. For Stanford Stone had been in the office of Stevens' paper talking to the managing editor when the reporter made his report. Unseen by Stevens, he had heard everything and so knew that Bruce, in disguise, was working as a laborer in the subway. And once he saw a chance to crush his enemy, he went to Penrose, and the two concocted a new scheme for Bruce's destruction.

Bruce, suspecting nothing, was pleased by the praise that Kelly, ostensibly "Everything will come out all right," said Dorothy.

the foreman of the work, but actually the personal representative and graft collector of Penrose, gave him for his work.

"Sure, and you do well for a greenhorn," said Kelly. "I'll be after raising your pay and giving you better work to do."

Bruce grinned his thanks. He was disposed to like Kelly and to believe that the man did not understand the rottenness of the work that was being done. Kelly, as was afterward to appear, was a good actor wasted on the job he held. He refused, in spite of Penrose's urgency, to be hurried.

"You'd be wanting him to smell a rat," he said. "It's no fool, that lad. He takes careful handle—such as he gets from me. Leave it to me. Mister Penrose. I'll see that he goes to kingdom come. Leave it to Kelly!"

Day by day Kelly saw to it that Bruce got better work and more important to do. He praised him, encouraged him. And he did not let Bruce's suspicions, so that when at last he was ready to strike Bruce trusted him.

"It's time you learned the lesson. That's the work that pays," said Kelly. "Take this dynamite cartridge, now, and carry it into the tunnel. The place to set it is marked with a red cross. The hole the drill has made there. You see, you carry the wire along. Then when you come back you report and make the connection—and bang! Away it goes! Don't be dropping that stick!"

Bruce obeyed working his way into the tunnel. But above, where Kelly came out, Penrose was waiting by the electric switch.

"Alas does it hurt?" said Kelly. "Give him time to get the end and start back. Then I'll push the switch—and good night Larnigan!"

"Splendid!" said Penrose. "Here, I must get my cut out. They're in the tunnel. I don't want them to take any chances."

Dorothy and Mabel, indeed, were near by. And Dorothy had recognized Bruce. She had an accomplice in the fact that few of her friends suspected she could read lips. And so, though out of hearing, she knew what Kelly and Penrose had said. At once she slipped into the tunnel after him.

"Come quickly!" There's a plot to kill you!" she screamed. "Drop that stick and run! Don't ask me how I know!"

Bruce obeyed. Together they ran for the street. And just as they got out of the tunnel there was a dull roar behind them. Bruce had escaped.

But the blast had unforeseen consequences, for the rotten cement gave way, the street fell in, and Brad Penrose, sitting in his automobile, was swept to his death.

Lines.

Railroads, poems, plays, drawings, thoughtful brows, palms of hands and geometry are made up of lines.
Lines sometimes have a president and a board of directors, and presidents and boards of directors usually have lines. The care of lines produces lines of care.
Fishes and sentimental young ladies are frequently caught with lines.
Poets formerly were much given to inditing certain lines to young ladies, but the modern lady who desires certain lines usually goes to a modiste.

The Real Albanians.

South of Valonia lies the only part of Albania where the people call themselves Albanians, or something like it. It is said, according to Sir Charles Elliot, that the names Arboer and Arboere are applied to this region and its inhabitants. The natives of the rest of the country know what is meant when Turks speak of Aruants and Erupeants of Albanians, but they do not use this name themselves, preferring to be called Shkylpetar, which means eagle men. Northern Albanians are also generally known as Ghegs, southern Albanians as Tosks, but these names are considered not quite complimentary.—London Telegraph.

MUDHOLES AND RUTS IN ROADS

Some Expedients For Making Them Passable.

DRAG THE EARTH HIGHWAYS

Temporary Repairs to Roads Should Be Confined to Emergency Measures. Unusual Conditions, However, Often Occur, and in Such Cases Use of Makehills Is Justified.

(Prepared by United States department of agriculture.)

Temporary repairs to roads are or at least should be confined to emergency measures. In proportion to the results obtained temporary work is always expensive and is never justified by ordinary conditions. Unusual conditions, however, often occur to plague the road man. For example, the closing of a main highway to traffic because of construction, repair or wash-outs may suddenly throw a heavy traffic for a short time on a little used and probably unimproved highway. Clearly in such a case temporary expedients are legitimate.

The most common troubles met with in a case of this kind are mudholes and ruts if the soil is heavy and dust and loose sand if the soil is light or sandy.

On a clay or gumbo road mudholes usually cause the most trouble. As water is absolutely necessary for the existence of a mudhole, any treatment, whether temporary or permanent—in character, must provide for getting rid of the water. The first step is, therefore, to dig a trench to the side and allow the water and mud to drain. If necessary, open up also the side ditches. Furthermore, remove all of the soft mud left in the mudhole. The bottom of the trench should be filled with broken stone or coarse gravel, so as to provide a drain to prevent any further accumulation of water. Gravel is the best material for filling the old mudhole. If gravel is not available use the best earth at hand, dumping it down in three or four inch layers. If possible, spread a little gravel or sand over the new fill, which should be made slightly higher than the adjoining road surface. The best treatment of all, however, is to keep the drainage in good condition. Serious mudholes will then rarely develop.

MUDHOLES CAUSE MUCH TROUBLE.

Don't try to fill a mudhole without first draining out the water and removing the soft mud. Don't try to fill it with large stones, because if this is done there will soon be two mudholes instead of one. Don't try to fill a mudhole with sods or similar material, which absorb water readily.
On an earth or gravel road ruts are best treated with the drag. Don't be afraid of dragging too often during a rainy spell. If a thin coat of sand or gravel be spread over the road surface when it has been softened by rain and then worked in by traffic and a liberal use of the drag a poor earth road can be much improved and made to carry a very heavy traffic for a short time.
In contrast to the clay or gumbo road the sand road gives least trouble during wet weather. On sandy roads anything that will prevent the free movement of the sand particles will be of value. As long as the road is damp the surface tension of the capillary water acts as a binder and holds the separate grains of sand in place. All efforts should, therefore, be directed toward preventing the sandy places from drying out or toward adding some binder. The addition of clay furnishes a positive binder and is really the best and most permanent treatment. The addition of any fibrous material, such as straw, spent tanbark, sawdust or pine needles is of value and, when spread on the road and covered with a thin coat of sand or allowed to work into the surface, will make an almost impassable sand road fairly good for a time. But the best way to treat a bad place, whether on a clay or a sand road, is to treat it before it gets bad. Immediate attention to small injuries will prevent later prolonged attention and extensive repairs to serious damages.

Temperance

(Conducted by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.)

PROHIBITION AND PROSPERITY.

The city of Wheeling, W. Va., has, under the first year of state prohibition, experienced the greatest building boom in its history. Other demonstrations of the stimulative nature of prohibition and prosperity are indicated in the following items (many more might be cited):

The Heymann brewery was converted into a packing plant, employing 225 men where the brewery employed 75. White Front cafe rented for $260 a month. Now as a confectionery it rents for $300.

The Senate saloon was torn down and on its site a bank is being built.

Within a distance of two blocks, buildings (some of them three-story structures), formerly occupied by liquor firms, now house a ladies' and men's furnishings firm, a wall paper store, a drug store, a butcher shop, a shoe store, a confectionery, a billiard room and an automobile agency.

There are more restaurants and hotels in the city than ever before.

The business of one shoe merchant increased 35 per cent during the year.

Number of meals served in the workhouse the last 11 wet months were 41,832. Number of meals served the first 11 dry months, 10,018. Saving to the city at ten cents per meal, $2,382.

Number of workhouse employees last wet year, 15. Number of workhouse employees the first dry month, two. This alone cut workhouse expenses $780 a month.

FIGHT MODERATE DRINKING.

From an economic viewpoint the drunkard is nonexistent. What "big business" is fighting today is "moderate drinking"—the ounce-and-a-half-a-day kind of thing. With the exception of those connected with the trade in alcoholic drinks—and their hangers-on—the entire world of business and industry is lined up against alcohol, and the battle (since drunkenness is self-confessed defeat) is being waged against moderate drinking. It is with the man who can "drink and be sober, thank heaven!" that industry is picking a quarrel. The physiologist has shown that he is morally defective—poisoned atop; the medico-actuarial man has shown that he is physically depleted, warped, defective and throws away from ten to thirteen years of his imperfect life; and "big business" has learned that economically he is so bad an investment that only in rare cases is it worth while to bother with tinkering and repairing him.—Vance Thompson in "Drink and Be Sober."

DECREASE IN CRIME.

"Five months under prohibition law have now elapsed and the results are beginning to be very apparent," says the deputy sheriff of Jefferson county, Alabama. "The decrease in crime in Jefferson county is clearly indicated by the jail records, which show a total number of state prisoners now in jail of 160, against 336 December 1, 1914, one year ago today, and this in the face of the fact that no 'straw bonds' are being taken, and that every care is taken to ascertain the absolute sufficiency of every bond approved."

The state pays thirty cents a day for feeding each prisoner in the Jefferson county jail, therefore this decrease of 176 inmates means a saving of $52.80 per day, or $15,840 per month, and of $19,008 per year.

PROHIBITION AND PROSPERITY.

State Senator Peterson of Minnesota, speaking of the men thrown out of employment in Moorhead by the closing of its saloons, says:

"The election put out of the liquor trade probably three hundred men, including the employers. Those who were wedded to the business of course had to seek employment elsewhere, but many of them elected to stay and go into other lines of work. And for such there has been abundance of work at a good wage. There has been no man in Moorhead able and willing to work who could not get employment."

"The banks have not suffered. The savings accounts have increased in number and amount and one of the banks is increasing its capital from $25,000 to $50,000."

LIQUOR A LIABILITY.

"A Zepplin is the strictest Sunday school institution there is—no drinking, no smoking. We have got to have clear heads and cool, steady nerves." So said Commander Nathy, in charge of a dirigible in an air raid upon London. "Even Germany," comments the Chicago Tribune—"a kind of United Societies among the satinos—even Germany realizes that in time of stress liquor is not an asset, but a liability."

WAR TEACHES LESSON.

The signal service the present European conflict has rendered against alcohol will be aimed in future years as a major compensation for its awful carnage. The war has not taught us that alcohol is a curse, and that traffic in it is a treason. This knowledge the world already possesses, although it had only begun to take action. The war has taught us how to deal with alcohol, how to solve the alcohol problem, how to arrive at the final prohibition that is our goal.—Daniel A. Poline

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 4 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, nor stick or graze, and does not rub off.

HO-MAYDE HAS REVOLUTIONIZED BREAD MAKING, THOUSANDS OF WOMEN TESTIFY

Absolutely dependable results in bread making are now possible under all conditions, by the use of Ho-Mayde, a Bread Improver which has been ignored by women living in all sections of the United States and Canada. The Bread Improver not only eliminates all possible chance of failures on Bake Day, but makes larger, whiter and sweeter loaves. "Ho-Mayde is an absolutely pure and wholesome product, which accelerates the yeast action and shortens the time of bread making to a considerable extent," said C. I. Chapin, general manager of the Ho-Mayde Products Co. of Detroit. "It also imparts wonderful keeping qualities to the bread which does not dry out so quickly. The loaves are not only whiter, as a result of using Ho-Mayde, but are much larger. In fact, housewives have found that Ho-Mayde makes an extra loaf with the same baking materials."

"The Ho-Mayde Products Co., which is sending sample packages of Ho-Mayde to all women upon request, has received endorsements of the Bread Improver from several women's magazines whose editors have carefully investigated Ho-Mayde. Teachers of Domestic Science have commended the Bread Improver. It has been asserted that 'Ho-Mayde will play a prominent part in reviving bread making which, for the average woman, is almost a lost art.'"

PERILOUS ATHLETICS.

Sport That Wrecks the Heart an Evil to Be Avoided.

"No one will gainsay the value and pleasure of outdoor exercise graduated to suit the needs of every individual throughout life," says the Journal of the American Medical Association, "but the species of overdoing called for in the intense competition of the great contests of our schools and colleges can no longer be defended by platitudes regarding the alleged psychological value of its competitive features. The time has come when statistics regarding latent athletic injuries must be reckoned with and the lives of our youths safeguarded by making a distinction between sane sport and insane participation in the indomitable strain of competitive games of the extreme type."

The same paper says the authorities of colleges need to be reminded in an emphatic way, in the words of Dr. H. N. Wilson of Philadelphia, that "no form of athletic event is sane that demands of the participants the semi-conscious state of heart exhaustion at its conclusion."

And it denounces the daredevil forms of "sport" that depend for their thrill on nearest possible approach to death by the actors in them, such, for example, as "looping the loop" in an airplane or driving a motorcar a hundred miles an hour. "Such," it says, "are not sport, but degeneracy."

A Strange Situation.

"Humor is a very funny thing," said Blinks. "It ought to be," said the philosopher. "Oh, I don't mean that way," said Blinks. "I mean that it is a strange thing. Now, I can't speak French, but I can always understand a French joke, and I can speak English, but I'm blessed if I can see an English joke."

"Most people are," said the philosopher. "Are what?" said Blinks. "Blessed if they can see an English joke," said the philosopher. "It is a sign of an unusually keen vision."

Stop the Grippe when It's Still a Cold

Grippe, Pneumonia, Bronchitis, all start from common colds. Head them off by using Foley's Honey and Tar Compound.

"A dose in time will save nine." A few doses of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound taken when you feel a cold coming on will save you a world of annoyance and possible distress. Dry hacking coughs must never be neglected. They irritate the throat and chest terribly. The use of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound will have a loosening soothing effect, relieving irritation and permitting sleep.

Here's a typical instance of the relief and help that comes through the use of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound: "My little girl had a severe cold a short time ago," says Mrs. D. G. Gibson, of Youngstown, O., "and coughed almost continuously. I tried lots of cough remedies and had the doctor treat her, but she did not get any better. My sister recommended Foley's Honey and Tar Compound to me and I decided to get some for my child. The first dose I gave her relieved the inflammation in her throat and after using only one fifty-cent bottle the cough had been entirely free from inflammation. Since that time I always keep a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound in the house in case of emergency, as I know it is a sure cure for coughs and colds. It was the means of saving my little girl and I recommended it highly."

A LITERARY RIDDLE.

Why Does a Woman Write Differently From a Man?

Why is it that you can always tell a story written by a man from one written by a woman? I saw the thing put to a rather severe test within the last month, with results that were startling.

Tea men and women, all of whom do considerable novel reading, had had dinner together. One of the men asked the question I put at the top of these paragraphs. He was in the Iowa home and went to some trouble to prove that the sex of authors is an easy thing to determine.

Giving to each of the nine others a pencil and piece of paper, the host proceeded to read extracts from twenty different books and magazines, selecting parts in which proper names would not identify the story. As he read each person wrote down his guess as to whether the author was a man or a woman.

Of the 180 answers made by the nine persons to the twenty tests all but eight were correct. As he kept the books from which he read, it seemed it was impossible to get rid with the eye.

But, although everybody guessed right almost every time, no one could still give a good definition of the conundrum. Why does a woman write differently from a man?—Philadelphia Ledger.

INFLAMMABLE BOMBS.

Substances Used in the Making of These Deadly Explosives.

The incendiary bomb used by the Zeppelin aircraft, as a rule, is conical, of ten inch diameter at the base, wrapped round with tarred rope and having a metal handle at the apex. The base is a fat cup, into which a pierced metal funnel is fitted, having the ignition device and handle fitted at the top.

The funnel is generally filled with thermite. The latter, upon ignition, generates intense heat and by the time of the concussion has taken the form of molten metal, having the extraordinary high temperature of 5,000 degrees F. The molten metal is spread by the concussion.

Outside the funnel is a padding of a highly inflammable or resinous material, bound on with an inflammable form of rope. The resinous material creates a pungent smoke.

There is generally some melted white phosphorus in the bottom of the cap, which develops noxious fumes. In some cases celluloid clippings are added, and occasionally a small quantity of gasoline.—Philadelphia Press.

Buildings.

Buildings are contrivances which surround trouble, despair, pleasure, entertainment, business, indolence and plumbing.

Buildings are built with brick, mortar, cement, wood, steel and mortgages. It also takes sand to build buildings, but they should not be built on sand.

Some buildings are public and some are private. Public buildings are usually very imposing, and usually the public has been imposed upon to build them. Private buildings are frequently private in name only, especially if occupied by several inquisitive women. Such buildings are made up of a large number of stories and most of them are without foundation.

Rats, mice, fleas, earthquakes and rent collectors are buildings' worst enemies.—Judge.

Long Days on Uranus.

Uranus can be claimed for a British planet. It was discovered at Bath in 1781 by the elder Sir William Herschel, the musician who became private astronomer to George III. Uranus is so distant from us and has an atmosphere so dense that little is known about the rotation, position of the axis or number of the satellites. But the inhabitants, if they exist, may console themselves for living in a temperature approaching zero with the fact that they can seldom be damned for income tax, because their year contains more than 30,000 days.—London Mail.

The Bull of Perillus.

Perillus of Athens is said to have invented for Phalaris, tyrant of Agrigento, 570 B. C., a brazen bull which opened on the side to admit victims who were to be roasted by the fire which was built underneath. The dying groans of the sufferers resembled closely the roaring of a mad bull. Phalaris greatly admired the invention and by way of test roasted the inventor first. Later the populace rose in rebellion and burned Phalaris.

Venison.

The prime joint of venison is undoubtedly the haunch, though a shoulder or neck of venison properly cooked is a very toothsome dish. The loin is best cut up into chops and cutlets, the breast being only suitable for soups, ragouts and pies.

TRUTH AND VIRTUE.

The study of truth is perpetually joined with the love of virtue, for there is no virtue which derives not its original from truth, and, on the contrary, there is no vice which has not its beginning from a lie. Truth is the foundation of all knowledge and the cement of all societies.

Force of the Imagination.

There is a story of a man who was tied up in a dark room and informed that he was to be put to death by bleeding. His tormentors made a small incision in his neck and arranged for a stream of lukewarm water to trickle down his back for fifteen minutes. At the end of fifteen minutes the man died of exhaustion. He had not lost a drop of blood, but he thought he had. Such is the power of suggestion.—London Saturday Review.

Disraeli's Humor.

I was introduced by particular request to Mrs. Wyndham Lewis, a pretty little woman, a flirt and a rattle—indeed, gifted with a volubility I should think unequalled and of which I can convey no idea. She told me she liked "silent, melancholy men." I answered that I had no doubt of it.—Letter of Benjamin Disraeli to His Sister.

Different Effects.

"The same thing will make entirely different impressions on different readers," remarked the man who writes. "Quite so," replied the lawyer. "Letters which bring tears to a girl's eyes frequently make a jury laugh."—Washington Star.

Paraguay Lace.

Lace making was taught the natives of Paraguay by missionaries two centuries ago. Today in all towns of 8,000 inhabitants many of the men and nearly all the women and children make lace collars, handkerchiefs and ladies' ties.

"COLD-CASH BILL"

"COLD CASH" was Bill Smith's motto—"just simply had to feel the 'long green'" when he paid out any money.

He often had difficulty in making correct change, and on one occasion in searching his pockets for his "roll" he found—not his money, but the hole where $51 had disappeared.

He felt a little bit "peevish" when one day he was called upon to pay a bill he "knew" he had paid some time before—couldn't show a receipt for the first transaction, however.

Smith realized there was something wrong with his system—knew it when some thin-fingered stranger "relieved" him of his purse and $20.

Smith now lets the bank handle most of his cash, and whenever he pays a bill it is a simple matter to draw a check on The Charlevoix County Bank.

Thus, in a simple, single operation Smith now makes change instantly and correctly; each check acts as a receipt, and he has a complete record of all his expenditures.

There's a lesson in this for YOU, perhaps.

ANNUAL SHAKESPEARE BANQUET

Yearly Event Held at Bartlett Hotel
Wednesday Evening.

Club Members Entertain Their Husbands—Program Was of Unusual Interest.

One of the finest events of the year was the tenth annual banquet given by the Ladies Shakespeare Study Club, at the Bartlett Hotel, on Wednesday evening, March 22nd. The guests of the evening were the husbands of the members and Mrs. Fred Hubbard of Dacatur, Indiana, a former member of the club.

At 7:30 the company sat down to a delicious banquet of seven courses. The tables were beautifully decorated in yellow and purple—the Shakespeare colors. The programs painted by Mrs. Earl Young were most artistic.

At the close of the banquet, the president, Mrs. R. W. Paddock, welcomed the guests in her cordial manner, told of some of the good times the club had on former occasions and introduced as toast-mistress of the evening, Mrs. F. W. Mayne. Mrs. Mayne, in her usual bright and witty way, filled her office most efficiently.

The first number on the program was a toast, "Is Shakespeare Dead?" responded to by Mrs. R. B. Armstrong. With many a good story and many convincing facts, Mrs. Armstrong showed in her clever way that Shakespeare still lives, "His fame holds in the orbs of the earth."

Mrs. A. A. Swinton responded to the toast, "To Our Husbands." Seated at the piano she accompanied her original descriptions to music and so cleverly was this done that one could almost guess of what husband she was going to speak by the sounds from the piano. The next number, introduced by Mrs. Auld, was a short scene from "Two Gentlemen of Verona" with Mrs. Armstrong as "Isabella" and Mrs. Swinton as "Speed," which brought down the house with merriment.

Mrs. A. A. Swinton and Miss Irene Auld rendered a piano duet, "Trot de Cavalerie," which was enjoyed by all. The program closed with a splendid toast, "To Our Country," given by Mrs. J. A. Auld, in her gracious and pleasing manner, at the close of which the company arose and sang "America." This closed one of the most successful banquets ever given by the Shakespeare Club.

M. G. WAKEMAN DEAD

Civil War Veteran and Pioneer Resident Passes Away at Boyne Falls.

March 23rd, 1916, marked the passing at Boyne Falls of another old soldier to meet his Great Commander-in-Chief, when Melvin George Wakeman, one of the few veterans of the Civil War, passed away. He was born in Wayne, Ashtabula county, Ohio, July 19th, 1837. He went into the service in February, 1862, and served till the end of the war.

He went to East Jordan in 1892 and to Boyne Falls in 1894 and could tell many interesting episodes of Northern Michigan life at that time. For many years he carried the mail between East Jordan and Boyne Falls, and in that, as in his soldier life, he was known for his faithfulness.

He leaves besides a widow three children—Lyle O. Wakeman, Mrs. Emmett Otto of Boyne Falls and Ula C. Wakeman of this city.

The funeral was held Saturday, March 25th, and the casket, as a fitting tribute to the soldier within, was draped in the folds of his beloved Old Glory.

He answered once when his country called; He gave of his manhood the best; He faithfully served till ordered to halt, And quietly went to his rest.

ANOTHER ORGANIZATION

Formed in Charlevoix County to Protect Game and Enforce Laws.

The first steps were taken at Boyne City to organize what will be known as the Charlevoix County Rod and Gun Club at a public mass meeting held on Friday night of last week. William J. Pearson of Boyne Falls, identified with the State Fish, Game and Forestry Department, is prominently connected with the movement.

According to the Boyne Citizen, the plans to organize were brought on largely by the action of the recent legislature, which has worked a decided hardship to this section, and by the co-operation between the nimrods of Boyne City and members of other organizations in the county of similar nature it is hoped to bring about a remedy of the injustice. A large number of business men are back of the movement, as well as those in the rural districts. The club was organized along lines similar to the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club and will have the support of every sportsman in this section.

Making Improvements.

The Central Garage, A. L. Hart & Son proprietors, is undergoing many changes these days, preparatory to the opening of the season. The room to the west formerly occupied by the blacksmith shop has been plastered, painted and converted into a fine salesroom. The office will also be in this room. Other parts of the huge building are being painted and put into excellent shape. These gentlemen will have the agency of the Studebaker, Oakland and Haynes automobiles this season. A fine seven-passenger Studebaker car is now on the floor for inspection and others are expected to arrive soon.

Two Meetings Friday.

There will be two meetings in the Congregational church Friday in the interests of the Campaign of Friendship and Efficiency. The first meeting will be held in the afternoon at 2:30. At 7:30 there will be a platform meeting. Two visiting pastors will be present and take part. This is in connection with a statewide movement of the same sort and a large attendance is desired.

DEATH CLAIMS C. E. CHURCHILL

Dropped Dead—Thursday Last on Street While Talking to a Friend.

Was Owner and Publisher of the Petoskey Evening News and Independent—Funeral Saturday.

C. E. Churchill, one of the oldest residents of Petoskey and owner and publisher of the Petoskey Evening News and Resorter and the Petoskey Independent-Record, died suddenly at three o'clock last Thursday afternoon from heart failure.

In 1888 Mr. and Mrs. Churchill moved to Petoskey from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, which city has since been his home. Here Mr. Churchill became connected with the Independent Democrat, of which Charles S. Hampton was editor and publisher. In 1898 Mr. Churchill opened a job printing shop which he operated until 1900. In that year in connection with E. R. Goldsmith, he purchased the Independent Democrat, which they jointly operated until 1905, when after the death of Mr. Goldsmith, he secured entire control of the paper.

Deceased was widely known and popular among the newspaper fraternity of Michigan as well as other states, being a personal friend of the editors of many papers in other states who spent their summer in Petoskey. He had spent nearly his entire life in newspaper work, and continued the management of his affairs until his death. He was at the office less often during the past year, owing to his ill health, but kept constantly in touch with the plant and spent some time there just the day before his death.

The funeral was held Saturday at 2:30 o'clock from the home, Rev. Henry Harris, rector of the Emmanuel church, officiating. The many beautiful floral offerings were a befitting testimony of the high respect in which he was held by the entire community.

Holstein Twin Calves.

Jos. Shores, manager of the Nicholls farm, south of Charlevoix, reports that they have a three-year old Holstein cow which gave birth to twin heifer calves last week. Both calves are strong and give promise of a fine addition to the Holstein herd already on the farm.

K. OF P. BLACK-FACE COMEDIANS

New Stunts Will Be Pulled Off at the Minstrel Show Wednesday.

Professor William A. Ewing Middle Man—First Appearance of Orpheum Quartette.

The Charlevoix Theater will be filled next Wednesday evening with one of the largest crowds in its history when the Knights of Pythias present their minstrels. The members are behind the proposition to a man and they are all boosting. The show will be given under the direction of Chas. H. Ferguson, who has spared no efforts to make the production something to be remembered. The music will be a combination of the latest popular songs with homely southern melodies. The Orpheum Quartette will appear with several numbers. This quartette is made up of the best male voices in the city, and it is predicted by all those who have heard them that it will soon take rank as one of the best musical combinations in Northern Michigan, barring none. This will be its first public appearance with its present personnel.

Following the tuneful, mirth-provoking opening will be given a round of side-splitting vaudeville, including such acts as the "Rabbit's Foot," "The Actor Man," "Hawshaw" and others.

Mr. Ewing, who will appear as interlocutor, has had a wide experience and his presentation of the part will give the audience the time of their lives. The fact is appreciated by a large majority of the people that there is more real pleasure and enjoyment in an entertainment of this character presented by local talent than can possibly be had from a production by professional performers, and this show will prove this beyond all controversy.

Tickets are now on sale. Exchange tickets can be obtained from any Knight of Pythias. The prices are the popular prices in Charlevoix, and every patron will get full value for his money. The sale of tickets has already gone beyond expectations and we frankly advise that you get your tickets very soon, or you may have to sit in "Nigger Heaven" to see the show.

The baseball men have been practicing out of doors for more than two weeks and are beginning to show form.

DIED AFTER A SHORT ILLNESS

East Jordan Mourns the Loss of One of Her Leading Business Men.

George G. Glenn as Citizen, Banker and Business Man Held Esteem of Entire Community.

After an illness covering less than two weeks, George G. Glenn, for more than twenty years closely identified with the business interests of East Jordan, passed away at his home in that city at an early hour on Thursday morning of last week. Death was due to the ravages of blood poisoning.

Deceased was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Glenn and was born at Leland, Michigan, February 16, 1874. With his parents he located at East Jordan in 1879 and with the exception of some two years had lived there ever since.

In 1894 he entered the Bank of East Jordan, then owned by his brother. At the death of his brother he became cashier of the bank, which position he held up to the time of his death. He was considered one of the most careful and conservative bankers of Northern Michigan and held the confidence and high esteem of both shareholders and depositors.

He also took great interest in the industrial improvement of East Jordan and in addition to being the heaviest stockholder in the State Bank of East Jordan—was one of the incorporators and a director of the East Jordan Flouring Company and of the East Jordan Clay Products Company.

He is survived by his wife, a son and two daughters. Funeral services were held Saturday morning from the home, conducted by Rev. Robert Sidebotham and attended by South Lake Lodge, No. 180, K. of P., of which he was a member.

RECEIVED PROMOTION

Ward W. Bennett Transferred to Coast Guard Station on Beaver Island.

After serving the past eleven years as a member of the Charlevoix Life Saving crew, now the Coast Guards, Ward W. Bennett has been tendered the appointment as temporary captain of the station at Beaver Island.

Mr. Bennett left Friday for the island via Cross Village, making the trip from here by team. From there he intended to accompany the mail carriers on their return trip to the island, but on account of the condition of the ice, they were hours late, and Mr. Bennett made the crossing Sunday with the help of a team and Indian companions. The crossing was strenuous and both men and team were about exhausted when the island was reached.

While the promotion is not at present a permanent one, Mr. Bennett is in line for the position of captain and circumstances may result in his occupying the place permanently.

FUNERAL HELD FRIDAY

Mrs. Elizabeth Tullock Had Been Resident of the County Since 1873.

The funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth Tullock was held Friday morning at the Barnard M. E. church, with Rev. C. E. Taggart of the First Congregational church of Charlevoix officiating, assisted by Rev. D. Rood of Norwood; singing by Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Clarke, Mrs. Joseph Clarke and George Block. Interment was made at Brookside cemetery in Charlevoix.

Elizabeth J. Parsons was born October 28th, 1842, in Cornwall, England. She came over to Ontario with her parents in 1855, where she lived until 1871, when she moved to Michigan, settling in Antrim county. In 1873 she was married to Robert W. Tullock and shortly after moved to Charlevoix. She was a woman of strong Christian character, having been a member of the Congregational church of Charlevoix ever since it was organized, and was held in high esteem by all who knew her. In recent years she had made her home with her daughter, Mrs. A. J. Bolhuis. Two brothers and two sisters, one daughter and a number of grandchildren, nephews and nieces are left to mourn her loss.

Accepts New Position.

Joseph E. Bayliss, former representative to the state legislature from Chippewa county and now connected with the Michigan Public Domain Commission, has accepted a splendid position with the Dow Chemical Company of Midland, Michigan, and will soon begin work. His many Charlevoix friends unite in wishing him success and, judging from his past record in all lines, they are confident that he will attain this.

Amberg-Dennis.

At the Methodist Episcopal parsonage in Charlevoix last Saturday, March 25, Robert Amberg of East Jordan and Miss Grace Dennis of Ellsworth were united in marriage by Rev. Q. Walker. The young couple are well known and the best wishes of their many friends are theirs.

SPRING ELECTION IS IMPORTANT

Every Voter Has Opportunity to Vote as He May See Fit.

Only Contest of Importance Is Democratic Strap for National Committee.

At the election April 3rd—besides the township tickets, which are always voted for at this time—there will be the primary ballots for preferential choice for president and national committeeman both in the Republican and Democratic parties, for national committeeman on the National Progressive, and president in the Prohibition.

The Republicans really have no serious contest. Wm. Aiden Smith is conceded to be the choice of the large majority, though the names of Wm. G. Simpson and Henry Ford, both of Detroit, appear on the ballot. Ford was really seriously recommended for the place, though he tried too late to get his name off the ballot, not being a candidate, but Simpson is only a joke.

For national committeeman, Chas. B. Warren, the present national committeeman, is the only Republican name on the ticket.

On the Democratic ticket, however, there is no semblance of a contest for president, Woodrow Wilson being the only name, but an echo of the old Progressive and stalwart contest among the Democrats in found in the opposition of Wm. A. Comstock of Alpena to Edward O. Wood, the present national committeeman of that party. But one candidate appears on the Progressive ticket, Gustavus D. Pope, who wants to be national committeeman.

The Prohibitionists also have one candidate, Wm. P. F. Farguson, who would like to run for president.

Annual Business Meeting.

The annual business meeting of the Charlevoix Historical Society to be held at Dr. F. H. Wilkinson's March 31st will be postponed until Friday night, April 7th.

SCRAP OVER FISH HATCHERY LOCATION

Investigation of Story of Disagreement Proves It to be Entirely Unfounded.

Governor Ferris Says It is Up to United States Government as to Location.

Saturday a story to the effect that Governor Ferris had recommended that the proposed fish hatchery be located at Boyne City was the current topic of conversation on the street. Various rumors were circulated which brought severe condemnation to those involved in the affair. The following article published in the Grand Rapids Evening Press of March 23 was the cause of the trouble:

"An attempt of Governor Ferris of Michigan to influence legislation favoring establishment of a government fish hatchery at Boyne City instead of Charlevoix met with little favor in Washington. Congressman Frank D. Scott had introduced a bill for the establishing of the hatchery at Charlevoix, when the governor wrote to recommend the other location. Mr. Scott wrote the governor a rather sharp reply. He stated that before introducing the bill he had consulted with the United States fish commission. He said the commission had been considering the location of such an establishment in Northern Michigan for years. It had thoroughly investigated locations and recommended Charlevoix. He believed the commission was efficient and that its recommendation should be followed."

Members of the committee having the fish hatchery proposition in charge immediately got into communication with Governor Ferris, who emphatically denied the allegations made, saying that he had not at any time interfered with the hatchery location, nor would not under any circumstances. He also stated that in his judgment the authorities at Washington were fully qualified to decide on the location of the hatchery without the advice of any outsider.

Word from Congressman Scott confirms the statements made by Governor Ferris regarding the matter and that the article was entirely without truth. He also said that he thought the hatchery would be located here and that the project would be settled within a short time.

NOT ENOUGH CHILDREN

ever receive the proper balance of food to sufficiently nourish both body and brain during the growing period when nature's demands are greater than in mature life. This is shown in so many pale faces, lean bodies, frequent colds, and lack of ambition.

For all such children we say with unmistakable earnestness: They need Scott's Emulsion, and need it now. It possesses in concentrated form the very food elements to enrich their blood. It changes weakness to strength; it makes them sturdy and strong. No alcohol.

Monday morning witnessed the third change in our school teachers for this year. Miss Georgia Scroggie, who has been teaching here for the past two and a half months, returned to her home near Bay Shore on Saturday, being unable to finish the term because of the ill health of her father. We are very sorry to lose Miss Scroggie, but we hope to have her back next year. Miss Gertrude Shapton will teach the balance of the year.

Lewis, on behalf of the class, presented George with a fine pocket Bible as a token of our esteem and appreciation of his faithful services this winter. Mrs. Lewis and the members of the class wrote their names on the fly leaf with the hope that George would not forget the school and the many good times that the class have had together. After partaking of a fine potluck lunch all departed to their homes vowing it an evening long to be remembered.

Concerning the Eel.

The habits of eels have just been carefully studied by Professor Louis Roule of the Paris Natural History museum. It is now known for a certainty that the eel is a fresh water fish only by accident. In spite of its abundance in streams and ponds at some distance from the sea the eel belongs to the ocean, whence it comes and whither it returns. It is born in the sea, where it passes the first part of its existence in a state of larva, undergoes a complex metamorphosis and begins to grow. Then it completes its growth in fresh water, where it does not reproduce. In order to spawn it must return to the sea.

Covering For Chalk Trays.

The chalk trays fitted at the lower edge of blackboards soon collect considerable chalk dust and the chalk sticks dropped into it are, therefore, disagreeable to handle. A simple way of keeping the sticks clean is to cover the trays with wire mesh which is shaped like a tray but not so deep as the chalk tray. Thus the chalk dust will fall through this screen and be out of the way of the sticks.

Metal Railroad Ties.

About 70 per cent of the ties in use on the federal railways of Switzerland are metal. Metal ties were first used on the Swiss roads in 1881, since which time they have gradually replaced to a large extent the wooden ties. Iron ties are especially recommended on the Swiss roads where a good quality of gravel is available for ballast.—American Machinist.

Chrome Leather Lacing.

Tests have shown that chrome leather lacing is of considerably higher strength than ordinary rawhide or calf-skin lacing, and it seems apparent that it develops greater serviceable strength when used in splices.

Hard Surface For Wood.

Heat together ten parts lime, twelve parts resin and one part flusced oil and, when thoroughly dissolved and hot, apply to a wood surface. This will make a coating almost as hard as stone.

The Youngest Juliet.

Phyllis Nelson-Terry was eighteen when she first played Juliet at the New theater, in London, in September, 1911. Adelaide Nelson was in her twentieth year at least when she first played Juliet in April, 1865, at Mrs. Thorne's theater, Margate. But the record as "the youngest Juliet" must be given up by both of them in favor of Mary Anderson, whose first appearance on the stage was made as Juliet when she was sixteen. That was Nov. 25, 1875, at Barney Macnulty's theater, in Louisville.—New York Times.

AN ACT OF KINDNESS

A Charlevoix Resident Speaks Publicly for the Benefit of Charlevoix People.

If you had suffered tortures from kidney trouble, Had experimented with different remedies without relief;

If you were finally cured through a friend's suggestion— Wouldn't you be grateful?

The following statement has been given under just such circumstances: Mr. Newman has used Doan's Kidney Pills.

He publicly tells of the benefit he has received.

His is a simple act of kindness to other Charlevoix sufferers.

No need to experiment with such convincing evidence at hand. Mr. Newman speaks from experience. You can rely on what he tells you.

Henry Newman, 203 Sheridan street, Charlevoix, says: "I have been troubled for years by my kidneys. I was annoyed by too frequent passages of the kidney secretions at night and I also had backache. I read of Doan's Kidney Pills and got a box at the Ivy Drug Store. They gave me great relief. I can now rest better and I don't have much backache."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Newman had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

CLASSIFYING ROCKS.

Prehistoric Oyster of Great Aid to Geologic Science.

Many thousands of years ago, before the birth of the Rocky mountains and when the shores of the Atlantic ocean and the gulf of Mexico lay far inland from their present position—when, indeed, the North American continent was relatively very small—there lived in the seas and estuaries, together with various species of oysters, vast numbers of a closely related mollusk with a twisted shell which is now known to science as exogyra. As the years passed the colonies of exogyra flourished, and the places of those that died were taken by younger members, while the old shells became entombed within the slowly accumulating deposits of sand, mud and almy ooze. In the progress of the centuries these developed in the shape and ornamentation of the shells certain changes that were sufficiently pronounced to enable the specialist of today not only to distinguish the shells of members of the original colonies from those of their descendants, but also to recognize several distinct varieties among the later shells.

In the course of time—a very long time, for we are speaking geologically—the stresses which had accumulated within the earth during an extended period of quiescence found relief in movements of the outer crust which brought about the uplift of the Rocky mountains and materially altered the shape and size of the ocean basins. The resultant shifting of the ocean currents produced changes in the temperature of the water and in the abundance and character of the food supply. The unfortunate exogyra, unlike his more hardy cousin, the oyster, was unable to adapt himself to the changing physical conditions and became extinct.

Cleaning Chamois Skin.

After chamois skins used for cleaning and polishing have been in service for some time they become dirty and grit which will mar paint work will adhere to them. They may be returned almost to their original condition, however, though the operation necessarily is lengthy. They first should be brushed with a stiff brush to remove all adhering grit, after which they should be covered with soft soap and allowed to remain several hours in a bath of hot water to which a little common washing soda has been added. Next, they should be rubbed until perfectly soft and clean, when they should be rinsed in a weak solution of soda and soft soap in hot water and hung up to dry. Chamois skins should not be rinsed in pure water, as it has a tendency to harden or stiffen them.

The Justinian Code.

The Justinian code was, as the name implies, a compilation and rearrangement of existing laws rather than a body of new laws. Justinian's commission authorizing the work was given A. D. 528. To the code the emperor added the pandects, the Institutes and the novels. These compilations were known as the Corpus Juris Civilis, or body of civil law. The Justinian code is still the basis of all French law, and many of its principles are even to this day operative in the state of Louisiana. —New York American.

All-Aboard Chestnut Specials

Billy Sunday had been holding a revival in Trenton, N.J., and one of his converts went down to Washington and called at the White House to see Tumulty, who asked: "What do they say about us back home?" The Sundayite replied:
"I'm sorry you didn't ask me that question before I was converted, as I don't use such language any more."

A Canadian judge, traveling by rail, observed a man looking about for a seat and kindly invited him into his own compartment. "Now, Pat," said the judge, "this is a splendid country, isn't it? Beats old Ireland to sticks, doesn't it?" "Oh, no, sir," said Pat; "there's few places can beat Ireland." "Come now, I am sure in Ireland it would be a long time before you could travel with a judge." "That's true, sir," said Pat,
"but then in Ireland it would be a long time till they'd make you a judge!"

A young man took his sweetheart to a ball. She wore her party dress. As they began a dance he noticed what he thought was a raveling sticking out of her sleeve. He tugged at it. It came easily, and, during the remainder of the dance, having started to wind up that raveling, he kept at it. It wasn't until the end of the dance that he had finished winding. Next morning the girl said to her mother: "Ma, an awful funny thing happened last night. You know I went to the dance. Well, when I came home and got ready for bed I found my union suit had disappeared."
Must have been a chain stitch, sure.

Had Fine Sleigh Ride.

On Tuesday evening of last week the Sunday school classes of Mrs. Quinton Walker and Miss Jessie Himes of the Methodist church drove to the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Edwards to spend the evening. About 35 were in the party.
The usual good potluck supper was served and the event proved a most enjoyable one.

THEATRICAL

"The Italian."

Pietro Donnetti, a handsome young gondoller, is in love with Annette An-cello, daughter of Trudo Ahello. Roberto Gallia, the wealthy merchant of the city, is also in love with Annette.
Annette's father gives Pietro a year in which to make good and furnish Annette with a home. If at the end of that time he has not fulfilled conditions Annette's hand is to be awarded to Gallia. The latter tells Pietro of the wonderful advantages of America. He sets up a bootblack stand in New York and before the year is out sends for his Annette and they are immediately married.

In time a baby boy is born. A gesture of the baby's similar to his own doubly endears the child to Pietro. The baby is taken ill and the doctor said it must have Pasteurized milk or die. On his way to the milk station he is set upon and robbed. He puts up a fight and is arrested. He appeals to the ward boss.
Corrigan repulses him brutally and he is sent to jail for five days. When he gets out his baby is dead. Over the empty cradle Pietro swears to be avenged on Corrigan, whom he holds responsible.

Corrigan's child is taken sick ill with brain fever. Pietro gets in during the absence of the nurse and is about to dash a heavy lampshade upon the child's head, when the sick baby puts its arm under its chin in a manner identical with Pietro's baby. The gesture softens Pietro's heart and he leaves the room, foregoing his revenge for the sake of his own little Antonio.

Apples and Morality.

Coleridge would have been in sympathy with the prison governor who regarded a liking for apples as indicative of moral soundness. "No man can have a pure mind who refuses apple dampings," he said, and Coleridge's friend, Charles Lamb, who reports this saying, adds: "I am not certain but he is right. With the decay of my first innocence, I confess a less and less relish daily for those innocuous cakes. There is a physiological character in the tastes for food. The whole vegetable tribe has lost its lust with me. Only I still stick to asparagus, which still seems to inspire gentle thoughts."—

A SUNNY TEMPER.

A sunny temper is a talisman more powerful than wealth, more precious than rubies. If you wish to attract friends and to do your best work, keep your mind filled with sunshine, with beauty and truth, with cheerful and uplifting thoughts. Bury everything that makes you unhappy and discordant, everything that cramps your freedom and worries you. Bury it before it buries you. Adopt the sundial's motto, "I record none but hours of sunshine."

HOW WIDE IS A ROAD?

Much Waste Land Upon Which Weeds Grow.

In the middle states a road is four rods wide—sixty-six feet—says the Country Gentleman. It is made so by decree of the government survey. Of course any man who is reasonably sober can drive a small automobile comfortably on a strip of land one rod wide. If two men are quite sober they can pass safely on one rod of road.
Indeed, the makers of macadam for state roads rarely pretend to build road-beds more than eighteen feet wide, of which the marginal two feet may be counted for selvege.

A farm wagon is four feet eight inches wide from wheel to wheel—cull it five feet for good measure. Add one foot for hubs, and still three such vehicles can be placed abreast in the eighteen foot road. In the four rod government highway with a little

UNUSED SPACES SERVE TO GROW WEEDS. crowding, one dozen farm wagons could be set side by side in single rank.

It sounds extravagant, and it is.
Each mile of government roadway contains eight acres of land. Much of it is perfectly good land, capable of growing 500 bushels of corn to the acre. Counting one rod as enough for proper road uses, six acres in each mile are pure waste. Thousands of miles of the best highways in England, France and Germany are only one rod wide, but if that seems too stingy for your Uncle Samuel call it two rods for us, and we are still throwing away four acres on each mile. Multiply these figures for the state of Iowa by the 101-000 miles of public road and we have 416,000 acres of the best farming land in the world just wasted. In Kansas, where the same system prevails, the government surveyors have been able to divert 353,200 more acres from proper uses to nothing at all.

This unused space serves only to grow weeds. The roadsides are often the greatest weed museum in a good farming country. Each year they produce enough seed to keep the neighboring farms perpetually supplied. In some places, to be sure, the owners of adjoining fields take into their own hands the care of the roadsides. They mow the weeds. Sometimes they even grow hay in place of weeds and mow that. Occasionally one plows the idle roadside and plants it to corn along with the abutting field.

It isn't his land, to be sure, but ought it not to be? Some day we shall learn in America the simple lesson learned long ago in older lands—that when a road is wide enough to carry the traffic it need not be any wider.
Then we can economize on road maintenance and convert to the uses of agriculture many thousands of acres now ingloriously idle.

Texas Plane Highway.

The good road building movement which has swept the south since the inauguration of the Dixie Highway association movement has spread into Texas with the same feverish activity and interest that has been displayed further east. So tense has become the interest in Texas that the Texas Good Roads association, just as did the Dixie Highway association, has found it necessary to assume an attitude of "strict neutrality" in the selection of the route for highways which it plans to build.

A new highway will be known as the San Antonio-Houston highway. The first link to be completed is to be a part of the southern national highway.
So warm has been the competition between the various points between the two termini of the highway that the Texas association has deemed it advisable to issue a card stating its position of "strict neutrality." It must be said for the Texas association, however, that it has gone the other highway association in Dixie one better.
In that it has been able to capitalize the enthusiasm of the different competing sections to enormous advantage.

The plan of the Texas road builders has been to designate three ten-ative routes between San Antonio and Houston. It is up to the sections through which these routes pass to complete them. The first of these routes satisfactorily completed will be named as the official route and will be formally designated as the southern national route.

New Shell Road in Texas.

Benjamin and Kountze, Tex., soon will be connected by a shell road to cost $75,000. The road already is shells from the island hayon to Benjamin. A highway commission has been selected to act in conjunction with the commissioners' court in the expenditure of this $75,000.

LIVE STOCK HUSBANDRY

CARE OF BROOD MARES.

Precautions Should Be Taken That They Receive No Strains.

My brood mares, of which I have seven at the present time, are never worked in winter, but are given plenty of exercise, writes a correspondent of the Rural New Yorker. Care is taken to see that they receive no strains or twists, which in some cases cause mares to abort. The mares are fed during the winter about a gallon of oats to a quart of bran to a feed morning and evening. The monthly ration consists of a feed of corn. The only hay they receive during winter is nicely cured clover. A halfed feed

Poor horses are a help to poor farmers only—they help to keep them poor. Good farmers must have good horses, and the best way to get them is to breed them. Plowing with light horses costs $2.40 an acre, with draft horses $1.50. Big drafters are more efficient for all work, while their upkeep in proportion to the work they do is much less. And the profits from raising colts exceed all other live stock gains. The demand for horses is ready sale at profitable prices. Use only pure bred draft stallions. This animal pictured is a grade Percheron gelding.

at every week end will guard against week end diseases which result from standing. After my mares become somewhat heavy in foal they are not allowed to run with the other horses until after foaling.

The first winter is a critical period in the life of a colt. If he has good blood and is got through the winter in good condition he will be most certain to make a valuable animal. If he is permitted to gorge himself on roughage he is apt to develop what is termed "hot belly." When this is developed the colt stands a fine chance to become a scrub horse. His hair will become long, his legs wobbly and his color will have a deadness about it showing a lack of vitality.

To prevent this and bring the youngster through the winter in first class condition his ration should be largely grain. Oats are especially good for the colt. Corn should be shelled and then crushed. Minky food ought never to be given. It is practically devoid of nourishment and is a breeder of disease. Good sweet clover hay is excellent for colts as it furnishes muscle and bone making material.

The colt should not be confined in a stall but allowed a good sized lot or paddock in which to run and play. Exercise is of paramount importance. He may be allowed to run in the pasture fields during the pleasant days, but should always have as a refuge from the sun a good shelter freely accessible. The water troughs should be at the end of the pasture.

An Oiling System That Can't Be Beat

BESIDES needing only one adjustment for perfect operation, the Primrose separator has a splash oiling system—the best method of oiling in use today. A quarter turn of the handle sends a plentiful supply of clean, fresh oil to every bearing, including the neck bearing. A window in the side of the frame tells you when the oil is at the correct level, and—here is the most important feature of all—as new oil is poured in, the used oil is siphoned out into the waste tank, so that the oil in a Primrose separator is always a good, clean lubricant.

Where can you beat that system? Good, clean oil, supplied to every bearing at the start—no chance to ruin your machine by forgetting to turn on the oil—no danger of running with any bearing dry—no chance for oil to get into the milk bowl, or to leak through the frame, or to come out anywhere except into the waste tank.

The Primrose is a real cream separator. Come in and let us show you why it is the best machine on the market today, bar none.

WON LAST GAME

Home Team Outdressed Visiting Alder Players—
Score 31 to 10.

What was probably the last basketball game of the season was played Friday evening in Boss Hall between the local team and the independent team of Alder. The Alder boys played hard, but were "up against it" and Ellsworth came out best by a score of 31 to 10.

After making a few collections which were still outstanding the boys were able to pay all expenses and come out even on the season's playing, which was quite gratifying. This is the first year basketball has been played in Ellsworth, but probably will not be the last, as the petronage at the games showed it was well received, and the interest manifested by the young folks bids well toward future teams.

Ellsworth Grange, No. 1198

Meets every two weeks on Tuesday evening.

Attendance of visiting members requested.

Master—D. E. Carpenter.

Lecturer—D. Patterson.

Secretary—Ava L. Bears.

Grange was again held last Saturday afternoon. This will be the last time, as it was voted to change the meeting back to the old night. The next meeting will be Tuesday, April 11.

The meeting was very interesting again as usual. Twenty-seven members and one visitor were present. An interesting lecture hour was held and splendid refreshments served.

It was voted on by the grange to have the secretary's minutes published in the Courier. They are as follows:

"Ellsworth Grange, No. 1198, held an open meeting on March 11, in Harris hall, W. M. D. E. Carpenter in the chair. Grange opened without form, after which the following question was debated: 'Resolved, That We Have a County Agent.' Mr. Harris, Ruel Chellis, DeWitt Patterson and D. E. Patterson for the affirmative and L. K. Clark, E. A. Dean, E. J. Chellis and C. E. Bears for the negative."

"It being decided to have those present act as judges, the decision was unanimously in favor of the negative."

However, the affirmative side still claim the debate proper and partly on the grounds of a short speech made by the leader of the negative side, L. K. Clark, in grange Saturday, by the fact that he said he was willing to sign a paper, if necessary, that the affirmative side had won out. This he said as though he meant it.

this old world rolls on just the same? Do you realize that the children of today are to be the citizens of the coming generation, and that it depends upon their chances today what they will do tomorrow? And still you have not thought of these things in the past, for you have had a selfish motive, one for your own personal gain. Is this the right way in which to treat your own flesh and blood? No! Then turn your powers to aid instead of destruction.

Your teachers are under paid and over worked just because of a lack of support. They have to overcome great difficulties because of lack of apparatus. They have to teach in over crowded rooms which are poorly heated and ventilated. Do you want to stand for this situation just because of a paltry dollar or two.

At the present time there is a question in the minds of some of the people of this community, as to whether there shall be two teachers or three for the coming school year. Three teachers are a necessity for the reasons; first, there are too many pupils for two teachers to handle; second the rooms of the school are not in condition suitable for such a change; third, individual attention to pupils would be a thing of the past, and fourth, your money would not be used to its greatest efficiency because of neglect caused by over crowded conditions.

Now is the time to do for your child, not when he is able to do for himself. Mothers and fathers who have had a hard time to attain their present standards should understand this situation and make it easier for those who are to take their places. Appeal to your own heart, think the affair through, then decide in a way which you honestly believe.

Seed Corn Testing.

William Kooyer reports making good use of his incubator these days, testing seed corn. By placing a sawdust germinating box in the machine, a good reading may be had in 48 hours. Farmers should not neglect to test their seed corn this season, as the quality is very poor.

A good germinating box may be quickly and cheaply made by taking a piece of cheese cloth and drawing lines across it each way with a pencil and numbering each square. A few kernels from an ear may be placed on a square, being careful to place the ear from which the kernels were taken in rotation on a board or floor, then placing a cloth over the corn in the germinating box, over which some saw dust has been placed, well moistened. Then place the box in the machine or in some warm place.

I wish to announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for the office of County Treasurer of Antrim County at the next August Primary election. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to give the office my personal attention.

A Correction.

Dear Editor,—In the Atwood news of the Courier of March 22nd there is an item referring to me which may be misleading to many Courier readers.

The item reads as follows:
"Rev. Pickart, pastor of the Holiness church, had the misfortune to break his leg."

To the words in italic I wish to call attention. This statement of the Atwood correspondent shows me affiliated with the Holiness church, which is not true. I am pastor of the Christian Reform church. To my knowledge there is not even a so-called Holiness church in Atwood. In justice to the readers of the Courier and in justice to my position I make this statement so the truth may be known.

Thanking you for the space, I remain
Yours truly,
J. D. Pickart.

What Geo. Klooster & Son of Ellsworth have to say about cream separators this week—

When you use a De Laval Separator you not only get more cream but better cream as well

THE best evidence of this is that during the last twenty-five years butter made from De Laval separated cream has invariably scored the highest at all important contests and state fairs. Practically all the cream entered in the International Milk and Cream Show held in connection with the Panama-Pacific Exposition was separated by De Laval's, and every first prize and most all other prizes, were won by De Laval separated cream.

These facts are simply further proof of De Laval supremacy in everything that goes to make a good cream separator.

Don't buy any separator until you give us an opportunity to let you see and try a De Laval. We will be glad to send one out to your farm on trial any time you say. Just phone, send a post card, or call and we will be glad to give you all the information you wish.

Sooner or later you will buy a DE LAVAL

WATKINS TURNS UP

East Jordan Man Heir to a Large Sum of Money Located in Detroit.

After a two year search Don Watkins, a former East Jordan man, was located in Detroit, where he went to visit at the home of his sister.

Watkins is a brother of Mrs. Arthur K. Hill of East Jordan. About two years ago the brother and sister fell heir to considerable property and an effort was made to locate Watkins.

Prior to his falling heir to the property Watkins took a position with Ringling Bros. circus and while at Grand Rapids went to a hospital for treatment. His sister made inquiries regarding him while the show was there, but no trace could be found. Later, after leaving the hospital, he rejoined the circus and was with them in their travels over the country. He made his home in New York and for the entire three years was an employee of the circus.

Having some business in Toledo, he decided to visit his sister at Detroit and it was here that he was given the information that he was heir to a considerable amount of property and had been sought for for two years.

To the Democrats of Michigan.

For twenty years, at least, it has been my privilege to have intimate acquaintance with the men who in the larger sense have contributed the energy and the means to further the interest of the Democratic party in Michigan, and both energy and means no man in the state in that time has made as large a contribution as Edwin O. Wood.

Political parties are made potent through their organizations, and organizations are perfected and kept intact through the liberality and sacrifice of their members. If the Democratic party in Michigan has been to any degree impotent, it has been because it has had too few men of the loyalty, energy and liberality of Mr. Wood, and too many men like the few who now constitute themselves his critics, who, during the same years, have contributed nothing to make the party as potent as it has been.

Political disintegration either through promoting fractional differences or supporting candidates of the opposition has never been furthered by Edwin O. Wood; he has always supported loyalty the candidates of his party.

Twice I was honored by the party as its candidate for the governorship, and I have never been aware that there was fractional division within the party in the support which I received. In both campaigns, the first contributions to advance the work of the state central committee came in the form of remittances from Mr. Wood which aggregated from five hundred to a thousand dollars for each campaign and constituted from a fifth to a tenth of all the funds received by the committee while the names of most of the gentlemen who are now asking that the direction of party affairs be given over to them, were not on the list at all.

If loyalty to party principals and candidates, the sacrifice of time, energy and money, and the promotion of party solidarity as against fractional division, entitle a man to consideration in the party organization, Edwin O. Wood has pre-eminently earned a reelection as a member of the Democratic National committee.

The Power of the People

By REGINALD WRIGHT KAUFFMAN.

Author of "House of Bondage," "Jim," "The Girl Who Goes Wrong" and "My Heart and Stephanie."

SYNOPSIS.

Dudley Larnigan, district attorney, attacks the liquor and vice trusts. He is killed by an agent of a secret society, the committee of fifteen. His son, Bruce Larnigan, is elected district attorney and takes up the fight. Bruce is in love with Dorothy Maxwell, whose father is head of the insurance trust. Bruce Larnigan is decaying to an evil resort in an effort to frame him up. He has the police commissioner present. A fire starts in a tenement. Larnigan saves the children of Dow, one of the conspirators. This man agrees to expose the trust. He is murdered by the gang. Stanford Stone, head of the graft syndicate, insists Larnigan must be killed. Gunmen are posted in the park to kill Larnigan in his automobile. Dorothy Maxwell, over the telephone, hears the plot. Two more conspirators are killed and Larnigan again escapes.

BRUCE LARNIGAN, despite his successes over the graft syndicate since his election as district attorney, began to feel after his miraculous escape from the plot to kill him in an explosion in the new subway, that his chances of success along the lines he had so far followed were almost hopeless.

Gradually it seemed to him, tremendous forces were being arrayed against him. The whole power of the city administration was on the side of the enemy. The mayor, with all the departments he employed, showed open antagonism. The newspapers, with the single exception of the Independent, were either openly hostile or sneeringly indifferent. A great many people who, it seemed to him, should give him enthusiastic support were decidedly lukewarm in their attitude. To Dorothy Maxwell, his fiancée and practically the only person in whom he was now able to confide, since he did not want to worry his mother with the details of his troubles, he told of his growing feeling that he was on the wrong road.

"We thought it was a wonderful thing when I was elected district attorney, dear," he said to her. "But the office has tied my hands again and again. Things that I could do if I were a private citizen I am barred from even attempting. Just for one thing—this graft conspiracy, I am convinced, is country wide.

"It isn't confined to New York alone. But as district attorney I can't go outside the city. My jurisdiction stops there."

"But you can go outside to get evidence," she suggested.

"The minute I do that they'll accuse me of neglecting my duty to pursue a fantastic conspiracy that, they say, has no existence at all except in my own brain. The best thing they say about me is that I'm visionary—a lunatic! Most of them say, whether they actually believe it or not, that I'm a crook."

"It's an outrage!" said Dorothy, with flashing eyes.

"Well, what do you think? It seems to me that I ought to resign as district attorney at once. I've been talking to Bart Nash. He's the editor of the Independent, you know—the man who gave Jim Stevens a job when Jim was fired for helping me to get the goods on the traction grafters."

"What does he say?"

"He agrees with me—that I ought to resign. He has promised me the support of his paper if I undertake to carry on the fight by a direct appeal to the people. That's my chance as I see it—to get the people stirred up, so that they will really demand action. So far they don't believe in me. But I can make them do it, I'm sure."

"Then if he thinks that and you feel as you do, I think you ought to resign," said Dorothy. "It's you that have got to make the decision, Bruce. I'm with you whatever you do!"

"That settles it," said Bruce. "I thought you'd agree with me. I shall resign at once. And the first move in my new fight will be against the grain trust."

"I didn't know there was one."

"There is, and a particularly mean one! It's responsible for the rise in the price of bread. There's plenty of grain, but they're creating an artificial shortage to send up prices. There's no reason at all for the rise. It's the worst sort of crookedness. I shall go to Chicago at once. That's the place where I can get the evidence, though it's St. John Dodson, right here in New York, who is my final quarry."

"Mr. Dodson?" said Dorothy, deeply shocked. "Why, he's one of papa's best friends!"

"That's just the trouble," said Bruce grittingly. "It's because men who are universally supposed to be honorable and decent, and who occupy the high positions, are at the bottom of all the crookedness that it's so hard for me to reach them."

Stanford Stone, the secret head of the graft syndicate and Bruce's great enemy, was not deceived by Bruce's resignation of his office, which filled some of Stone's associates with delight.

"He hasn't given up," he said. "Don't be fooled for a minute by his resignation. That's just a blind. He's going to keep on fighting, and it's more important than ever to put him out of the way. I know, for instance, that he's going to Chicago tomorrow to try to get evidence against Dodson and his grain shortage. Black's gone, but I've got another man to follow him."

So it came about that there traveled with Bruce, following him as closely as his own shadow, a desperado known to the police of a score of cities as Red Mike. Mike meant to earn his money.

With Bruce gone, Stanford Stone left no move unmade in New York that might help to achieve his object. His first blow was struck at the Independent. A hint was enough. With one accord advertisers withdrew their support until the paper faced a staggering loss. And Stone went further. His agents approached stockholders, who, frightened by the loss of earnings, were glad to sell their holdings. So Stone came into control of a great block of Independent stock and was able to apply for a receivership and so force the suspension, for a time at least, of the paper's publication.

At his instance, too, suits were brought against Bruce for criminal libel and for heavy damages by the men he had accused in connection with the traction trust exposure. These were strike suits, which could not succeed when they were brought to trial, but it was not Stone's purpose to let them come to trial. They served as an excuse for attaching Bruce's bank account and his home, and this was done. Bruce's mother was terrified by threats of ejection from her home, and Stone relied upon her pleadings to induce Bruce to abandon his fight, even if his well laid plans to put Bruce out of the way should not succeed.

Even so, however, Stone was not content. He felt that Bruce still possessed one thing that he coveted—the love of Dorothy Maxwell. The engagement of the two had not been announced, but it was a more or less open secret. And now Stone, relying upon his hold over Roger Maxwell, her father, ventured openly to go to Dorothy and ask her to marry him. He was promptly refused, but would not take his answer. He wanted reasons, and Dorothy reluctantly told him of the plot to kill Bruce that she had overheard by means of the telephone in his office. To her amazement, Stone made no denial.

"I am his enemy," he said coolly. "I admit it. What of it? Your own father is associated with me. Larnigan's success would mean even more to him than to me."

"I don't believe you!" cried Dorothy desperately.

But she did. It explained so much that had troubled and mystified her. And Roger Maxwell, when she begged him to deny what Stone had said, couldn't do it. Indeed, he let her see that he was, to some extent at least, in Stone's power. It was a dreadful dilemma that Dorothy faced, with Bruce a thousand miles away, engaged, as she knew, in a bitter and perilous struggle.

And, even so, she did not know how great were the perils that dogged Bruce's path. Red Mike, like some skulking beast of prey, waited for his chance to strike. A dozen times he held his hand, lured by the man-cunning that was his, waiting to unmask sure.

Meanwhile Bruce found plenty of evidence. He was disturbed by the news that came to him from Bart Nash and Jim Stevens, but decided that it was better for him to stick to his own part of the work instead of going back to help them. He felt that he was on the trail of real facts, which would prove terribly damaging to the enemy.

At last there came the chance he had waited. A man he had bribed told him of a plan to send a schooner out on Lake Michigan from Chicago heavily laden with grain.

"Go along," he told Bruce. "You'll see something worth while."

And Bruce did. Concealed in a boat, he saw the crew, under orders from the captain, dumping the perfectly good grain into the lake. It was so that Dodson's men were creating the shortage he was using as his excuse for raising the price of bread to the poor! This Bruce knew would serve him well.

"I've ordered the price back. For God's sake take them away," said Dodson.

his cause; the facts would speak for themselves. And he had a small camera with him, with which he took photographs of the dumping.

It was that, however, which was his undoing. He had to expose himself as he took the pictures, and some keen eye among the men saw him. In a moment he was dragged from the boat.

"It's a spy!" cried some hurly rufian.

And a moment later Bruce was fighting for his life. He fought well, but the odds were too great. He was overpowered in no time and savagely beaten. But then the plotters made a fatal mistake. Left alone Bruce might soon have died. But they threw him overboard.

The cold water revived him to some extent, and he was able to cling to a floating spar that came providentially within his reach. And an hour later he was spied from the deck of a yacht and picked up. He was unconscious when he came to an hour later a strange man bent over his cot.

"Are you Bruce Larnigan," he said hoarsely, "like the papers in your pocket say?"

"I am," said Bruce, astonished at the other's emotion.

"Bruce—I'm Tom—you're my brother!" said the stranger.

It was a wonderful tale they made of it, between them. Tom left home in a fit of boyish passion years before. He had disappeared, and the family had long since believed him dead.

"I didn't have the heart to go home a failure, Bruce," he confessed after he had heard Bruce's story. "But, by the Lord, I'll go home now and do the work you set out to do! You'll be in a hospital for a spell, old chap, and you're lucky at that. But leave things to me. I'll get through somehow."

So Tom went east in Bruce's place. He carried a letter to Dorothy Maxwell, and he carried also an absolute determination to defeat the graft syndicate and do Bruce's work until Bruce recovered.

But his arrival at home dismayed him. He learned of his mother's sufferings, and he learned, too, that Dorothy Maxwell, the girl Bruce loved and trusted, was engaged to Stanford Stone.

"I'll play a lone hand, then," he said defiantly to himself. "I'll not deliver Bruce's letter. But I'll get this man Dodson by myself."

Chance guided him to a meeting of the poor held in protest against the rise in the price of bread. Tom Larnigan seized his chance. In a moment he displaced the speaker.

"This is a time to act—not to talk!" he cried. "Follow me! I'll lead you to the man who raised the price of bread!"

With a roar like that of a pack of wolves the crowd followed him, growing greater at every block, until at last it stormed the doors of the great office building in which St. John Dodson had his office, surged up to his office, and beat down all guards and barriers until he was in his very door. Then Tom went to him to find the great man cowering in his desk.

"Shall I let them in?" he asked, "or will you yield, you cur?"

"I've ordered the price back to the old figures!" cried the frightened Dodson. "For God's sake take them away!"

Tom believed him. He told the crowd they had won their fight. And even as he spoke a shot rang out. Dodson had killed himself.

At once Tom and his mother went to Chicago, to find Bruce somewhat improved. He smiled as he heard of Tom's first blow at the forces of graft.

Simple Device For Feeding Oil to Machine Cutting Tools.

A simple but good oil feed can be made of an old oil can as shown. The sections A and B are cut from the bottom of the can, leaving the strip C, which is the width of a small sized nut. The nut is soldered to the center of the strip and a pin, D, threaded part way.

OIL CAN LUBRICANT FEEDER.

Is screwed through the nut, the unthreaded part being filed to a size a trifle smaller in diameter than the threaded part.

A piece of sheet iron is shaped as shown at F and slipped over the neck of the can, where it is held to the spout when the latter is in place. The can may then be attached to any part of the machine for use. Oil or lubricant is poured into the can, and the flow regulated by the pin D.

An Ancient Industry.

One of the oldest and most curious of existing industries is the making of narrow ribbons or bracelets called bangles from the chank or nautilus shell of the Hindus. This chank (Turbinella pyrum, Linn) is found chiefly at a depth of about two fathoms in the gulf of Mannar, and about 2,000,000 of the shells are exported annually to Calcutta. So important is the bangle of the Hindu women that J. Hornell, representing the Madras government, has specially investigated the industry. Tracing the early history of chank ornaments, Mr. Hornell is unable to assign prehistoric specimens in the Madras museum to the later stone age, as had been previously done, but believes marks on some of them were made by metal implements. He has found, however, remains of ancient bangle factories scattered over the greater part of India.

Mine Explosions.

In the course of the government inquiry as to the cause of the explosion at Senghenydd, south Wales, on Oct. 14, 1913, in which over 400 lives were lost, it has been suggested that the explosion of gas was caused by an electric spark from the belt or signaling wire. To test this theory experiments were made under official supervision, and the results of these experiments are held to prove that the intensity of sparks at nine volts (the voltage employed in the mine where the explosion occurred) could not ignite an explosive atmosphere. Mine gas containing over 35 per cent methane was used in the experiments.

New Aeroplane Weapon.

An inflammable dart for use on aeroplanes was tested in France recently in the presence of military experts. The dart carries a small reservoir containing gasoline which explodes on contact. Its purpose is to set fire to dirigible balloons or buildings. Three of the darts dropped from an aeroplane at an altitude of 600 feet found their mark.

HINT FOR SALOONKEEPERS.

"You see that building," said a saloonkeeper in Montana. "That is all I have in the world. I worked hard to build and equip it. There I earn the food and clothing for my wife and babies. You women say you are going to put me out of business. That will ruin my property. How am I to support my family?" I thought of the many families that his business was making hungry and unhappy, but I said nothing of this, for there was to me a pathos in his plea and to him it was a very real problem. In the seven states that recently went dry there are thousands that meet the same conditions. They are cast adrift upon a wholly uncharted sea and they see nothing beyond.

I answered: "My friend, when Montana goes dry, and as sure as you and I live Montana is going dry, that lot will remain just where it is. Unless there is a fire, and against that you can continue to protect your property by insurance as you are doing now, your building will remain where it is. Just lower your bar and make a counter of it. Put in some more windows, a slight expense, and sell tea, coffee, sugar, flour, shoes—any commodity—to the very same people who patronize you now and receive in exchange the same kind of dollars. Perhaps, my friend, you have not thought that Mr. Brown over there who now comes to your place nightly and spends his money, may come in and buy a pair of shoes for his little Mary, who sadly needs them. This purchase on his part will not unfit him to earn another day's wage tomorrow to buy something needed for his small son, Jimmie. And then perhaps he will come in the next night and buy a sack of flour, taking it home to his wife to use in making bread. As for Mr. Brown himself, he will go to bed and get a good night's sleep and the next day he will be able to earn enough more funds to buy a sack of potatoes. Do you not see that you may sell from the same building to the same people who now patronize you and get even more money? I am sure, too, that your wife will be happier and your children will no longer be shunned. We are not fighting you, my friend, but we are fighting your kind of business. Why not try to get into something honorable before the storm comes and be ready for the new trade?"

He answered earnestly: "Perhaps I'd better. Anyhow, I'll consider it. I see you women are not just abusing us. You are not the kind I thought you were."—Adah Wallace Unruh, National W. C. T. U. Organizer.

NEW TEMPERANCE GOSPEL.

"Temperance work today is very practical as compared with the sentimental exhortations of yesterday," pertinently remarks an exchange. "In these days, when 'efficiency' is so general a watchword in the world of business and labor, we are finding not so directly that a man is a knave who drinks to excess, or even as all, as that he is a fool. A runner who ties a weight about his leg is no greater dunce than the workman or the merchant who puts a dram of liquor into his digestion or his brain. It is capable of proof by figures and diagrams that the drinker of even an occasional glass of wine or beer or whiskey injures the work of both his hands and his mind, while the habitual drinker sows up his mental and manual machinery permanently. This is the gospel of the new temperance movement."

NO BACKWARD STEPS.

Judge Tully Scott of Colorado's supreme court, speaking to the toast "Democracy's Opportunity" at a Democratic banquet, made this statement: "In my opinion constitutional prohibition will never be repealed in Colorado. I believe it to be as firmly established as the provision for equal suffrage, and I believe we all agree that any effort to repeal the grant of equal suffrage in this state would prove as futile as an attempt to repeal the natural law of gravitation."

COWARDLY PLEA.

In every country state finance has been the rock behind which the poisoners took shelter. "Without the liquor tax what a deficit there will be!" War gave swift answer to that cowardly plea. What was the tax gain from liquor when dropped into the war deficit of a billion a month? War gave the sudden lesson that you cannot measure a nation's needs in terms of money.—Vance Thompson in "Drink and Be Vicer."

TEMPERANCE EXHIBITS.

Such keen interest was manifested by the public in the World's and National W. C. T. U. exhibit at the Panama-Pacific exposition that arrangements were made for showing it in a number of the larger cities throughout the country. The plan is part of a comprehensive traveling exhibit which is carrying to the people the valuable exhibits of various churches and social service organizations. Accompanied by a corps of trained workers it started on its nation-wide tour from Seattle in January.

TELEGRAMS IN 1767.

Telegraphing by semaphore was invented by Richard Lovell Edgeworth in 1767 and was first regularly established by the French military authorities in 1794. The system was introduced into England the following year by Lord George Murray, and by its means the admiralty was placed within a few minutes of Portsmouth or Plymouth. The apparatus consisted of shutters placed on the top of towers built on commanding sites at intervals of from five to ten miles. Greenwich time at 1 o'clock daily was passed from London to Portsmouth and acknowledged commonly within three-quarters of a minute in clear weather. London Mirror.

LAUNCHING A BIG PIPE.

How a Half Mile Sewer Was Driven Into the Atlantic Ocean.

Half a mile of twelve inch wrought iron pipe, jointed together, presents some slight difficulties when it is proposed to place it, as the authorities of Ocean Grove, N. J., proposed, straight out in the Atlantic as an outlet for their sewer system, says Popular Mechanics. The great weight, the necessity of avoiding choking by sand, or damage by the swell, presented problems calling for original treatment.

Joined together, the pipe was placed on small wooden trucks, the outer end being attached to a cast iron plate with two cradles and bent upward at an angle of forty-five degrees. To prevent the water from entering while the pipe was being run out to sea its end was capped with a wooden plug like a cork in a bottle, closely but not tightly fitted and heavily lubricated with white lead at the joint.

Somewhat over half a mile from shore were placed five ship anchors, firmly embedded, with a sheave attached to them, through which was passed a five-eighths of an inch steel cable. One end of this cable was attached to the iron bedplate of the outlet pipe, while the other was wound around the drum of a hoisting engine. As the engine was started the pipe, partly submerged, swung evenly through the water, free from all obstructions, and in two hours and a quarter the outlet was in place. The outer end is thirty-five feet below sea level.

Old Folks Saved From Suffering

Mrs. Mary A. Dean, Taunton, Mass., in her 87th year, says: "I thought I was beyond the reach of medicine, but Foley Kidney Pills have proven most beneficial in my case."

Mr. Sam A. Hoover, High Point, N. C., writes: "My kidney trouble was worse at night and I had to get up from five to seven times. Now I do not have to get up at night, and consider myself in a truly normal condition, which I attribute to Foley Kidney Pills, as I have taken nothing else."

Mrs. M. A. Bridges, Robinson, Mass., says: "I suffered from kidney ailments for two years. I commenced taking Foley Kidney Pills ten months ago, and though I am 61 years of age, I feel like a 16-year-old girl. Foley Kidney Pills are tonic, strengthening and up-building, and restore normal action to the kidneys and to a disordered and painful bladder. They act quickly and contain no dangerous or harmful drugs."

AIR OPERATED TOOLS.

Frequent Cleaning and Lubrication Prolong Their Efficiency.

The care of pneumatic hammers, as all other classes of machinery, has an important effect on the results obtained with these tools. One of the important factors connected with their care is to keep them clean and well lubricated, says R. L. Streeter in the Engineering Magazine. The hammers are subjected to hard usage and abuse by the men who handle them, the moving parts are accurately and closely fitted, and when they are subjected to that unpardonable offense of being neglected in the way of lubrication they soon refuse to work.

As air taken into the compressor often contains some particles of dirt and grit, it is almost impossible to prevent this foreign matter from entering the hammer, causing the parts to become clogged and rendering the hammer inoperative. The use of a poor grade of heavy bodied oil will cause the same trouble. A good plan to follow in such cases is to clean by using benzine freely through the throttle handle. This dislodges all foreign matter and cuts the thick oil, which can then be removed by blowing through the hammer.

Another source of trouble is sometimes located in the pipe line. Moisture carried in the air will rust the pipes, and if a hammer is connected up without first blowing out the line a sediment is liable to be blown into the hammer, causing the valve and piston to stick. The rubber of the hose deteriorates very fast and little particles of this may be blown into the hammer. It is a good plan to submerge the hammer occasionally over night in a bath of benzine, then blow out under pressure the following morning and lubricate with a good quality of light oil or, better still, a special oil which is manufactured particularly for such tools.

When the air usually contains foreign matter strainers or filters should be attached to the tool or placed in the line near the tool.

On the Wall.

Those who go to war without their parents' consent and are killed in battle occupy a peculiar position in the after world in Mohammedan theology. They are on Al-Araf, the wall separating heaven and hell. Because of their treatment of their parents they should be in hell, but death in battle is martyrdom, which entitles the deceased to enter heaven. Because they are martyrs they should not be sent to hell; hence Al-Araf for them. There are other denizens of Al-Araf, among them those whose good and evil deeds so exactly balance that they are neither fit for heaven nor hell—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

POULTRY and EGGS

HINTS ON INCUBATION.

Special Points to Observe in Handling the Hatching Machine.

Experienced poultrymen follow the general standard methods for incubating eggs, but as they adapt their practice to the local conditions under which they work the detail of their methods shows more or less individuality, writes a correspondent of the American Agriculturist. For instance, the subject of cooing of the eggs has been widely discussed. Heber M. Cullbert of Union county, N. J., explains this cooing idea as largely a misnomer. He be-

The Barred Plymouth Rock of today is a wonderful improvement over that of former years, and great strides have especially been made during the last ten years. Size, shape and color have been improved, and we are able to breed them true to the standard requirements to an unusual degree. It is also true that their practical qualities have been improved, and in laying qualities and all other qualities they are improved today and better than ever before in their history. The bird shown is a Barred Plymouth Rock cock.

leaves that ventilation has been over emphasized and that in reality the purpose is to air the eggs. However, he thinks that it is very necessary for the eggs to be turned twice a day. The more often they are turned the better the hatch. Beginning then after two days, he turns the eggs twice each day.

Among the other points to which he calls attention are the following: If the thermometer is below the level of the top of the eggs in the machine it will run about a half degree cooler than if hung above. The second week the eggs are run at an even temperature of 103 degrees. This is raised in the third week to 104 degrees. He believes it is a good deal worse to have the temperature fall below 102 degrees than to have it rise to 105 degrees. After the eggs begin to "pip" on the eighteenth day or so the machine is closed and the eggs are only viewed from the outside. The machine is not even opened to make a closer examination of the thermometer. After the hatch begins to come off a curtain is dropped in front of the glass, and the hatch is not observed at all. When the hatch is complete the chicks are dried off in the incubator at about 103 or 104 degrees. If the trays are too crowded the stronger chicks are put down below.

The lamps are filled and trimmed every day. From experience it has been found that the lamps will burn more evenly when filled only two-thirds full of oil each morning after trimming the eggs. The wick is trimmed with an old toothbrush. This has been found to be a more satisfactory method than trimming with a knife or scissors. The charred part is scraped off lightly with a match stick. If the cellar in which the incubators are run is especially dry wet trays of sand are placed under the machine. If the conditions are very dry the eggs may be sprinkled, although Mr. Cullbert does not deem it advisable to have the eggs too wet.

Brooding Temperature.

It is impossible to state for each case at what temperature the brooders should be kept to raise young chicks. However, it will run from 90 up to 100 degrees, says the Orange Judd Farmer. Some broods of chickens seem to require more heat than others. An average is 95 to 98 degrees for the first week or ten days, when the temperature is gradually reduced to 85 degrees for the following ten days and then lowered to 70 or 75 degrees for as long as the chickens need heat. This depends somewhat on the season of the year and the number of the chickens. The heat generated by fifty chickens would raise the temperature under the brooder to a higher degree than the heat given off by a lesser number. Consequently the amount of heat furnished by the lamp or stove will have to be regulated accordingly. As the chickens grow larger and need less heat the lamps may be used only at night and later only on cold nights.

The Full Crop Hen.

You can help to decide which hens are kept at a loss by going through the house just after dark and feeling the crop of each bird. Those hens whose crops are packed full are in all probability the best which are laying well. You may well be suspicious of the hen which might after light has only a partly filled crop.

ONCE A SOVEREIGN STATE.

Now Noll is Simply a Fishing Village With a Past.

One of the oddest and quietest little independent states that ever existed in Europe—the tiny republic of Noll, founded before time and maintaining its liberty for many centuries until Napoleon swept away its privileges—is today merely a fishing village near Genoa, but it is full of reminders of its former greatness and affords a wonderful glimpse of mediaeval times. Destroyed by the Carthaginians in 217 B. C., and who knows how often by subsequent marauders, there seemed no limit to her powers of recovery.

This quiet little fishing village maintained itself as a sovereign state for centuries, took a prominent part in the quarrels of Guelfs and Ghibellines, sent doughty warriors to the Crusades, commanded the interest of emperors and popes and only succumbed at last to the armies of Napoleon. Dante clambered hither over terrible hills on hands and knees and revenged himself by consigning Noll to his "Purgatory."

Everybody is rich in this poor man's paradise, says the Wide World Magazine. During the anchovy months it is not rare for the 120 boats to earn $4,000 in a night, or $75,000 in a season. Through fish alone a man earns far more than a clerk, besides which he has no "appearances" to keep up. Under these happy conditions he soon acquires land and houses, which afford a steady revenue while he sleeps or fishes. The earth here has only to be scratched in order to bring forth wealth, so rich is the soil and so abundant the water.

RAPID FILM PICTURES.

Bullet Photographed in Flight Shows Curious Effects.

An apparatus capable of making film pictures at the rate of 100,000 a second has been invented, and with it some remarkable pictures have been made. In one case seventy-two consecutive views of a bullet fired from a revolver were taken while the bullet was passing through a space of ten inches.

This bullet was fired through a thin piece of wood, and the film showed a curious situation. The wood did not show any effect from the impact of the bullet until the bullet had passed completely through it. Then splinters began to form, the stick split and finally fell to pieces. No camera shutters can be used with this apparatus. A series of electric sparks are flashed at the rate of 100,000 a second, and a picture is made with each flash. The film is carried on a wheel three feet in diameter that makes 9,000 revolutions a minute.

"COLD-CASH BILL"

"COLD CASH" was Bill Smith's motto—"just simply had to feel the 'long green'" when he paid out any money.

He often had difficulty in making correct change, and on one occasion in searching his pockets for his "roll" he found—not his money, but the hole where $51 had disappeared.

He felt a little bit "peevish" when one day he was called upon to pay a bill he "knew" he had paid some time before—couldn't show a receipt for the first transaction, however.

Smith realized there was something wrong with his system—knew it when some thin-fingered stranger "relieved" him of his purse and $20.

Smith now lets the bank handle most of his cash, and whenever he pays a bill it is a simple matter to draw a check on The Charlevoix County Bank.

Thus, in a simple, single operation Smith now makes change instantly and correctly; each check acts as a receipt, and he has a complete record of all his expenditures.

There's a lesson in this for YOU, perhaps.

54,000 BROOK TROUT PLANTED

Stover and McGeagh Creek Replenished with Fish from State Hatchery.

First Shipment Received Saturday and Other Streams and Lakes to be Planted Later.

Saturday morning a consignment of 27 cans of brook trout spawn containing some 54,000 fish were received in this city by members of the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club to be planted in streams adjoining the city.

They were taken charge of by A. L. Fitch, Oluf Nordrum, L. E. Benton and Fred Coon and during the day were planted in the headwaters of Stover and McGeagh creek for growth and development and for future sport for the anglers who love the fun and enjoy the savory dish of one of nature's breakfast foods.

Parts of the consignment were placed in suitable places in each of the two creeks, which will greatly add to the number of "speckled beauties" already in these streams. About the first of May another consignment is expected. These will include not only brook trout, but small and large mouth black bass, wall eyes pike and rainbow trout.

The plan of the Rod and Gun Club is to plant one kind of fish in the various lakes and creeks, thus making one lake for small mouth black bass, another for large mouth black bass, another for wall eyed pike and pickerel, and Pine Lake for mackinaw and rainbow trout. In past years large numbers of fry have been planted in various lakes and creeks according to the ideas of the persons who received them, but in the future it will be the policy of the club members to urge the planting of the same kind of fish in the lakes and creeks each year, with the idea that within a short time each lake and creek will be plentifully supplied.

This movement will be followed by rod and gun clubs and individuals in neighboring towns tributary to Charlevoix, whose interests are identical.

An effort will also be made by club members to see that the game laws are rigidly enforced. Warnings have been given to those who in the past have made a practice when fishing to keep fish regardless of size or catch, them out of season. The chief violators are known to the club members and complaint will be made if they do not obey the law in this respect.

REPUBLICANS TO WIN THIS YEAR

Such Is the Prediction of the Grand Rapids Herald in Recent Issue.

Requires Two Hundred Sixty-Six Votes in Electoral College—Must Stand United.

It may seem early for prognostication, but if the Grand Rapids Herald is a good guesser, there is nothing to it in this year of grace but the election of a Republican president. This is the way the Herald dopes it out:

"There are 531 votes in the Electoral College. It requires 266 electoral votes to elect. What are the probabilities?

The following states have gone Republican in the three elections 1900, 1904 and 1908: California, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming. That Mr. Wilson obtained the electoral votes of some of them in 1912 is due to a split in the Republican party. Mr. Wilson had in the popular vote 2,450,504 votes less than the other candidates combined. The electoral vote in these states totals 322—or 56 more than enough to elect a Republican president.

Assuming a normal campaign in which Mr. Roosevelt and his followers are supporting national Republicanism, which of these states will Republicanism fail to carry next November? Pick them out. New England is all back under Republican control. New York and Pennsylvania, the great dominating electoral college, both are now under Republican governors. The middle west is pretty nearly all redeemed. With a leeway of 56 votes in the preceding list, Republicanism starts with a presumption of victory.

Meanwhile, this list does not include a number of states which Republicanism has carried as many or more times than the Democrats in the last four national elections. For instance, it does not include Delaware which has gone Republican three times and Democratic once; Maryland which has gone Republican once, Democratic once, and split twice. In these states there are 45 electoral votes.

Indeed, if Republicanism has learned the Lincoln lesson that "a house divided against itself cannot stand," there is little or no question about what the November outcome will be."

You simply can't realize the immense reductions on the prices until you have personally looked over these bargain tables of shoes. The big sale positively closes Sat. Apr. 8th at Bedford's Shoe Store. Adv. 141f

HOSPITALITY—May it be Genuine

REPUBLICANS GIVEN BIG MAJORITIES IN MONDAY'S ELECTION

Andrew Ross, Republican Candidate for Mayor, Defeats William Finucan, Democrat, by Vote of 388 to 58—Lyman E. Benton Elected Alderman in the Third Ward

Monday's election in Charlevoix was featured by an unusually light vote in all wards with the exception of the third. In the third the scrap was a hard and bitter one before the votes were counted, but after counting the ballots, the strength of the opposition to L. E. Benton as alderman was found to be greatly over-estimated. The move to run B. A. Herman on by the slip route against Mr. Benton petered out and ended in a dismal failure, but 28 votes being cast by the disgruntled third warders in their efforts to defeat him.

On the Republican ticket, Andrew Ross received a total vote of 388 for the office of mayor, against William Finucan, his Democratic opponent, who received a total of 58. From the office of mayor down to that of constable, Republican majorities averaged about the same as that of the mayor given above. Below is given the vote of each ward in detail.

For Republican National Committee-man, Charles B. Warren received the following vote: First ward 67, Second ward 126, Third ward 97, a total in the city of 290.

For Republican Presidential Preference, the following vote was cast: William Alden Smith, First ward 42, Second ward 126, Third ward 151.

Henry W. Ford, First ward 26, Second ward 43, total 123.
W. G. Simpson, First ward 4, Second ward 12, total 24.
In the city William Alden Smith had but 28 more than Henry W. Ford, showing in a great measure the popularity of the Detroit automobile manufacturer. Mr. Ford's popularity and the wonderful support he received throughout the state has caused consternation among the Smith worshippers. In Detroit alone he received some 2500 more votes than Smith. He was less than 450 votes behind Smith in Grand Rapids, and reports from the entire state give evidence that the race will be a close one between the two men.

In the city E. O. Wood defeated W. A. Comstock, for Democratic national committee-man, by a vote of 57 to 17.

The heads of the Union Ticket in Boyne City won over the Socialists as follows: Mayor, Schaub; clerk, Ekstrom; treasurer, Bailey.
C. J. Herron was defeated by A. T. Brockway for supervisor in the third ward, Bert Fuday for alderman by F. Mitchell in the first ward.

In Petoskey, the following men were elected Councilmen: A. B. Klise, John A. Galaster, John Quinlan, George McCabe and F. J. Schmitt.

In East Jordan, A. E. Cross won out for mayor with but a few votes to spare.

In the Townships.
Below are the returns from the various townships tributary to Charlevoix.

Charlevoix: The fight between George Durand of Ticket No. 1 and William Cook, Ticket No. 2 proved a warm one with the result that Cook was elected supervisor. The balance of Ticket No. 1 was elected.

Norwood: Ticket No. 1 won as follows: Supervisor, Whitfield Totten; clerk, F. E. Richardson; treasurer, Orton VanDusen. The main issue was an supervisor, Totten winning by 20.

Eveline: Ticket No. 1 won out with the exception of highway commissioner, when George Jarman put it over Joe. Courier by a vote of 81 to 72. The line up is as follows: Supervisor, McDonald; clerk, Flanders; treasurer, W. L. Bird. Marion: Jay Adams of Ticket No. 1, defeated Elmer Ingalls, Ticket No. 1, for the office of supervisor by three votes. Supervisor, Adams; clerk Withers; treasurer, Ben Nowland.

Hayes: In this township, Frank C. Burnett, by the slip route, defeated H. S. Newcom, as did also John Shrigley for highway commissioner over Henry Hamlin. The line up is as follows: Supervisor, F. C. Burnett; clerk, E. H. Burgess; treasurer, Platt Webster.

Road Commissioner O. D. Hammond has started work on the completion of the Boyne City state road east of the city. He will then transfer his road machinery and equipment on the East Jordan road, where one and three-fourths mile of road are to be built.

DRY LEADERS JUBILANT

Prohibition Forces Retain Own Territory and Invade Upper Peninsula.

Michigan dry leaders are jubilant over the results of the wet and dry vote in thirteen counties.

Twenty-six Michigan saloons were voted out of existence. Almost complete returns indicate that Baraga county with 22 saloons and Clare county with 4 returned a dry majority. The 11 remaining counties—4 dry and 7 wet—remain as at present. Anti-Saloon League headquarters professed to be pleased with the result. They pointed out that had the 13 counties voted as a single unit the dry cause would have had a majority of over 500, indicating a good chance for the success of the prohibition amendment next fall.

The vote by counties is as follows:

COUNTY	WET	DRY
Baraga, W.	76	310
Clare, W.	1068	2415
Delta, W.	68	479
Ingham, D.	90	976

Deceased Had Been a Resident of Charlevoix County for Over Thirty Years.

Mrs. William C. Grandy, for some 39 years a resident of Charlevoix county, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Roy Kane of Elgin, Illinois, on Thursday, March 30. Deceased had been in failing health for some time.

Mrs. Jane Grandy was born in Kingscourt, Kavenagh, Ireland, October 19, 1846. She came to America with her parents when she was five years of age and settled in Wollcott, Wayne county, New York. She was united in marriage to William C. Grandy, January 17, 1869, moving with her family to Michigan in 1875, settling in Kalkaska county. They later moved to Charlevoix county, where they resided until the death of Mr. Grandy, five years ago.

Shortly after the death of her husband, she went to Elgin, Illinois, to live with her daughter, Mrs. Roy Kane, where her death took place.

The remains were brought to this city Saturday, and Sunday afternoon funeral services were held from the Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. Quinton Walker officiating. Interment at Brookside cemetery.

Deceased is survived by a son, Claud H., of Eureka, California, and a daughter, Mrs. Roy Kane of Elgin, Illinois, besides a host of intimate friends and former neighbors, who greatly regret her demise.

COUNTY G. O. P. MEETING APRIL 18

Central Committee at Lansing Selects Date for County Convention.

Delegates to be Named for Congressional and State Meets—State Convention May 3.

April 8 has been selected by the Republican state central committee as the time for the Republican convention to be held in Charlevoix and other Michigan counties.

At the county conventions the Republicans will name delegates to the 11th congressional convention, which is to be held at St. Ignace on April 25. The county convention will be made up of delegates chosen from each ward and precinct. This means that in Charlevoix there will be eleven delegates chosen in proportion to the last vote cast for secretary of state.

The first ward will have two delegates, the second five and the third four. There will be 22 delegates from the county precincts.

Six delegates will be selected for the congressional convention and ten for the state convention. The latter will be held at Lansing on May 3. William J. Pearson of Boyne Falls will preside at the county convention, for he is the chairman of the Republican county committee.

The congressional convention at Saint Ignace will have the important work of selecting two delegates and two alternates to the national convention. The alternates have the same privileges as the delegates except that they cannot vote. One hundred delegates are expected at the congressional meeting.

It is expected that G. W. McCormick of Menominee will be named as one of the delegates from the 11th district, as at the present time he is the only candidate in the field.

The state convention at Lansing on May 3 will be made up of the delegates chosen at the various county conventions. Ten men will represent Charlevoix county at this meeting. Here the Republicans will O. K. the delegates to the national convention. They are obliged by law to thus confirm.

In addition the delegates will name four delegates-at-large to the national convention at Chicago in June. Among these men the upper peninsula will probably get Chase S. Osborn as one of the four and indications are that he or A. E. Petermann of Calumet will be selected.

Although not bound by the primary election law, the delegates to the national convention will cast their votes for the man who gets the largest vote in the state primary election. This man will be William Alden Smith, who is the "native son" favorite for the presidency from Michigan.

It is expected that the delegates will give him an unanimous complimentary vote on the first ballot. As stated before, they are not obligated to do so, but are more or less bound so morally. After the first ballot it is expected that the Michigan men will line up behind some of the candidates who spring up at the last moment, and at the present time it looks as though Justice Charles E. Hughes or Theodore Roosevelt will be the man who will stand out most prominently in the presidential spotlight.

Auction Sales

My business nowadays is crying Auction sales. I believe that during the past four years I have established the reputation of being a successful auctioneer. During the past two years I have cried practically every sale in this section. Ask those who have employed me as to my ability.

When you are ready for your sale write me at Charlevoix or get into communication with the Charlevoix Courier. Ask for the Booklet, "How to Conduct an Auction Sale."

mind. All we want is improvement. It doesn't matter how we make it or where we buy it.

Now is the time for school boards to hire their teachers for next year. If you have a good teacher who is capable in discipline and progressive it will be cheaper for you to raise her wages than to experiment with a new teacher. If your teacher has made good it is only courtesy for you to issue an invitation at this time, so that your teacher may frankly talk over next year's plans with you and know what to depend on for next year. If your school is difficult your teacher may express a desire for a smaller school for next year and you may look NOW for an experienced and strong teacher for the coming year. If your school has more than fifteen pupils enrolled an experienced teacher should, as a rule, be hired. The commissioner wishes to be of all possible service to school boards in this work.

Arbor Day is coming. Several nurseries and normal schools are giving trees to school districts for the annual tree planting.

Drinking fountains are not a necessity to a Standard School. They are not required, but they are very strongly recommended.

See notice of teachers' examination in another column of this paper.

The commissioner will be in Boyne City for office hours April 9th, 10-12 a. m., at the schoolhouse. Regular office hours outside of East Jordan will then be discontinued until the opening of the school year. During the spring rush and summer months all distant cases that cannot be cared for by correspondence will be arranged for in an appointment agreeable to both parties.

The following circular letter was sent by the state department to all county boards of school examiners:

"The county board of school examiners shall have the right to renew without examination the certificates of any persons who shall have previously attained an average standing of at least 85 per cent. in all studies covered in two or more previous examinations and who shall have been since such last-named examination continuously and successfully teaching in the public schools. County normal certificates subject to one renewal are granted upon the completion of 36 weeks of normal training. A second renewal may be granted to holders of county normal certificates who have received four advanced credits (twelve weeks work in each subject) at a state normal or other approved school. This usually requires two six-week terms at a state normal or other school giving similar work.

"To promote professional training and to encourage a more adequate preparation of teachers the department of public instruction recommends that candidates for renewals of county certificates shall file for each renewal four advanced credits (twelve weeks work in each subject) from a state normal or other approved school. This usually requires two six-week terms at a state normal or other school giving similar work.

"These recommendations are made to take effect July 1, 1917.

"Superintendent."

Hello! You with Coughs Here's Speedy Relief

Stop the hacking and hacking, raise the phlegm, heal the soreness with Foley's Honey and Tar Compound.

"Just like all on troubled waters," is the way one grateful woman describes the benefit of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound.

It spreads a soothing, healing coating over the raw inflamed throat—it loosens the hack—raises the phlegm—and really works wonders.

Why hack, hack, hack—driving everybody almost crazy, using up your strength, weakening your vitality and inviting serious sickness when there's a speedy, soothing, sure relief in Foley's Honey and Tar Compound.

"After using medicine from the doctor, without results, for my grandchildren, who were visiting me," says Mr. J. A. Shanks, of Lewisburg, Ind.

"I had to get up and get a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound out of my store and give them. After a few doses were given they went to sleep and slept throughout the night without coughing. I have handled Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for more than eight years and always recommend it."

You'll find Foley's Honey and Tar at your druggists. Be sure to ask for Foley's and see that you get the yellow package. Nothing else will do the work that Foley's Honey and Tar will do. 25c, 50c and $1.00 sizes.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running ear or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

"The miserable failure of the present administration in managing our domestic affairs and its shameful weakness in dealing with our foreign relations, have so angered the people of the country that it has become not only the imperative duty, but the deepest desire of all good citizens to drive it out of power and reinstate as speedily as the laws of the land will permit, a government that will restore the confidence and rekindle the pride which every patriot ought to feel in the strength and justice of his nation. It is almost unthinkable that the overwhelming majority opposed to the administration will allow their disagreement upon some things to permit a continuance of the Democratic plague which is now ravaging the American republic. The one paramount duty before us is the retirement of Woodrow Wilson and his followers in the House and Senate. When we win, as we will, some of us may not get all we want, but we are bound to get something better than we have now, for the mind cannot conceive anything worse."

"The President and Congress began their mad assault upon our institutions by the enactment of a tariff law which, taking it altogether, is the complete compound of ignorance and indifference ever composed by a legislative body. It neither gives protection to our home markets nor yields revenue for the maintenance of the government. It defies every principle of economics ever advanced by the disciples of any school of scientific thought. Had it not been for the hideous war which has paralyzed the industries of Europe it would have put the country into bankruptcy, with no prospect of a dividend to creditors. Our Democratic friends must shiver when they reflect that the immunity we are receiving and the prosperity we are enjoying depend wholly upon the most tremendous catastrophe that ever befell the human race, and that their fatal design was frustrated only by the destruction of our competitors in a cataclysm from which the world will not recover in a century. If they can draw any consolation from the situation as they look upon the horrors across the sea, and then upon the empty treasury of their country, let them have it, for the Lord knows their burdens are heavy enough." THEATRICAL

"The Morals of Marcus."

That celebrated and popular young star, Marie Doro, makes her debut before the motion picture camera in the Famous Players Film Company's five-part film adaptation of her foremost stage success, "The Morals of Marcus."

Miss Doro's gifted impersonation of Carlotta, the refugee from the Turkish harem, is the nearest approach to hypnotism from the screen that one could imagine.

"The Morals of Marcus" will create one of the most wholesome memories possible to theatregoers, and gives the Paramount Program, under whose banner it is released, a new and important significance as the most dignified program of feature films in the world.

This attractive subject will be at the Majestic Theatre, Tuesday, April 11.

"It Is No Laughing Matter"

Hi Judd, poet, postmaster and philosopher, is the sunshine of the village. The verses he writes proclaim him the wit of the village. Because of the verse writing Mrs. Judd is often discouraged; Hi confides in his daughter Bea, who is consoling, and when Hi is not around she makes a collection of the verses and sends them on to a great newspaper.

Jim Skinner, an unscrupulous, grasping old miser, holds the mortgage on the house and also designs upon Hi's position as postmaster. Then the bank fails and shadows hang low. The mortgage is due. Heartbroken, they are preparing to leave the little home when word comes from the newspaper—"Verses accepted—send them as fast as you can write them."

Thus ends the story. Hi with his $500 check from the newspaper pays off the mortgage; the future holds its promise. Majestic Theatre, Friday, April 7.

SYNOPSIS.

Dudley Larnigan, district attorney, attacks the liquor and vice trusts. He is killed by an agent of a secret society, the committee of fifteen. His son, Bruce Larnigan, is elected district attorney and takes up the fight. Bruce is in love with Dorothy Maxwell, whose father is head of the insurance trust.

Bruce Larnigan is decaying to an evil resort in an effort to frame him up. He has the police commissioner present. A fire starts in a tenement. Larnigan saves the children of Dow, one of the conspirators. This man agrees to expose the trust. He is murdered by the gang.

Stanford Stone, head of the graft syndicate, insists Larnigan must be killed. Gunmen are posted in the park to kill Larnigan in his automobile. Dorothy Maxwell, over the telephone, hears the plot. Two more conspirators are killed, and Larnigan again escapes.

Bruce Larnigan goes to Chicago to fight the graft trust. He is followed by a desperado, is assaulted and thrown overboard. He is rescued by his long lost brother Tom, who returns to New York and takes up the fight. Dodson, the head of the graft trust, fearing exposure, kills himself.

new we would have upon his mother in his weakened condition.

In Lyndham the threatened strike had been called. I. W. W. organizers, preaching the industrial revolution and the right of workers who were underpaid to make actual war, by destroying the property of their employers, were stirring up all sorts of trouble. Tom, while holding the deepest sympathy for the workers, advised them against the destruction of property.

But the I. W. W. men had more influence with the ignorant workers than Tom. Moreover, Ayers, with a refinement of meanness, was doing his utmost to provoke an outbreak. At his instigation strangers appeared in town—thugs from Boston—who mingled with the workers and pretended to be among them. Acting under his orders, these men set fire to one or two buildings, and the strikers, of course, were blamed. As a result strike troops were sent.

"Be careful," Tom pleaded. "They've got the soldiers now. What they want is a good excuse to fire into a crowd of strikers. They think that will create a reign of terror and that the strikers will all go back to work—with public sympathy on the other side."

Gradually Tom's counsel bore fruit. He was able to make the soberer spirits among the strikers listen to him and so prevent, the I. W. W. men, whom he suspected of being secretly in the pay of Ayers, from inciting them to acts of violence.

Tom decided, too, to adopt no old trick of Bruce's. Trusting to his being unknown to Ayers, he slipped a note into his pocket one day.

"Bruce Larnigan is out of the way for the time, but his brother is not," ran the note. "I know your scheme here, and I shall block your plans. Be careful or you will be the first to suffer for the crimes of you and your associates. Tom Larnigan."

He was not, however, as unknown as he fondly imagined himself to be. The spies of Stone and Ayers were all around, and some hint of Tom's activities had already come to the graft syndicate. Even before he slipped the warning note into Ayers' pocket there had been discussions among the chief grafters as to the best means of securing his elimination from the fight.

Tom felt that he was terribly helpless. Above all he needed money, and he was almost penniless. And then one day chance brought help to his very door. An automobile had broken down outside of his cottage, and he went out to offer aid. To his amazement, he discovered that its only occupant was Ben Travers, with whom he had unsuccessfully prospected for gold in the west.

"Tom," cried Ben, "I've looked everywhere for you! I struck it rich last year. Tom, I'm a millionaire! How's it going? What are you doing here?"

"It's a long story, Ben," said Tom. "Come in, and I'll tell you."

Ben accepted the invitation and listened, wide-eyed with wonder, to Tom's tale. Tom then read a list of grievances of the textile workers.

"I want to buy a stack of chips and sit in that game!" Ben announced when Tom had finished. "By gorry, that's the sort of action I'm looking for! I guess my money will help, too—eh? You come to New York with me and I'll back your game to the last cent!"

So Tom was able, sure of all the financial backing he needed, to go to New York. And, arriving, Ben found an invitation to a reception in the home of Ayers himself.

"I'll take you with me—introduce you as my old partner," said Ben. "My partner you are, too, Tom—that goes!"

Ayers, at a meeting of the graft syndicate, produced his note of warning from Tom to the consternation of all and especially of Stone, who had believed Tom well out of the way.

"You're a joke, Stone!" said Ayers sneeringly. "Leave this man to me. I'll get rid of him!"

There was no opposition. Every one was glad to have some one else undertake the task of removing one or two hated and feared men of Larnigan.

At the reception, which was held that night, Ben and Tom were late in arriving. But Tom, making good use of his eyes and his ears alike, managed to pick up some information that seemed likely to be of value later.

While he was so engaged Travers upped a point of talking to Ayers and expressed great sympathy with the textile unions in connection with the labor troubles at his mills.

"The better you treat em the more they want," said Ben in pursuance of his plan to catch Ayers off his guard. "I believe in sweating them! Working people are meant to work, not to strike for more money."

"You're a man after my own heart!" laughed Ayers, entirely without suspicion that Ben was only leading him on. "Why, they've even begun to threaten me personally. Look here! Here's a letter I got the other day."

From his pocket he pulled the note that Tom had sent him and smoothed it out for Ben to read.

"I'd like to meet the man who wrote that," he snarled. "I'd show him whether or not it was safe to threaten me, the honed. But he'll keep out of my way, you'll see!"

"Tom Larnigan," said Ben, seeming to be vastly surprised. "Why, my old partner here is always talking about a man of that name. Maybe he can find him for you. Shall I ask him?"

Ayers nodded. And Tom, coming up, grinned slyly at the sight of the note.

"Know him? I should say so, the skunk!" he said. "Saw him tonight."

"But he's no friend of yours, eh?" chuckled Ayers.

"Friend?" snapped Tom. "No, sir!"

"If you'll excuse my friend I've got a proposition to make to him," said Ayers slyly. He led the way to his library. "Look here," he said. "If you'll bring that man Larnigan here to me I'll pay you $1,000, cash down—tonight. That's all I want. You need not do anything more."

"Easy money," said Tom, grinning. "I'll go out now and see if I can find him."

"Go, and good luck to you!" said Ayers, greatly excited.

Tom, as he reached the street, was amused.

"But I guess I'd do well to have some one with me if I go back," he reflected. "I mightn't get in otherwise, and I want to talk with Mr. C. Wood Ayers when he's alone."

He hung about for a time, wishing he knew some one who would be willing to impersonate him for a few moments. He dared not trust a stranger. He was afraid that he might encounter some spy. And, while he waited, by the strangest of coincidences he saw an automobile pass. In the back seat of which sat Dorothy Maxwell. Had he only known the truth he would have stepped that car at the risk of his own life.

For in it Dorothy was going to save him, as she believed. Deeply suspicious of Stone, she had been watching him, and she had learned that Stone, afraid that Ayers would fail, had sent Dinu, the successor of the dead bully, Black, to attack Tom at Lyndham. One of his women spies had spotted Tom, and had reported after Ayers had promised to take care of Tom. She was to go with two thugs and point Tom out to them.

Dorothy, determined to save Bruce's brother, disguised herself as this woman and succeeded in being taken along in the car in her place. It was as she set out upon this errand that Tom saw her, and sneered at the sight of her, since he had recognized her at once.

However, he dismissed Dorothy from his mind. And at last he decided to risk retreating alone to Ayers' house. Until, as he neared it, he came upon a young man reeling, plainly helpless from drink.

"The very man!" thought Tom. "Here, bucko," he said, taking the young fellow's arm. "I'll look after you."

"Mush, blushed," said the young fellow. He went along as nervously as if Tom had been his oldest friend.

Tom's plan worked to perfection.

"Ah, you got him! Good!" cried Ayers. "Here, jake him in and pitch him on to that sofa. I'll settle with you before I talk to you."

Tom obeyed. Then he followed Ayers into the library.

"Keep your money," he said. "I've tricked you, Mr. Ayers. It's I that am Tom Larnigan."

Ayers staggered to his feet.

"You?" he cried. "My God, who is the other man?"

He leaped for the door. And Tom, following, saw that the couch had mysteriously closed. Suddenly he understood. The sofa was a "murder couch," designed to close and kill its occupant. It was murder Ayers had planned the murder of an innocent man that Tom had, unwittingly, helped him to do.

Ayers struggled desperately with the couch. At last he got it open. The young man was there dead, and Ayers cried out in agony at the sight of his face.

"I've killed me son!" he groaned. "My only son!"

Slowly Tom passed out. He met a policeman.

"Here's my name and address, officer," he said. "You'd better go to the Ayers house. A case of something like murder."

And meanwhile Dorothy had aroused the suspicions of Stanford Stone's thugs. They had engaged and bound her and thrust her down in the car while they went into a rendezvous to celebrate their success in vengeance.

Suffrage Notes

Kansas Republicans at their state convention in Topeka, March 21, endorsed national women suffrage. They passed a strong resolution commending the beneficial results of equal suffrage in Kansas. This is the proof of the pudding.

A letter from a girl in Alberta, Canada:

Dear Molly,—You know I am here in Strathcona on a little visit to Cousin Anne. Well, I think I'll stay. Women have just been admitted to the human race in Alberta. The equal suffrage bill has passed both houses and will become a law as soon as the lieutenant-governor signs it. Uncle Ed. says there won't be any difficulty about that, as the bill is a government measure. You have no idea how delightful it is to be counted as a real person. Nell sent me a newspaper clipping telling of the work of the Women's Civic Club in Boyne City. Did you know they were planning an anti-fly campaign? I think the idea is grand. I wonder whether the Charlevoix women are interested in such things—a cleaner city, I mean.

Julia Ward Howe said in one of her earnest appeals to the Massachusetts legislature in behalf of equal suffrage: "God forbid that in this country chivalry and legislation should be set one against the other. I ask you, gentlemen, to put your chivalry into your legislation."

Alton is a factory town and a railroad center, and municipal conditions were very bad under the management of the city fathers alone. her father's plans, she determined to break her reluctantly given promise to marry Stone.

"I'd do anything else for you, father," she cried, "but I can't do that! I'm afraid of him!"

When Stone called that night she gave him back his ring.

Stone did not at once show his power, however.

"It's girlish nonsense, that's all," he told Muxwell. "I shan't hold you responsible yet, man; don't be frightened. But, of course, if the worst comes to the worst, I shall expect you to see your authority over her as her father. But it won't come to that, I'm sure. She'll come to her senses in time."

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

Diversity is just as important to fruit growing as in any other kind of farming. It pays to make a long season by having both early and late fruits.

In carrying out this idea with tree fruits the June plum comes prominently into the scheme. Strawberries, bush fruits, cherries, harvest apples, etc., open the season, and for four months there may be a good income from these products.

Just here I would like to emphasize the importance of fruit canning operations. By simple canning methods which every intelligent housekeeper understands and which beginners readily learn fruit products are doubled in value and may be kept almost indefinitely. There is a large waste of garden and orchard products unless the owner employs preserving and canning processes.

Plums, as a rule, are hardy and prolific. The June plum is worth $4 per bushel, or fully twice as much as the later varieties. The trees are hardy, and little trouble is experienced from insects. In the spring there are usually some insect pests, but if once destroyed there is no more trouble for the rest of the season. The plums are easy to harvest, as the trees are not very high. The money for this product of the farm comes when other fruit crops are beginning to ripen, and on most farms it is greatly appreciated.

Cherries and gooseberries, like plums, give the farmer a few days in which to turn around. The work of picking, marketing and canning is less arduous than with strawberries. In planning a little farm all these facts must be kept in mind. Then there are other products which seem to harmonize with fruit growing and help to keep up a cash income without a great deal of drudgery. Poultry and bees belong in this category.

Honey is an interesting side line to fruit growing that may be profitably enlarged upon in many localities with benefits accruing two ways. The honey crop itself is often a money crop, and aside from this bees are about the best thing going to develop full fruiting and perfect fruit in an orchard.

There are many instances where people with old orchards uncertain and unsatisfactory in fruiting have developed them into fine producers by keeping a lot of bees and distributing the colonies over the orchard so that they get at the trees in bloom time.

It may be necessary—probably will—to grow other crops to supply the bees such as white clover, buckwheat, alfalfa, and so on. However, the return from the honey crop will justify all this. Meantime the bees will get part of their support from the apple trees while they are in bloom, and in return they will improve the quality and yield of the apple crop itself enough to make their profitable investment.

Of course some people take more kindly to or have better success with bees than others. It is a mistake to be easily disheartened. Bees seem essential to the welfare of orchards, and those who have had trouble and become discouraged should persist in efforts to keep an apiary. By continued study and experiments difficulties can be overcome, and in time the bees can be made profitable themselves, while at the same time they contribute materially to the profits of fruit growing by the work of fertilizing the trees while in bloom.

Sowing Spinach Seed in Winter. Few people realize that spinach seed can be planted during the last of February or first part of March, says the American Agriculturist. The ground should be prepared the fall before by plowing and harrowing. At the time mentioned the spinach seed is broadcast over the ground, using about twenty pounds of the thick leaf variety to the acre. If the soil happens to be workable at that time it may be lightly harrowed. In any event a light, even coating of rotting stable manure should be spread over the ground to cover the seed.

Planted in this manner the seeds will germinate and grow a little every sunny day, and by the usual time for planting the spring spinach these plants will be well started. The crop will be ready for cutting a week or ten days earlier than it would be otherwise.

Temperance

(Conducted by the National Women's Christian Temperance Union.)

LABOR AND PROHIBITION.

"The trend of sentiment of organized labor is towards prohibition," said Richard Jones of Duluth, a member of the Minnesota state senate, speaking before the Scandinavian Socialist organization.

"Some trade union leaders claim that prohibition would make for non-employment. If this is so why have locomotive engineers to the number of 70,000 endorsed it? If prohibition is inimical to the interests of labor, why did the southern labor congress, composed of men from nine southern states, refuse to ask for a repeal of the prohibition laws of the South when requested to do so by the United Brewery Workmen of America? Local labor leaders may insist that the saloon is a poor man's club, but the American Federation of Labor at its convention at Toronto condemned the use of that term.

"We are urged not to vote men out of employment in a business which is destructive to society. I would vote these men out of that employment and into something valuable to themselves and their fellow men. I would like to have a chance to vote about 5,000,000 men in Europe out of their present jobs. If this principle applies in one case why not in another? To advocate peace in Europe would throw thousands of workmen in America who are engaged in the manufacture of munitions of war out of their present employment, but thousands of trade unionists and Socialists are today doing all in their power to spread anti-militaristic propaganda among their fellow workers."

SHORT-SIGHTED POLICY.

In the judgment of many, it is difficult to understand why preparedness to meet a remotely possible attack by a foreign foe should take precedence over preparedness to conquer and overthrow a known foe in our midst, who is every day defying us and whose fall of death and destruction rivals that of the battlefield of Europe, says the Union Signal, official organ of the National A. O. U. W. There is one study one chance in a thousand that our fathers, brothers, husbands and sons may be called upon at some future time to defend the safety of this country from an alien enemy, but there is a positive certainty that every day and night of every week, until the liquor traffic is put out of existence it will bring thousands of our young men, physically and mentally and with their hands and feet will of feel disastrously the next generation.

A policy so short-sighted that it neglects to guard against a generalized, immediate continuing and gigantic proportions in order to prepare for one which may never have to be faced, is unworthy of enlightened America.

SUNDAY REST FOR POLICE.

The blotters at police headquarters in Duluth, Minn., are, says Chief McKercher, illustrated temperance lectures.

On Saturday forty arrests were made, most of them on charges of drunkenness. That included Sunday morning until seven o'clock. A clean sheet was put on the blotter Sunday morning at that hour. At eight p. m. there was not a name on it. At 8:20 there was one arrest—a man who was wanted in another town on a charge of passing worthless checks.

Saturday a big day in the saloon business, result, forty arrests. Sunday dry—result, no arrests for drunkenness. "If that isn't an argument for temperance," says the chief, "I don't know what is."

AS ONE NEWSPAPER SEES IT.

To present on the first page the particulars of a gruesome tragedy resulting from a drink-maddened brain; on another page the guarantee of a cure at the Keeley Institute; on the editorial page a reprehension against the sin and shame of overdunking, and in the advertising section a full page invitation for everybody to have a drink, all in the case of a certain Detroit beer advertisement, the tempting offer of "three bottles free"—is as grotesque a situation as the nurse merrily the undertaker so as to catch them coming and going.

PROHIBITION RESULTS.

The following figures from the police records of Moorhead, Minn., indicate conditions in that city before and after the abolishment of saloons:

July, 1911, arrests, 439; 1913, only 31. August, 1911, arrests, 570; August, 1913, only 3. September, 1914, arrests, 1,135; September, 1915, only 26. A total of 2,055 fewer arrests during three months under prohibition than during the corresponding period under saloon regime.

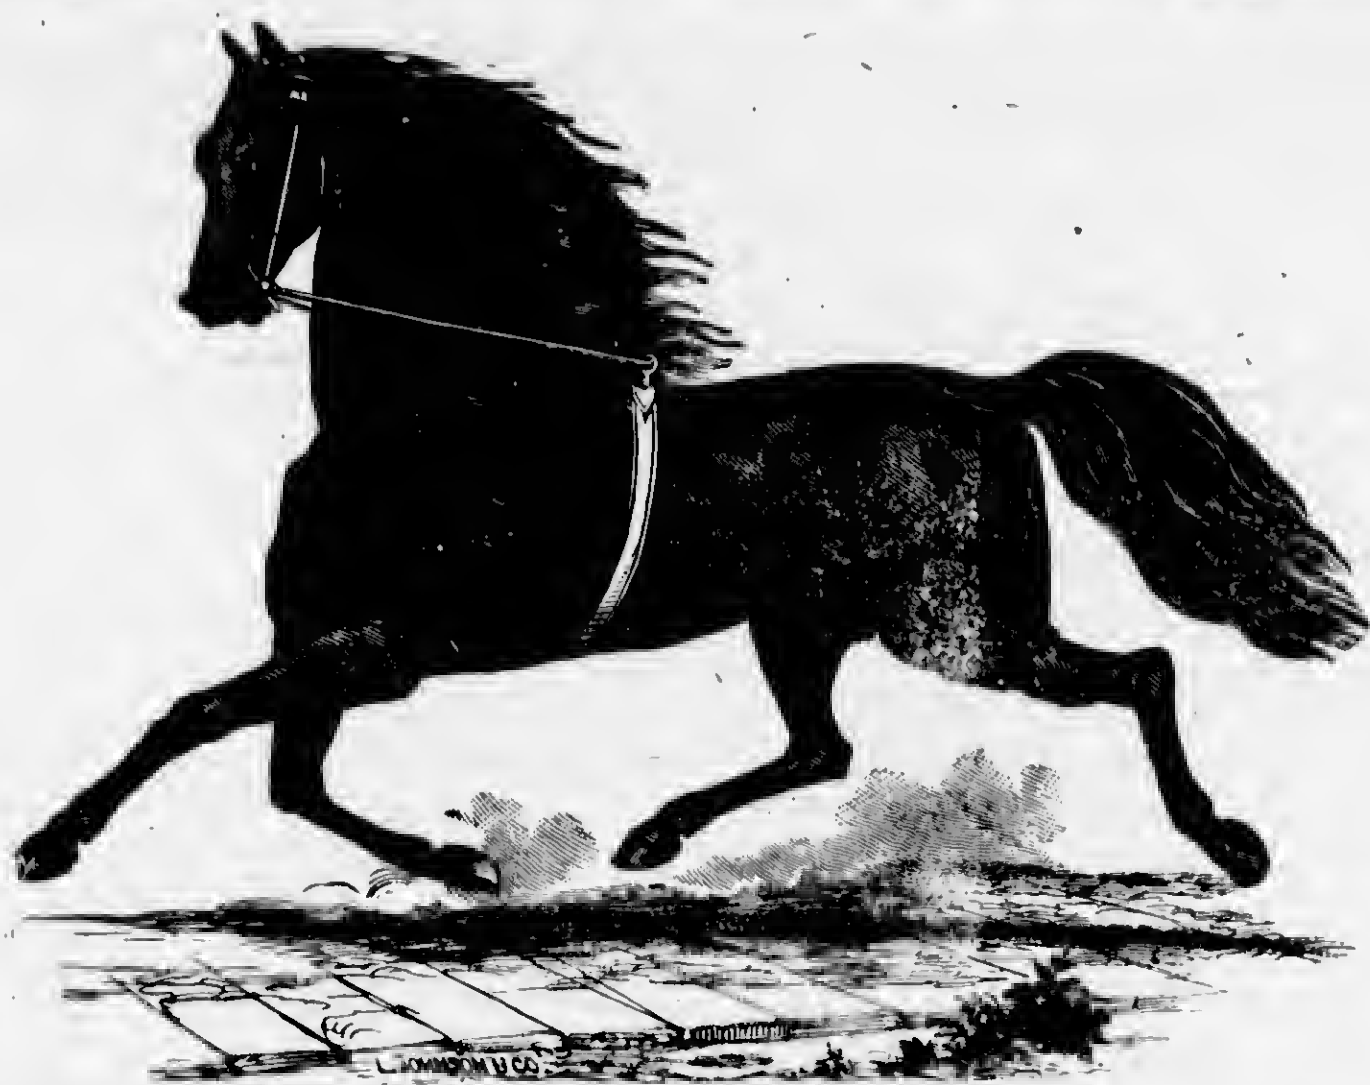

GLOATS OVER SLAVES.

A man stood in his doorway one morning watching a multitude of men hurrying to their day's labor. Turning to a friend he said, "Those are my slaves, they are working for me; tonight they will come and bring me their wages." The man was a saloon keeper.

HOW TO PROVIDE FOR THE FIREPLACE AND ITS ATTRACTIVENESS.

Suitable andirons are not always easy to find, and frequently one sees a beautiful fireplace spoiled in appearance because it has been supplied with andirons and accessories out of proportion and of an inappropriate style.

Sometimes to a luxurious big living room is given a pair of little old time andirons which would do exactly for a cozy colonial bedroom, while small fireplaces are often thoughtlessly furnished with huge, heavy, modern andirons.

For rooms done in a quaint old time style of furnishing, none of the reproductions of the Hessian designs of andirons painted in gay colors are good.

A complete set of fireplace furnishings may include an old brass fender with claw feet, a pair of steeply tapered andirons, shovel, tongs and heavy rings to hold them to the jamb of the fireplace. Such a set would fit well in a modern colonial house.

Interior decorators say that a fireplace is not complete without a brass roaster and corn popper. The latter are on the style of the old time bed warmers. Several extremely well appointed fireplaces, strictly suited to the quaint environment of the room, have the copper bed warmer and the copper trimmed bellows hanging on a carved copper hook at the side.

Brass kettles in odd designs hanging on a crane, flat toasters of brass and the long adjustable handled marshmallow forks are shown this season.

A HYGIENE NOTE.

How to Clear the Complexion Without Dosing Your System.

A glass of hot lemonade taken night and morning is a good thing to clear the complexion. Squeeze half a lemon into a tumblerful of boiling water, sweeten very slightly and drink as soon as it is cool enough.

Another thing a girl with a muddy complexion should do is to have a quick all over soap and water wash every morning with very hot water and then in sponge down with cold, ending up with a good rub with a rough towel.

As to food, don't eat rich, highly seasoned things. Light, housewifely food doesn't hurt, neither do plain cakes, but don't go in for tinned salmon and lobster, curry or rich, heavy cakes, and don't drink much coffee or cocoa.

Now, as to the way to treat your face itself: If your skin is really very thick and muddy it is an excellent thing to wash it every night at bedtime with very hot water and "green soap." Lather your face well and you will find the soap brings away blackheads and is most cleansing, but it is only suitable for really thick skin. It is apt to irritate a fine or thin skin.

Let the soap remain on a few minutes, then rinse it off in very hot water.

In the morning sponge your face with cold water and then wipe it over with can de cologne and water or a little camphor and water.

How to Avoid Nervousness in This Rackety Age.

No one can help feeling nervous at times in this age of rush and racket, but every woman should remember that the more she controls this feeling the longer she will retain her beauty. It is quite possible to put on the brakes, as it were, and not let the nerves run away with us. If people fret you it is not necessary to be rude to them. Try instead to avoid them.

Don't read books that irritate you. Books are plentiful. Therefore put away the offending volume and choose another. If a noise at night worries you don't let it continue to do so. Get up and see to the matter and put it right.

Don't let yourself get into the habit of being bored. It is not worth while. When you feel it coming on plunge at once into some task that will take all your time and energy. It is better to run away from certain things than to let them irritate you.

How to Provide a Suitable Receptacle For Soiled Linen.

A wicker hamper is perhaps the ideal laundry container. But it must be kept clean. One enameled white looks so clean that it is hard to remember that it may harbor impurities, even germs. It must be washed in hot water occasionally and dried in the sunshine, and then occasionally it can be further refreshed with a clean coat of enamel.

How to Remove White Spots on Your Pat Mahogany Furniture.

The white spots which hot dishes often leave on tables and other wooden surfaces can be removed by applying a mixture composed of equal parts of alcohol, olive oil and pure clear vinegar. Shake well before using. Rub well with a woolen cloth and polish with another soft woolen cloth.

How to Mend a Lace Curtain Without Large Expense.

A simple way to mend lace curtains after cleaning them is to take a small piece of old lace curtain or net the size of a hole, dip it in a little cold starch and place on the curtain to be mended; then press with a hot iron. It does not show it was mended.

How to Get the Most Value For Your Money

NO mechanical adjustments to make except the turning of one screw to bring the bowl to the correct height—once a year, perhaps; every bearing oiled with clean, fresh oil before the handle makes a quarter turn; no chance to injure the spindle or spindle bearings when replacing the bowl. These are three exclusive Primrose separator features.

Just think what these features mean to you. Nothing goes wrong on a Primrose, because there is nothing to go wrong. There are no adjustments to make for ordinary work. The milk supply bowl is firmly set in one place—the right place. The milk float goes into just the right position, either side up. Every bearing is plentifully oiled before you begin to skim. The gears are all rigidly fastened. The bowl has the cleanest, closest-skimming device and the largest skimming surface ever put into a cream separator.

The Primrose is worth more than any other separator built, and it sells for less than many of them. Drop in and let us show you why.

SHIPPING BY PARCEL POST.

Careful Packing and High Quality Necessary For Good Returns. (Prepared by United States department of agriculture.)

Proper packing for parcel post marketing is of primary importance and needs to be emphasized so that both the contents and the container may carry properly, arrive in good condition and present a satisfactory appearance. The pack should be regular, of a nearly uniform produce as possible and of full measure according to the quantity ordered. A little practice will enable almost any one to pack a basket or container of any kind in a satisfactory manner.

One important requirement for parcel post shipping and marketing is a proper and satisfactory container. Sometimes the consumer can secure containers more readily and economically than the producer. Those with handbills are much less likely to be damaged in transit in the mails than those which are not thus supplied and which are likely to be tossed or thrown or handled by the string or twine used in tying them. A bamboo basket serves the purpose very well and may be used a long time.

Ordinary split baskets made of strips of veneer may also be used, and if they can be secured at a price sufficient.

PARCEL POST MARKET BASKET OF ASSORTED VEGETABLES, UNCOVERED AND COVERED.

Recently cheap a new one for each shipment is more economical than having them returned, unless they are sent back in lots of ten or more under one cover. This of course necessitates using them without a wooden handle, in which case a heavy twine should be used for a handle. This twine can be untied and the baskets nested or placed in one another for return shipment. If a basket with a wooden handle is used care should be taken to see that it is securely nailed, not only at the rim of the basket, but farther down toward the bottom, so as to prevent undue leverage which may break loose the nailing.

Corrugated paste-board cartons frequently may be found useful and desirable for this service. They are made in a great variety of sizes, dimensions and patterns and when empty are shipped "knocked down" flat.

It is probable that the point which will make the strongest appeal to the average consumer is that he can secure by parcel post a fresher, brighter, more attractive and thus possibly a better product than he can obtain otherwise. Producers should remember always that the appearance of fruit and produce is one of the strongest factors in making a sale. It will not pay to market anything but standard and fancy produce by parcel post, and the surest way to establish a dependable, continuing and increasing business is to forward nothing but strictly reliable and satisfactory product.

The average producer, as a rule, does not realize the importance of appearance as a factor in selling goods and frequently is careless and indifferent in preparing produce for market. The consumer, on the other hand, relies very largely upon appearance in selecting food supplies and unattractive articles are passed by promptly. Produce should be of high quality, clean and attractive, carefully and neatly prepared and packed, of one variety, and, as far as practicable, uniform in size, shape, color and quality, and fast, but not lost, carefully packed to insure its arrival in a satisfactory condition.

"Keep the Witch Out of the Churn." Troubles arising from winter butter making are generally caused by the fact that the temperature is not right. Keep the cream at 52 degrees until two days before churning and then place where the temperature is about 75 degrees. During churning keep the cream at about 60 degrees. The water with which the small particles of butter are washed after the buttermilk is churned and taken off should be about the same temperature. Run two or three times with water, add salt and work just enough to work the salt well into the butter, as the directions in the American Farming to "keep the witch out of the churn."

What Geo. Klooster & Son of Ellsworth

have to say about cream separators this week

REMEMBER that a cream separator has to be used 730 times every year. If it runs hard, or isn't easy to wash, or doesn't skim clean, it is a constant annoyance and bother. No machine or implement on the farm receives such constant use and there is no other machine on the farm where quality of work means so much and first cost means so little.

A little loss of cream with a cream separator, multiplied 730 times, soon runs into money. It's too big a handicap for any cow owner to try to work under.

Creamerymen all over the world long ago came to the conclusion that the De Laval was the only machine they could afford to use. That's why 98% of the cream separators used in creameries the world over are De Laval.

You will find the biggest and best dairymen almost invariably using De Laval Experience has taught them that it is the most economical.

You can't afford to take any chances with your cream separator, and we know that if you will come to us and let us put in a De Laval for you, 730 times a year you will say to yourself "I made a good move when I bought that De Laval."

Sooner or later you will buy a DE LAVAL

POULTRY NOTES.

Hens must not be allowed to become too fat before the breeding season.

When the gobbler becomes too fat infertile eggs result.

Don't forget to give your hens grit and charcoal.

A hen that is laying needs more food than an unproductive one, and you may possibly get the latter too fat to lay.

After the hen once gets started to laying, she must have feed enough to meet the demands of her body and a surplus for egg production.

A California man who says he can sell geese for $1.50 each wishes to know the details of raising them. writes a correspondent of the Country Gentleman. He asks whether they must be mated in pairs, each pair penned separately and whether it is necessary to have a pond to insure proper mating and fertile eggs. He has a good grass range, therefore has the most essential factor, for he is remembered that the goose is a grazing animal and an abundant supply of grass in summer and succulent feed in winter not only assures thrifty, vigorous stock and eggs with stronger germs and higher fertility, but cheapens the feed materially.

So far as I know, nowhere are geese raised in such large numbers on single farms as are ducks and chickens. In many of the states, especially in the west and in Canada, they are raised on stock and grain farms at very little cost, because after the goslings are a few days old they can get a large part of their feed by grazing.

Many a small farmer, especially if he has low, wet land, is in a position to net a tidy sum by raising and fattening geese at a minimum of expense and labor.

The old notion that geese are monogamous and paired for life is a myth. The ganders will mate with two or three or even more geese. I have seen a goose which had lost her mate and refused to mate with another gander.

Geese should never be used as breeders until two years of age, and still older is better. Geese will lay more eggs when five or six years old than when young, and the goslings will be stronger. Geese can be used for breeders until they are twenty-five years old, and sometimes older. For market purposes the best plan is to raise two or three Toulouse geese to an Embden gander. The result of this cross will be stock that is easily raised, mature more quickly, grow to be larger and will fatten more quickly than any one variety. This mixed progeny should never be used for breeders, because they do not give good results. The geese pictured are of the Toulouse breed.

but I know that this is not true of all. I believe the wild goose and probably some of its crosses is an exception. Unless there is wide range it is better to have the ganders penned separately, each with his own harrow, as they fight viciously, especially in the mating season.

I raised geese successfully for several years with water for drinking purposes only, so I know the belief that they must have a pond or stream while mating to insure fertile eggs is not well founded. Still I believe it is better for the breeding stock of all water fowl to have water to swim in. It certainly is more natural.

Not only are geese more cheaply and easily fed than other poultry, but they have several other advantages in their favor. They require little in the way of buildings. A low, cheap shed to shelter them from severe storms and to provide a nesting place is sufficient. They suffer little from disease. They require less care and attention than other poultry. The breeding stock does not require renewing so often.

In raising geese, however, it is advisable to confine the goose and her brood until the goslings are a few weeks old. Geese are great foragers, and the old goose will tire and wear out her brood unless they are allowed to first gain size and strength before being turned out to pasture.

The Aylesbury Duck.

The Aylesbury duck is preferred in England to any other breed. It is claimed that the Aylesbury will attain killing size a fortnight sooner than the Peking and a month sooner than the Rouen.

MERCHANTS—Now is the Time.

OPPOSITION TO COUNTY AGENT CONSIDERED FROM ALL ANGLES

Those Working in Their Favor Do Not Claim They Know Everything About Farming—Cost to Tax Payers Practically Nothing for Amount of Good Derived.

Before the value of a County Agent has been established by actual trial, there are always many objections raised, which, on the surface at least, appear reasonable. Calm consideration of some of the objections, however, generally shows them lacking in logical foundation, and the others fall in the face of the actual facts of the case.

One of the objections heard, and this even in counties where farm advisers are employed, is that the men sent out are not experts. When this movement was in its infancy, county demonstrators, farm advisers, or county agricultural agents, as they are now called, were spoken of as farm experts. This title of expert had a misleading effect and some people expected the agent to know everything about every phase of the broad subject of farming. At present almost everyone has come to realize that no man can know it all. The wisest and most experienced man in the world cannot know all about farming, or doctoring, or banking, or practicing law. That is why advisers or examiners are needed in all of these callings. A farm adviser is not a man who never makes a mistake, but a trained observer who gathers the best information from the best farmers and scientists and passes it on to whomsoever inquires.

Another objection often heard in Charlevoix county is that the county agent might be a young college graduate with no practical farm experience. This, if true, would be a very serious objection surely. We doubt if any man can succeed as a farm advisor purely from college training. To be well qualified such a person ought to have college training in the theoretical and scientific side of agriculture, of course, but he should also have a few years of actual farming experience, if for no other reason than to acquaint him with the limitations of theory in actual practice.

Now, the men responsible for the placing of county agents knew these things just as well as any farmer does. The men who have been sent into the various Michigan counties as farm advisers have succeeded because they did possess the two essential qualifications mentioned above. Jason Woodman, the agent in Kalamazoo county, is an old man. C. B. Cook of Allegan county, is a man in middle life. H. G. Smith of Kent, Brody of St. Clair, Walker of Marquette, and, in fact, all the others are men of maturity. In no case has an inexperienced college graduate been sent in answer to a call for a county agent. Farmers of Charlevoix county need have no fear of having a misfit sent for a farm advisor. If by any chance the state superintendent of county agents should send such a person, those in charge of the movement in the county can reject him and ask for another candidate. The man finally chosen must be satisfactory to all concerned.

Still another objection is the increase in taxation. Now, it cannot be said that a $1200 or $1500 appropriation spread on the tax roll will not increase the taxes. The question is, therefore, what will this increase be and will the returns from the investment warrant it? The following figures are intended to show how little each person in the county will feel the increase.

With her 20,000 population, Charlevoix county would feel a $1200 appropriation as a tax of 6 cents per capita.

There are 1460 farms in the county. The county's share of the expense of a county agent would amount to an assessment of only 84 cents on each farm each year. On the basis of acreage the tax would amount to nearly one cent per acre, as the average farm in the county has 87.4 acres.

On the basis of valuation the tax would amount to about three-tenths of a mill on each dollar's farm valuation.

Next, will the returns warrant an investment of 84 cents a year per farm in a county agent? The investment is small, it is true; but if the returns are less, good business principles forbid the investment. We believe, however, that the farmers of the county can well afford to invest many times this amount for the privilege of having a farm advisor continually at their service. One example of how such a person might be of value in dollars and cents way will illustrate the point.

It is a fact admitted by the majority of men that they know very little about the fertilizer requirements of the different soils and different farm crops. Commercial fertilizers with their several different kinds of plant food, expressed in percentages which are often purposely misleading, and even stable manure with its useful bacteria and its composition of unbalanced composition make a science in themselves. Each soil and each crop also presents special problems which the best farmers agree are exceedingly difficult to master. Under these circumstances we will say, for example, a fertilizer agent comes around to take the farmer's spring orders. He is generally quite as un-informed as the farmer himself. Together these two men, the one often too independent to seek unbiased and authoritative advice, and the other too interested in making a present sale to care about results,—these men plan an order for fertilizer amounting to from $25 to $100. In just such a case as this one can see how easily a few words of expert advice might save the farmer $10 or more, for if he orders and gets exactly what he needs, it is only through the rarest good luck. The county agent asked to visit the farm, or called up at his office by phone, might, without any trouble or expense to the farmer, save the man enough in fifteen minutes to pay his increase in taxes for the next fifteen years.

Another common objection comes from some of the small farmers and pioneers. Such men oppose the farm bureau movement because it costs too much, they say, to farm in the way a county agent would advise. They say, too, that they know what ought to be done but they can't afford to do it. To them farm advisers are only for rich farmers. These are the extremists in the class of thoughtless farmers. In the first place they assume that any change in their farming system will involve an unprofitable outlay which is not true. The most absurd part of their argument, however, is the assumption that they know everything necessary to successful farming. Their training and present policy have put them into a rut from which there is no turning. They are of that sort, too, who want something for nothing. To such men, $2 gained as the result of an investment of $10 makes a far lesser appeal than $1 secured from nothing invested. These are the men who never get beyond the stage of small farmer. They lack the imagination necessary to successful business. They are the stumbling blocks always in the path of their own progress. Fortunately their number is few and their influence small.

It is the small farmer and the pioneer who will be most helped by the county agent. These are the men most in need of the very kind of help the farm advisor can give. These are the ones who should stand back, rather than oppose, the movement. The well-to-do farmer needs help least of all, but, because he is by nature progressive, he has always tried to promote progress through such agencies as the farm advisor.

Let all the farmers of Charlevoix county as a body get behind this movement and give the county agent a trial, at least. "Nothing ventured, nothing gained," is as true in this as in any other business. Let your supervisor know how you feel about this matter. Make this your motto: "A County Agent for Charlevoix in 1917."

INTERESTED IN BIRDS

M. A. C. Desires to Learn if They Destroy the Buds of Trees.

The evening grosbeak, a bird that is rarely seen east of the Mississippi River, has been observed in flocks of considerable size in the vicinity of Charlevoix since early in February. The normal students made a report to Prof. Barrows of M. A. C., speaking of the number and feeding habits of these birds. Professor Barrows would like to know further whether the birds are known to eat the buds off trees and, if so, whether the trees suffer serious injury. The normal students would be glad to have all interested aid them in making this report.

Wants Early Reservation.

F. V. Alexander, agent at the Pere Marquette station, received a letter the other day from parties in the south, asking him to be sure, and make suitable reservations for them on the 8th of September. The request, coming at this time of the year, caused considerable comment among the boys at the station. It will be complied with, and it is the hope of Charlevoix citizens that the agent will have scores of similar ones.

Auto Tax Upheld.

The constitutionality of the Michigan automobile tax law, passed by the last legislature, was upheld by the state supreme court in a decision rendered last week. The case was before the court on appeal from the Wayne circuit court. Many local automobilists have been awaiting the decision before procuring their 1916 auto license.

Plague of Bad Boys A Serious Problem

Great Increase in Youthful Outlawry Over Entire World—Urge Boy Scout Movement.

Charlevoix is not alone in suffering from the law-defying deeds of bad boys. Anyone who peruses the state papers—especially those of Detroit and Flint—cannot pick up an issue, it seems, without reading of some act of youthful outlawry. And now we have the word of the Springfield Republican that "the plague of bad boys is world-wide."

From all the countries in the war zone comes the complaint of an increase in juvenile law-breaking, says the Republican. For a time the English were inclined to make much of such reports from Germany and to ignore conditions at home. They gave a fine chance for moralizing upon kultur, but when it appeared that England, too, had its epidemic of bad boys the case grew less simple. A weekly British newspaper reports: "From every part of England comes the tale that the boy is getting out of hand, that something has got into his blood and sent him wild. What is

STRICKEN BY HEART DISEASE

C. N. Briggs Expires Suddenly on Way Home from Lansing.

Death Thought to be Due from Shock Received in Train Wreck While on his Way Home.

C. N. Briggs, well known in the city, died suddenly at Traverse City last Friday morning, while on his way to his home in this city from Lansing, where he had been employed during the winter months.

Mr. and Mrs. Briggs arrived in Traverse City on the afternoon train Thursday, but was compelled to remain overnight in that place on account of train connections. They registered at Sam's Cafe and were assigned rooms. About 2:45 Friday morning Mrs. Briggs was awakened by the labored breathing of her husband. She called for assistance and the night man and other guests responded, summoned a physician, but before the latter arrived, Mr. Briggs was dead.

The deceased was about forty-five years old and for some time has been suffering from heart trouble, but had concealed from his wife the serious nature of his ailment. It is thought his end was greatly hastened on account of the excitement and severe nervous shock received earlier in the day, when the train upon which they were riding collided with a freight, and in which he was severely bruised and shaken up.

Deceased had been a resident of Charlevoix for some three years, and formerly lived at Petoskey, coming here from McBride. He was a member of the I. O. O. F. and Moose orders, members of whom acted as escort at the funeral. Funeral services were held Monday at 10 o'clock from the Baptist church, Rev. L. C. Vinyard, officiating. Interment at Brookside cemetery.

Fire Caused Small Damage

A small blaze caused from sparks from the chimney falling on the roof at the home of H. S. Harsha, on State street, called out the fire department shortly after five o'clock Saturday afternoon. The loss was small.

A policy in a good fire insurance company protects you against loss in small or big fires. See Myrtle Young & Son about your insurance. Adv. 151d.

Spelling Contest Closes.

The Charlevoix County Spelling League—consisting of the high schools of East Jordan, Boyne City and Charlevoix—closed its annual contest with the week ending March 25. The contest extended over eight weeks, and fifty words were used each week. East Jordan made the highest record by winning six out of the eight weeks, with Charlevoix second.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to thank the members of the Moose and Odd Fellow orders and the many friends for the kind assistance rendered as in our recent bereavement. Mrs. Norman Briggs, Charles A. Briggs.

Merchants Who Advertise Are the Successful Ones

Convincing Argument That the Newspaper is the Only Direct Way to Reach Public.

In talking recently with a man who has made a success as an advertising salesman in another place this question was asked him: "When a merchant says it does not pay to advertise, what do you tell him?"

"I just ask him this," was the reply, "what proportion of the population of this town has been inside your store during the past two months?"

"Very few merchants ever claim they have had 10 per cent. of the population. Most of the non-advertisers would be glad to get one per cent. A lot of them probably get only a small fraction of one per cent. with any regularity."

"Then I say: 'How are all the rest of the people going to know about your goods? How can they tell whether it would be for their advantage to patronize you or not. If you have good values or special bargains, how many of them rarely or never pass your store? The great majority that pass give you only a glance. You are not getting their business, having done nothing to interest them."

"Then I go on," he continued, "to say there are just three ways to get some of this trade now slipping past them. They can send around solicitors from door to door, distribute circulars or handbill, or advertise in newspapers. The newspaper notice is read carefully where a solicitor is summarily turned down, and besides the advertising is ten times cheaper than the canvassing. And handbills are chucked into the wastebaskets while the newspapers are read. If you don't care to use any of these methods," I tell them, "most of the people of this town will continue to pass you by without knowing anything about your goods."

These remarks fit here as well as in the town where they were made. A merchant must tell the public about his goods in order to get trade.

WHY YOU ARE NERVOUS

The nervous system is the alarm system of the human body.

In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when health is ebbing, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreamlike sleep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

To correct nervousness, Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutrient gets into the blood at a rich blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system gets a tonic refreshment from the blood.

THE recent elections show rather conclusively that there is a growing sentiment for prohibition in Michigan. All of the voting dry counties remain dry; two of the voting wet counties went wet, and, with the exception of Delta county, the wet counties that remain wet do so by small margins. In view of the fact that the question of prohibition is to come before the people of Michigan in the fall it is not hard to read the handwriting on the wall. Michigan is GOING DRY. Perhaps not this year, but certainly soon. The doom of the liquor traffic in this state is sealed. The wet and dry issue was put before the people at the spring election not so much because either wets or dries cared to decide the issue now, but because each thought that victory in the spring would be an argument, more or less convincing, in the statewide fight. The dries are now armed with several arguments and the wets proportionately weaker. It is a far cry to the autumnal reckoning. Conditions are to be different. Many who are strongly in favor of county option do not believe in statewide prohibition (although there are more, we opine, who do believe in statewide prohibition and not county option). Wayne county must not be forgotten, etc., etc. On the whole, however, the recent election proves conclusively that the wets are losing ground. It is only a question of time, and no one—even though he be a "wet"—will be greatly surprised if that time is measured in months.

"WE ARE going to lose thousands of votes in this country on account of the attitude of the Post Office Department on rural free delivery," said a Democratic member from one of the northern states. "This curtailing the service and changing the routes in many sections of the country has had its effect all over the United States and the farmers are getting stirred up. What congress did in helping to straighten things out in the house a few days ago only further emphasizes the situation. The farmers know that rural delivery was fostered and developed under Republican administration, and I know from what I gather that they are not going to forget it when they go to the polls. The Democratic party has made a great blunder in attempting to economize in the rural delivery branch at the expense of the rural resident."

"Young Romance"

Jesse L. Lasky presents Edith Taliaferro in "Young Romance" at Majestic Theatre Friday evening, April 14. Miss Taliaferro as Nelly Nolan, a shop girl, spends her vacation at a famous resort posing as an heiress. The girl is kidnapped and held for a $10,000 ransom. Tom, a clerk in the same store, but unknown to the girl, goes to the same town and likewise poses as a rich young man. He falls in love with Nellie. How he rescues her, how they fall in love, constitute the story. They separate, both ashamed to tell of their deceits. When they return to the store to work Tom is transferred to a counter directly across from Nellie's. The course of true love runs to a happy conclusion.

"His Last Dollar"

Daniel Frohman in presenting David Higgins in his original role in the famous racing play "His Last Dollar," has scored another great success. This motion picture is produced by the Famous Players Company, which is a guarantee of its merits. This film version far surpasses the stage story and will be shown at the Majestic Theatre on Monday evening, April 17.

"The Goose Girl"

Jesse L. Lasky presents Marguerite Clark in the Famous Players film version of "The Goose Girl" at Majestic Tuesday evening, April 18. This picture depicts the life of the ancient nobility of Europe and has created great interest wherever shown. The story is by Harold McGrath, one of the most popular novelists of the day. Miss Clark appears in the stellar role and needs no introduction to lovers of film versions.

SIXTH EPISODE

The Railroad Monopoly
 By JAMES OPPENHEIM, Author of "The Beloved" and
 "Songs For the New Age"

TOM LARNIGAN'S victory over the textile trust and the tragic defeat of the plan Ayres had made for his destruction encouraged him vastly, but not more than did the discovery that he was not, after all, friendless and alone in his fight.

Ben Travers, his old friend of the Alaskan mining camps, had come back into his life, and Ben had millions and the will, as well as the power, to help Tom. Harry Stevens, too, the young newspaper man who had enlisted in Bruce's war against the gruffers, had sought Tom out and promised his aid.

Tom gripped the hands of his friends in turn after he and Ben Travers discussed the latest warning to drop investigating the railroad monopoly.

"Well, I can't make you quit," he said, "and I don't mind saying that I am mighty glad because I can't. There are no two men I would rather have with me in a fight, and it looks as though we have a real fight ahead of us now. Bruce seems to think that we ought to look into the railroad monopoly that Charles Rockford has created."

Stevens nodded. "I'll drop down to Wall street and see what I can find out on the financial end. I know that any reporter on the street would do anything I asked him. Then you and Ben can follow up Rockford personally. Have you looked into his movements at all?"

"Yes," said Tom. "He's going to Boston from New Hartford this afternoon, just his private car and an engine. If I could only get on that special!"

"Good!" echoed Ben. "I'll go with you!"

Tom scouted around now, afraid to ask questions too openly, until he found out which engineer was to be in charge of President Rockford's special that afternoon on the run to Boston. He left Ben to watch him and went to call on Rockford. As he expected, he was unable to see the head of the railroad. But he managed to drop a note addressed to Rockford and containing a warning that he had better mend his ways. He told Ben of this. "That will prepare him," he said. "He'll know who I am when he sees me."

"I've been talking a little with our man," said Ben. "I think we can land him all right. He says he'd rather work in a glue factory than here. He seems to be sore on the whole works from Rockford down."

And Tom, when he in turn talked to the engineer, found that Ben had not exaggerated. He listened to the man's complaints for a time and then decided to make a proposition to him.

"Look here," he said. "I can show you I know how to run an engine, and my friend here knows all about firing. It's worth $500 to me to be in your cab this afternoon when that special goes out. How about it?"

The engineer agreed. Somehow it did not occur to either of them to distrust the engineer or to suspect him. And yet, no sooner were they out of sight than he made his way as fast as he could to President Rockford's office, told of the bribe and of what he had done.

Stanford Stone was with Rockford when the engineer made his report.

He leaned over and spoke confidentially to Rockford, who grew a little white as he listened, but nodded finally.

"All right," he said. "I'll do it. I'll stay back here, but they'll think I'm aboard—well, it will serve them right! You can trust Dunn?"

"I think so," said Stone grimly. "He knows he must make good this time or get into trouble. He's rather down hard twice lately. Why, even yesterday he was to send two men to Lyndham, with a woman, to get something on this Tom Larnigan. His two men have disappeared, and they never took the woman at all. They didn't wait for her, but went off with some other woman—on a joy ride, I suppose!"

Neither Stone nor Rockford, of course, knew the truth as to this, which was that Dorothy Maxwell, learning of the plot, had taken the place of the woman who was to betray Tom, nor that the two thugs with whom she had gone had become suspicious and tied her, hand and foot, in the bottom of the car while they went into a roadhouse to acquire courage for the task before them. Yet, even at that moment, Dorothy was in flight from the two thugs.

They had not meant to stay long in the roadhouse, but one drink had suggested another, and their resistance hadn't been strong. As a result, Dorothy had been able to loosen her bonds and get out of the car. She rode off in the car just as the two thugs emerged, and as soon as they recovered from their astonishment they gave chase, stealing a motor-cycle that had been standing by the car.

Dorothy had a good start; but, unhappily, the gasoline tank of the car was almost empty, and she soon saw that she was sure to be overhauled and again made a prisoner. Her experience with them made her dread this and led her to be willing to take any risk to avoid the fate she felt was in store for her at their hands.

And so at a turn in the road she abandoned the car and fled down toward the water, which was near by, as the road at this point wound in and out near the sound. At a small dock a motorboat was lying. It seemed to be empty, and Dorothy sprang aboard and got the boat going just as her pursuers tore down to the water's edge. She felt that in the boat she was safe and that she would be able to explain her desperate need to its owner. But, to her consternation, she heard sounds within the tiny cabin, and the next moment the owner emerged.

"Kitty!" cried Dorothy. "Kitty Rockford!"

It was not a man, but a girl of Dorothy's own age, who owned the boat. And Kitty Rockford was her best friend. Chance had landed heavily in Dorothy's direction at last! There were exclamations of amazement from both of them, and explanations followed.

"I'd never have dared!" cried Kitty. "Dorothy, you're the bravest girl I ever knew! But you're safe now. We'll go right home, and I'll have them send you to New York in a special train."

They were delighted when they found that the engineer and his fireman were ready to let them take their places in return for the $500 Tom had offered.

The engineer led the way to an obscure spot and changed clothes with Tom, while his fireman gave up his own working togs to Ben. Just five minutes before the special was scheduled to pull out Tom and Ben took their places in the cab of the engine, waiting for the signal to pull out. And just before that signal was given Kitty Rockford and Dorothy dashed up.

"That's dad's car," she said. "Where is that special going?" who asked the nearest official, who smiled at her.

"Boston, Miss Kitty," he said. "Good!" cried Kitty. "Come on, Dorothy. It's just what we want."

There was no reason for stopping her. None of the station officials knew anything of Rockford's devilish plan. And so Kitty and Dorothy eluded aboard, and a moment later the signal to start was given. Rockford and Stone, sitting in Rockford's office, chuckled as they saw it pull out.

But five minutes later Rockford's chuckling was stopped abruptly, for a note that Kitty had hastily scribbled was brought to him. It informed him that his daughter was on the train that was doomed by his own act. As "I can help you, and I will!" said Rockford earnestly.

he read it has face turned a ghastly color, and he slumped forward in his chair for a moment. Then he turned furiously on Stone.

"This is your doing, you murderer!" he cried.

He flung the note at Stone. "I'll try to save them!" he cried. "But whatever happens I'm done with you. I'll have no more dealings with you or any of the gruffers who are in with you! I'll be an honest man again!"

He flew to send orders stopping the special and ordered out another special to follow. But he had no hope. There was no way, he was sure, of stopping the doomed train. The only chance was for Dunn to fall, and that chance, as Rockford knew only too well, was of the slightest. Dunn was out of the sort to fall when success depended upon his own efforts and when he knew, as he did now, the price of failure.

What Rockford, however, had not allowed for was that Tom Larnigan had a plan of his own. And very soon after the special had pulled out and while it was still a mile from the bridge where Dunn waited Tom atop ped the train.

"Come on," he said to Ben. "This is as good a time as any for our little talk with President Rockford."

But in the private car when they went back they found not Rockford, but the two girls—two astonished girls, moreover.

"Are we all alone on this train? I've been rugged and rugged, and there seems to be no porter," said Kitty indignantly.

But Dorothy at that moment recognized Tom Larnigan.

"So you're safe!" she cried. "I was so afraid they had hurt you, as they did Bruce."

And then there were explanations. Tom seized upon the main fact.

"I believe this was a trap!" he cried. "Get off the train while Travers and I look to see if anything is wrong."

Kitty resented what seemed to be a reflection on her father, but there was something compelling about Tom, and she obeyed. And then while Tom and Ben looked for evidences of a plot Dorothy explained many things to Kitty until she was interrupted by a hoarse cry of triumph.

"Got you this time, missy!" cried one of the thugs from whom her timely meeting with Kitty had enabled her to escape.

The two thugs had been obliged to walk the ties and had come just at this moment. But they reckoned without Tom and Ben. They heard Dorothy's scream, and the next instant they appeared and attacked the two girls.

The surprise helped Dorothy's rescuers, and the fight that followed was brief. Soon all the thugs wanted was to escape, and one of them wriggled free and sprang to the engine. He called to the other and they went off in the engine. But they did not go far, for Dunn was waiting. He did his work well. The special crashed through the open draw, and the thugs met the fate they deserved.

Even as the crash of the wreck sounded in their ears another engine appeared. From it sprang Rockford, whose relief when he saw Kitty knew no bounds. He threw her a moment to Tom Larnigan.

"I can help you, and I will!" he said earnestly. "I have sworn to reform myself, and I will work with you to compel others to do so."

Little Willie sat on his grandfather's lap. "Won't you please croak like a frog?" he asked. "Croak like a frog?" asked the bewildered grandfather, "why, little man?" "Because I heard daddy say that when you croaked we would get five thousand dollars."

The other day on the train two young men—one a farmer and the other a city chap—were having an argument as to their relative strength. "Why," said the farmer, "every morning before breakfast I pull up ninety gallons of water from the well for the stock." "That's nothing," said his companion; "I go down to the boat club and take a boat every morning and pull up the river."

Two correspondents wrote to a busy editor of a country newspaper, desiring to know respectively "the best way of assisting twins through their teething" and "how to rid an orchard of grasshoppers." The editor answered both questions faithfully, but unfortunately got the initials of his correspondents mixed, so that the fond father of the teething twins was thunderstruck by the following advice: "If you are unfortunate enough to be plagued by these unwelcome little pests, the quickest way of settling them is to cover them with straw and set the bunch on fire." The other man, who was bothered with the grasshoppers, was equally amazed to read: "The best method of treatment is to give each a warm bath twice a day and rub their gums with India rubber."

A man in Westfield, Massachusetts, who had been married four times was as unfortunate as to lose all his wives. Such a matter of course had his weddings come to be in Westfield that—when after a year of unwedded life he announced his fifth engagement—one of the neighbors said: "Richard, I suppose getting married comes pretty natural to you by this time, doesn't it?" "Well," said Richard after due reflection, "this fifth marriage ain't going to seem so natural. Old Parson Begg's off on a trip to Europe and he's never failed to tie the knot for me. I said to Mary that I didn't think it would feel like a wedding without Parson Begg, but she said it was her turn to choose and that she meant to start off with that young minister that had just come to town and that if he did well she guessed she'd stick to him. She didn't explain what she meant, but it sounded kinder ominous to me."

Economy Hints

A penny saved is a penny earned.—Benjamin Franklin.

CANDLELIGHT is perhaps the softest and prettiest light in the world, and now that we have every sort of electric contrivance to make our houses lighter we are turning our attention more and more to candles.

Unshaded candles are still used on the dinner table, although shades are used too. So individual taste may be depended on to decide the matter. If you desire to carry out a color scheme have shades of silk or paper for your candles. If you want as much light as possible have the nubbled candles.

There are even new candles in various designs in black and white, and these are in keeping with the many other things that result from the fad for black and white interiors. Sometimes they are set in black and white candlesticks.

Fringe of little glass beads gives a sparkle to candlelight. It can be bought by the yard and fastened on any candle shades you may have. So if you have silver shades colored fringe that may be easily changed with a little sewing and ripping for some other color can be used.

Colored candles, too, can be bought, and with these the table color scheme can be emphasized.

Before using candles make them as cold as possible in the refrigerator. In fact, it would be a very good plan to keep candles in a tin box in the refrigerator. "This chilling process hardens the candle so that it burns much more slowly and therefore lasts much longer than an unchilled candle does."

Ten samples of milk were tested, the highest test being 7 per cent, and the lowest 3 1/2 per cent. Lunch was served and those who attended report a pleasant time.

For some time past Cupid has been quietly aiming a shaft at the heart of a young man in this neighborhood and on Tuesday evening, April 4, he succeeded in bringing down his quarry, when Melvin Donaldson and Miss Alice Grosssett were quietly united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents in East Jordan, the ceremony being performed by their pastor, Rev. Mr. Winters. The young couple are well known and have the best wishes of their many friends for their future happiness. They are at home to their friends at Mr. Donaldson's farm.

The members of the young ladies Bible class met at the home of their teacher, Mrs. Grace Stephenson, April 8th, the occasion being the birthday of Miss Agnes LaCroix. The young ladies first enjoyed a wild turkey chase, Miss Amanda Duffy winning first prize and Geneva VanTevan taking the second prize. Miss Geneva also won the prize for the play of "Simple Simon." This play was followed by the game of "Recognition." The class was then called to order for business and it was moved and carried to obtain link rings for the class. The prize for the most faithful attendance during the first quarter was awarded to Miss Amanda Duffy. Supper was then served. The table was beautifully decorated with pink crepe paper. The supper was followed by story telling, which was very interesting, after which Agnes LaCroix, as the guest of honor, lighted the candles and cut the birthday cake. The class then adjourned, wishing Miss Agnes many happy returns of the day. All the members of the class were present but one.

MOSES AND SANITATION.

Antient Laws as Effective as Modern Rules of Hygiene.

There has been gathered a collection of facts to prove that the sanitary laws of Moses were not only on a line with the modern rules of hygiene, but in some cases in advance of them.

The Jew, thousands of years before Christ, settling in a semitropical country, was forbidden to eat pork or shellfish, and milk was designated as a source of contagion. In the Talmud a method of slaughtering animals was prescribed which is acknowledged today in our markets as the most sanitary.

Five thousand years before Koch gave to the world the results of his researches in bacteriology the Mosaic law pointed out the danger to man from tuberculosis in cattle, but did not forbid infected poultry as food. It was only a few years ago that German specialists discovered that fowl tuberculosis was harmless to man.

The Mosaic law also enforced the isolation of patients with contagious diseases and the burial of the dead outside all cities. These hints the Gentile world did not fully accept until a century or two ago.

The wise lawgiver prescribed not only fasting at certain periods of the year, but the removal of all faunals in summer out to camps, where for a time they could live close to nature. Many of the laws of Moses were prescriptions intended for the health of both mind and body.—Boston Transcript.

NO EXCUSE FOR "AIN'T."

It is About the Worst Contraction in the English Language.

"Ain't" is an improper abbreviation of "are not." British writers spell it "a'n't," which properly indicates its derivation. Americans make it an inclusive offense, using it for "am not" and "is not," as well as for "are not." It is unquestionably the worst instance of slovenliness in the common speech of today.

Yet it is by no means universal or even common use. It will slip occasionally from refined lips, always with a jar to the enunciator, as well as to the hearer. But the habitual user of "ain'ts" is careless of refinement. He may be an excellent citizen who never beats his wife nor kicks the cat. But there is likely to be something slipshod about him somewhere. For "ain't" is needless, as well as cacophonous. It fills no void and supplies no need.

English observers complain superciliously of the laxness of American speech. American observers who have listened to the marvels of Lancashire, Yorkshire, Devonshire and other shire dialects are inclined to resent any assumption of British superiority. But it is none the less desirable to eliminate our own linguistic slurs, and of these "ain't" is the most deplorable.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Awkward.

A visitor to a hospital for soldiers was surprised to hear one of the patients being addressed by the nurses by his Christian name. It being customary to address patients by their surnames only. Upon inquiry as to why this distinction was accorded to the particular soldier referred to the reply received was:

"Well, we can't very well call him by his surname."

"But why not?" queried the somewhat astonished visitor.

"You see," was the overwhelming answer, "his surname is Love, and it's rather awkward."—London Tit-Bits.

Why Mosquitoes Like Blood.

The fact that mosquitoes so continually harass rich blooded creatures is due to the fact that they cannot lay eggs without the albuminous food which is thus obtained. In tropical countries the greatest enemy of the malarial bearing mosquito is a species of bat which is protected from the insect's bite by its strangely shaped hairs.

The bat is very swift of flight, and the mosquitoes, especially those which have already made a supper of blood, are their ideal food.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

CO. CONVENTION HELD TUESDAY

Delegates to State and District Conventions Are Chosen.

Resolution Passed Endorsing Candidacy of Judge F. W. Mayne for Supreme Justice.

The Republican County Convention was held in Boyne City Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of electing delegates to the state and district Republican conventions.

Delegates representing the three wards in Charlevoix were as follows:

First ward—Charles Novak, Lisle Shanahan.

Second ward—R. A. Emrey, O. D. Hammond, R. L. Lewis, Charles H. Emrey and William Cowan.

Third ward—George Weaver, Henry Wood, Lyman E. Benton and David Eckinger.

Other townships and precincts in the county were represented and the meeting was an enthusiastic one. The meeting was called to order by County Chairman W. J. Pearson of Boyne Falls, and Chas. H. Emrey of Charlevoix was elected secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of W. H. Griffin.

The following were elected delegates to the district convention to be held at St. Ignace, Tuesday, April 25th: J. M. Harris (chairman), R. A. Emrey, H. B. Wood, Lisle Shanahan, Jacob Graff, A. E. Cross, F. D. Thompson, Ned Fox, M. E. Silverstein and W. J. Pearson.

To the state convention, Wednesday, May 3, in Lansing, the following were elected: Wm. J. Pearson (chairman), E. W. Abbott, J. M. Harris, A. G. Urquhart, H. I. McMillan, D. H. Fitch, R. W. Paddock, P. D. Campbell, Jr., L. E. Benton and W. J. Eckstrom.

The following resolution, presented by the committee, was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That this Republican convention, being the neighbors of Judge F. W. Mayne, know him best, and, so knowing him, know that he is a man of sterling integrity, learned in the law, a jurist of recognized ability in all the courts over which he presides. We therefore unanimously recommend him to the people of the state as eminently qualified for a justice of the supreme court, and pledge ourselves to use all honorable means to secure him the Republican nomination and election."

State Forester Here

F. H. Sanford, professor of the state forestry department of the M. A. C., was in Charlevoix for a short time last week. Prof. Sanford is making a survey of the shore line and urging residents to plant hardy grasses and quick growing trees to aid in stopping the forming of sand dunes and hinder the high winds from striking the sand on the lake shores, which has in the past been the cause of a great deal of valuable land going to waste. The state is aiding in a movement to help lake shore and other land owners in reforestation.

New State Law is Quite Severe on Dogs

Enforcement of New Tax Collecting Law is Not Optional, but Obligatory on Officers.

A law passed by the last legislature, and designed to prevent so many owners of dogs from escaping the payment of dog tax, provides that the supervisors shall collect all dog taxes at the time the dogs are assessed. At the close of the supervisor's period he certifies to the sheriff of his county a list of all dogs for which the taxes have been paid, and it then becomes the duty of the sheriff to kill and bury the dog, for which public service he shall receive one dollar, payable by the township in which the dog is located.

In order that the supervisors and the sheriff's force may not be too severely condemned when the family pets are murdered, the following sections of the law are published:

Section 2. The assessor of every township or ward, at the time of making his annual assessment, shall inquire and ascertain the number of dogs liable to be taxed, and shall enter in lists to be made by him the name of every person in his respective township or ward

AFTERNOON TRAIN DELAYED

Broken Driving Rod on Freight Train Holds Up Traffic Friday Afternoon.

A broken rod, which connects the two big driving wheels, on a southbound freight train last Friday evening delayed the northbound passenger train some two hours.

The accident happened just opposite the Stover farm south of the city. The freight was southbound and had just about made the steep grade when the breakdown occurred. They had been at work some time before the northbound passenger reached there and with the combined efforts of the two crews the broken parts were taken off and the passenger train engine backed the freight onto the Rock Product Co.'s siding and proceeded on her way.

WHAT DRY AND WET VOTES SHOW

State Dry Leader Say Wet Vote Can be Easily Overcome.

Dry Jubilant Over Showing Made at April Election and are Working Hard

Based on the presidential vote of 1912 there will be just 45,923 more voters in the wet counties of this state next November than in the counties under local option rule. Because of this state prohibition campaign in Michigan this year these figures are deemed worthy of analysis.

The total vote for president in Michigan four years ago was 547,971, and while it will be natural to assume that there will be a material increase in this vote this year, because of the growth in population, it is generally believed that the dries will gain as much as the wets by this increase.

Superintendent Grant Hudson of the Michigan anti-saloon league says with no increase in the total vote the prohibitionists would only have to gain 22,991 votes to overcome this majority, and he thinks they will do it.

The wet counties cast 296,952 votes in 1912 and the dry counties 251,024.

BETWEEN LOVE AND DUTY

MUCH-WANTED CRIMINALS ELUDE SHERIFF NOVAK AND HIS DEPUTY

Harry Powers and Morris LaValley, Wanted for Jail Breaking, Apply to Charlevoix Home Early Tuesday Morning for Food—Blunder Allows Their Escape.

The city was thrown into a furor of excitement Tuesday morning when it became known that Harry Powers and Morris LaValley, two of the five prisoners who broke out of the jail at Traverse City on the evening of April 13, had been seen in the city.

After the wild rumors had been traced out and the truth ascertained, it was learned that Powers and LaValley had arrived in the city Monday evening, and at a later hour had applied at the home of a Mrs. Morford, living on the hill west of State street, for something to eat. Regardless of the fact that Powers was well known at the home, he was refused, and after leaving, Mrs. Morford immediately got into communication with the local police, informing them that the escaping prisoners were in the city.

Sheriff Charles Novak, who at the time was in Boyne City, was notified, and started for Charlevoix at once by automobile. After his arrival several houses were investigated, but no trace of the prisoners could be found. About 12:45, Novak in company with P. L. A. in Clothes Man Charles Howard, turned at the jail, drove to the home of R. C. Korth. Leaving the driver in the car, Novak and Howard approached the house, in which a light was seen. Novak told Howard to guard the front door, while he proceeded to the back and knocked. Karl Korth, a brother of R. C. Korth, answered the call and, on being informed that it was Novak, asked his brother Rudy to open the door. Rudy, complying with the request, opened the door and allowed Novak to enter the house.

During the confusion, Powers and LaValley, who were in the kitchen, hid in the pantry. Novak asked if the men were there and both the Korth boys replied that they were. He asked where they were and was told they were in the pantry. Upon being asked where the pantry was located, Karl Korth led Novak to the door, signifying it was the place where the men were concealed. However, instead of it being the door of the pantry, it led into the cellar. Karl went into the cellar ahead of Novak, before the lights were turned on.

During this time, Howard, who was supposed to be guarding the front door, rejoined Novak and also started down cellar at his heels. As soon as Novak and Howard entered the cellar, Powers and LaValley slipped out of the pantry and left the house by the front door, supposed to be safely guarded by Howard, and ran across the street, soon disappearing.

Karl Korth had been away from Charlevoix for some time and had returned that afternoon. During his absence his brother, Rudy, had made extensive changes in the interior of the house, one of which was to change what was formerly the pantry door to the door leading to the cellar. Not knowing of the changes his brother had made during his absence, when asked to lead the sheriff to the pantry, led him to the door that was formerly that of the pantry, and before Novak and Howard regained the upper room, the prisoners had made their escape, and since no trace of them has been found. Mr. Korth explains that the men had asked him for something to eat, and having known Powers for some time, allowed them to come into the house, where he prepared them a meal. They had hardly finished eating when Novak appeared upon the scene, making the time the men were in the home less than thirty minutes.

In their haste to make their get-away, Powers left his hat and rain coat in the house. Early Tuesday the sheriff at Petoskey was notified and asked to come to Charlevoix with his man trailing blood hound. A deputy arrived on the morning train with the dog and proceeded to the home of Korth. He was allowed to get the scent from the rain coat and shoes, but failed to pick up the trail.

Posses were formed and the neighboring country scoured but to the time of going to press, no trace of the men has been found. Farmers on rural telephone lines have been informed to keep on the watch for the fugitives, and police in neighboring towns are guarding the approaches and roads leading into them to and out points.

Many people in Charlevoix and Petoskey know Powers, as he was here last summer for some time. A reward of $500 has been offered by the board of supervisors of Grand Traverse for his arrest and he has the reputation of being a notorious criminal, wanted in several cities for crimes committed. He was also one of the main witnesses in the Germaine case at Traverse City.

BABY DAY AT HIGH SCHOOL

Young Ladies Appropriately Celebrated Day Last Friday.

White Costumes, Bobbing Curls and Pigtailed Almost Cause Stampede in High School.

The faculty was much disturbed by the absence of the young ladies Friday morning, but at the last tap of the bell all fears were dispelled by the noisy approach of the entire number. Dignity had been cast off, and their entrance revealed many peculiarities in dress as well as in actions. White costumes, bobbing curls and pigtailed topped with brilliantly-hued hair ribbons suggested a complete rejuvenation of even the frosty seniors. At first the non participants were stricken dumb by so unexpected an exhibition, but they soon recovered their voices and gave vent to hissing comment. The faculty proved equal to the occasion and permitted the general routine to be somewhat broken by the merry "youngsters."

The high school girls have decreed that hereafter the fourteenth of April will be sacred to Babies' Day.

Boys! Here is a New Money Making Scheme

Just Go Around Neighborhood and Collect Old Papers and Sell to Junk Dealer.

Boys, make money!

Here is the opportunity of your young lives, and the work connected with it is so trivial that it will be just like picking up the money back in the alley.

Yes sir e-e. Just think of it, boys. A chance to earn your own spending money.

Now here it is: Go around to the neighbors and relieve them of the old newspapers which accumulate so quickly and so much to the disgust of the housewife. Then call up the junk dealer and have him call for your stock. He will pay you from 35 to 40 cents a hundred pounds.

Isn't that easy? The shortage of paper in the United States has reached a serious point and smaller newspapers actually face failure through their inability to get paper. Prices have soared to the sky limit and indications are that they will not come down until long after the war ends.

Just how the war has sent the price of paper to the top level is not known. But it has, says the paper men, and since they are in the business, they ought to know. Anyway, the old war gets blamed for everything that happens, so why complain?

Beaver Island will from now on be in touch with the outside world and the newspapers and letters of personal nature will be greatly welcomed.

BACKACHE IS A WARNING

Charlevoix People Should Not Neglect Their Kidneys.

Backache is often nature's most frequent signal of weakened kidneys. To cure the pains and aches, to remove the lameness when it arises from weakened kidneys, you must reach the cause—the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills have been proved good and are especially for weak kidneys. Doan's have been used in kidney trouble for over 50 years. Read Charlevoix testimony.

Mrs. W. L. Cowan, 210 Antrim street, Charlevoix, says: "I don't hesitate to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, for I have had good results from them. I had a severe backache and pains in my kidneys and was also annoyed by the kidney secretions. I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at the Ivy Drug Store, and they brought me great relief."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Lettuce for use in hotbeds should have sown now.

The Progressive is one of the best, if not the very best, of the autumn bearing strawberries.

Many varieties of seeds are going to be sown this year. It will be well to have the seed order in early.

For the home garden choose vegetables of best quality. Quantity is not the important thing.

Most vegetables need rich, well worked soil. Having this and adding thorough cultivation and care any one can have a No. 1 garden.

Trump the nature to the hotbed until it is solid, then put the glass on and leave it a few hours before putting the soil in. This will make heating sure.

Swiss chard should be included in the seed order. It makes good "greens" and is a rapid grower. It may be sown at the same time as early cabbage and transplanted to frames or field.

The Important Thing.

They were speaking about looking on the practical side of things, and this incident was recalled:

One afternoon late in the fall Uncle Josh was driving slowly toward the town when an acquaintance excitedly rushed out to the road and hailed him.

"Say, Josh," he exclaimed in a palpitating voice, "have ye heard the news?"

"No; don't kalkerlate I have," responded Uncle Josh, sociably stopping his team. "What kind of news is it?"

"Jim Smith committed suicide," answered the other. "Hanging himself from a beam in the barn."

"Is that so?" thoughtfully rejoined Uncle Josh. "Wonder if he got all of his corn husked?"—Exchange.

Farmers--Read what Fresno County, California, Offers!

This rich productive California county is sparsely settled compared to the East. There are thousands of acres ready for industrious farmers—land that will yield far more than the average farm land throughout the United States. Here forty acres will bring greater revenue than a quarter section in some parts of the country. The land is suitable for general farming. Alfalfa is cut six times each year and yields from 1 1/2 to 2 tons per acre. Big opportunities for practical dairymen, stockmen and poultrymen. Splendid climate. No severe winter.

TEXTBOOK FOR GOOD ROADS

Experiments in Highway Construction at Washington.

CONCRETE, BRICK AND STONE

The Road Leading Out of Washington to Chevy Chase, in Suburbs, Built in Many Sections of Different Types Under Direction of Government Experts.

There is at Washington a textbook in concrete, brick and stone—the road to Chevy Chase, built by the plans and under the direction of the office of public roads of the United States and for the sole purpose of informing the public and the members of congress interested in the improvement of the public highways upon the methods and cost of construction, types of roads, adaptability of material and economy of maintenance.

Thousands of people travel over this road, which is built in many sections of different types, every day, and hundreds of practical road builders from all parts of the country have inspected it from time to time and have marveled at the excellence of the work.

Manufacturers who have supplied bituminous materials for the treatment of the road have detached their special experts for this service, and the traffic over the road has demonstrated under carefully observed conditions the relative value of the several types of road making up this great highway.

The Chevy Chase road is experimental. It consists of different types of pavement—bituminous macadam laid by the penetration method, surface treatments of waterbound macadam, asphaltic surfaces on concrete foundations, bituminous surfaced concrete, plain and oil cement concrete and vitrified brick, all of which are under daily observation by expert road builders to ascertain which of the types is best suited to the traffic and which is condemned by practical test under the same conditions of climate, soil, rainfall, heat and cold and like traffic requirements. It would be just the same to the office of public roads which has written this open book in concrete, brick and stone whether any part of it or all parts of it should fall, fall in materials used, in construction, in durability, in cost, in maintenance.

Road building is a science now, and efficiency is the only test of quality. In the stones used in the construction of the Chevy Chase road, their specific gravity, their weight per cubic foot, their water absorption, their percent age of wear, their hardness and toughness are all determined by the most careful scientific tests. Patrolmen are constantly employed on this road to keep account of whatever defects in materials and construction may develop and exact data as to the cost of maintenance.

In one of the experiments covering 1,581 square yards the cost per square yard for two and one-half inch bituminous wearing surface was 40.18 cents. This experiment was made in 1911. For the maintenance of surface there was no expense in the following two years, but in 1914 this expense was $79.70.

On another section of the road the cost per square yard for two and one-half inch bituminous wearing surface was 64.42 cents and for supplementary construction 13.20 cents. This experiment covered an area of 705 square yards, and in the three years from 1912 to 1914 inclusive there was no expense for maintenance.

All surfaces on this road were built of a uniform thickness of eight inches and of a total width of nineteen feet. The base course was of stone ranging in size from one to three inches, spread to a depth of five inches, the voids being filled with screenings. The wearing course consisted of stone ranging from one to two inches generally, and upon this course the bitumen was applied in two applications of approximately one and one-half to one-half gallon respectively. The cost of the stone used in the foundation and wearing courses varied according to the expense of quarrying and delivery, as it would vary at all other points, and of all the materials of construction and charges for maintenance exact account has been kept.

Suffrage Notes

Corrupt politicians, who do not want to be disturbed in their stealings, always express tender solicitude for fear women should be corrupted by politics. They dread women's ballots as spiders dread a broom. When the women of Manitoba took a suffrage petition to the parliament, the premier, Sir Rodmond Roblin, told the dear gentlemen, in most emphatic language, to fly to their homes and not to pollute their lives with dirty politics. A few months later the conservative party, then in power, got its death blow from the unearthing of a most disgraceful political steal which involved the premier, Sir Rodmond. The liberal party soon after came into power and gave the women full franchise.—Woman's Journal.

Mrs. Catt, president of the National Equal Suffrage association, says: "That there are respectable men and women who oppose the suffrage is natural. Their prototypes opposed in turn education, professions, public office, public speech, and organization for women. They accepted each advance when won, and then set themselves against the next proposal. But the real enemy of our cause is the so-called vice trust, now thoroughly aroused and alarmed."

The bills in the New York assembly, known as the "Underworld Bills," and according to Police Commissioner Arthur Woods, introduced "in the interest of no part of the public except the vice trust" are being backed by avowed anti-suffrage men. The "vice trust" and the "liquor interests" are opposed to suffrage because if women had the ballot the homes would be neglected, men would take to drink, only had women would vote, and such conditions the aforesaid noble defenders of the home could not endure.

A suffrage map of North America shows a rapidly increasing white area indicating full suffrage, a large shaded portion meaning partial suffrage and only three black spots: Mexico, the northwest territory in Canada—where even men do not vote, and about fifteen of the southern states including Indiana, where democracy, the rule of the people, prevails. Are women people? Evidently not, according to views of southern gentlemen.

One Way Out.

Despite his literary Mose Belt has gathered quite a competency from his whitewashing and katemonging trade. Recently during the course of some business with a notary the latter produced a document, saying:

"Sign your name here, Mose."

"Look heah," said Mose, with offended dignity, "I doesn't sign mah name, sub. I's a business man, sub. an' has no time for dem trifling details. I always dictates mah name, sub."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"If a certain man gets into the race, I shall run; but if that man does not run, I think I am ready to quit."—From interview given by Governor Ferris in Washington this week.

In other words, Governor Ferris is pursuing a course of "watchful waiting," says the Grand Rapids Herald. This is his second mysterious reference to some "bad man from Egypt." We are entirely willing to confess that we are consumed with curiosity. And we also confess that we are nervous—for fear that whatever is necessary to get Governor Ferris into the race again won't happen.

Governor Ferris ought to be his party's candidate this fall.

In the first place, if he cannot be elected, no Democrat can be elected—and it is always best that parties should nominate their strongest candidates.

In the second place his nomination will help to clearly define campaign issues—both state and national—and it is worth while to have campaign issues clearly defined. He stands squarely for free trade. He is as near to an ultra-pacifist as almost any man who is not heartily in favor of real national preparedness. He believes that state taxes cannot be reduced—he has said so in so many words—and this will be the big state issue.

Despite his party's strength, he would be weak—very weak. Despite the fact that if he cannot be elected, no Democrat can be elected, he would probably finish about as he did in 1904 when he was defeated by 60,000 votes, though polling more votes than upon the occasion of his subsequent victories. Yet there are no reasons why he should not run.

Governor Ferris has recently displayed great interest in what candidates Republicans should nominate for various offices. He will therefore pardon the Republican suggestion that he himself ought to stay in the game and take another Democratic nomination for governor.

The mail order houses have begun their usual spring advertising campaign. The local merchant will do well to look to his. Timely advertising will do much to arrest the flow of money to the outside. You have the goods; advertise them.

The shrill blast you hear about now is not the blast of some distant steam whistle, but merely the soprano soloist trying for the flat in the Easter anthem.

LOVE our neighbor? Of course we do. We even hope the merchant who never advertises succeeds in squeezing through a crack into heaven.

If Henry Ford ever lands in the president's chair we can imagine the type of political machine he would build.

OPPORTUNITIES? Plenty of them, brother. But it takes eyes and brains to grasp. Seake yourself.

School Commissioner's Notes

Fifteen schools visited last week.

The Heart Lake schoolhouse in Hudson is being reshingled.

The Harmon school plans new shades to prevent cross lights. They will reset their seats with only one size in a row and the correct number of inches apart.

Forty-one boys and girls in the new corn clubs organized in Afton, Miles and Rock Elm last week. Prizes to be given by the East Jordan Board of Trade.

The Hoffman school of Hudson township has two new chemical toilets ready to install.

The Woodward school has a very active mothers' club. This week they discuss sanitary conditions in school buildings.

Star school has a "Standard Plate" day April 21st.

Twelve schools to-day wishing the state standard school inspector to study with them their schoolroom conditions.

The Rock Elm school gets black walnut trees from the Mount Pleasant agricultural department for 24c. They put in windows for the unilateral lighting plan before school closes.

See "Winding the May Pole" in the back of the Course of Study. It's a splendid game for the spring days. Supervised play will prove an effective step toward providing a correct moral tone among the boys and girls of our schools.

The little men and women of Boyne Falls tip their caps and shake hands easily without embarrassment. In the primary room they are performing these little courtesies in the daily curriculum.

The Wildwood school is driving a new well.

A canning demonstration for the county June 21st. Remember the date and find out details later.

The boys and girls are bringing flowers to school these days. What is the message of the flowers to them? To you?

All-Aboard Chestnut Specials

As the postman came down the steps of a private residence he said half aloud: "Well, if that ain't the limit." "What is the trouble?" queried a citizen who overheard the postman's noisy thought. "Why," explained the man in gray, "the woman in that house says if I do not come earlier she will get her letters from some other carrier!"

A farmer in a small way walked into the office of a fire insurance company and intimated that he wished to insure his barn and a couple of stacks. "What facilities have you for extinguishing a fire in your village?" inquired the superintendent of the office. The farmer scratched his head and pondered over the matter for a little while. Eventually he answered: "Well, it sometimes rains."

In a recent conversation the subject of the force of habit came up for discussion and the following story was told: Miss Marie was a pretty little telephone girl. One night she went to church and, being somewhat tired, she fell asleep during the rather protracted sermon. Finally the sermon was concluded and after the usual prayer the minister picked up the hymnal. "Brethren and sisters," he announced, glancing first at the choir and then at the congregation, "we shall sing hymn 343. Hymn 343." "The line is busy," cried Miss Marie, suddenly waking and hearing the preacher's last words, "I'll call you."

Mr. Barnes, an exceedingly conscientious man, was obliged to dismiss a gardener whom he had employed for years but whom he had found to be dishonest. "You know, sir," said the man, "that I have a wife and family, and I wish you could see your way clear to give me a 'character,' sir." Mr. Barnes felt sorry for the man and finally, after considerable deliberation, gave him the following "character": "I hereby certify that Thomas Williamson has been in my employ as a gardener for twelve years and during that time he has got more out of my garden than any other man I ever employed."

THE LACK OF PAINT.

Cause Greater Annual Loss to Farmers in Kansas Than Fire.

"Lack of paint causes a greater annual loss through deterioration than the aggregate Kansas fire loss for twelve months," asserts H. H. King, associate professor of chemistry in the Kansas State Agricultural college. "People generally paint because of the ornamental effect, little realizing that they are preventing a heavy loss through deterioration by so doing."

An experiment is being carried on by Professor King with a view to finding a paint that is best suited to the Kansas climatic conditions and to the average pocketbook. It is one of the most comprehensive experiments of the kind carried on west of the big eastern paint factories. Formulas for 102 different kinds of paint were made—a different combination of pigments and oil in each one.

The oils used in the mixing of the paints were: Linseed, which is the old standby, but more expensive than some others; sunflower, which should appeal to Kansas farmers at least; menhaden fish oil, soy bean oil, corn oil and cottonseed oil. If the experiment points favorably toward the use of either sunflower or cottonseed oil it will mean an added "made in America" product.

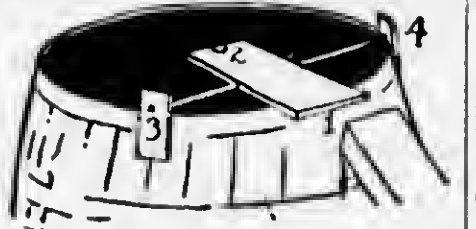

The thinners employed were pure spirits of turpentine. Others of different kinds were also used to hasten the drying of the paint.

The paint was applied on panels made of specially seasoned hand-picked white pine drop siding. Care was taken to get the panels as near the same grain as possible, so that all would have the same absorbing power.

A Rat and Mouse Trap.

Fill a barrel one-third full of water. Take a thin piece of board six or seven inches broad and long enough to reach halfway across the top of a barrel (1). A small wooden cleat is nailed upright on each side of the barrel (4). A spindle of metal is driven through the plank (3), and the ends or axes of this spindle turn in journals at the top of the cleats.

Fasten a bit of cheese securely on the end of the plank that reaches out to the center of the barrel (2). The end of the plank which rests upon the rim of the barrel must be just a little heavier than the baited end. This can be regulated easily by driving a nail or two in the end of the plank if it is not heavy enough to settle back in position after being tipped up.

Now lean a plank against the barrel, the top end resting even with or just under the end of board (1). This will enable the rodents to get up to the trap easily. They start out on the plank after the cheese. It tips down, and in a twinkling of an eye the animal plunges head first into the water and is drowned.

There is no escape; they go to their doom. The plank swings back and is ready for another victim. It is always set, always baited.—Successful Farmer.

Witch Hazel Plant.

The plant which hazel acquired its name in time when magic, black art, sorcery, necromancy and witchcraft were popular. A forked branch of witch hazel carried horizontally in the hands was believed to turn devils as it passed over a hidden vein of water, thereby saving time and labor necessary in prospecting.

SON'S LIFE SAVED

Remarkable letter concerning Foley's Honey and Tar Compound as a quick relief for coughs and colds.

"It saved our son's life," says Mrs. Edna Cromer, in speaking of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. "Of this I am sure. Of all cough remedies we ever used, Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is far ahead of them all. It has been our faithful friend for several years and we rely upon it for the quick relief of all our coughs and colds. It never fails and we recommended it to all our friends. We thought he would surely die from strangulation. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound completely and absolutely cured him. We know it and will prove it to anyone interested."

Do you know the soothing, relieving benefits of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound? You ought to. There is healing in every drop. It spreads a cool coating over the rough inflamed throat—stops the racking cough—does all this in a natural way, containing no opiates and nothing harmful.

Good druggists are glad to sell Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and successful. Refuse substitutes.

SCIENTIFIC INSTRUCTION.

In 1897 two leading professors of Germany sent to the men of that country a pronouncement favoring total abstinence. It contained this declaration:

"Science has shown that alcohol, even in moderate quantities, causes disturbance in brain action, paralyzes the critical capacity, power of will, the ethical and esthetic sense, and lowers self-control. For this reason we should realize that it is a poison and no longer to be classed with foods."

The document received nine signatures. Ten years later it was sent out again and received 800 signatures of German medical men, 116 of whom were professors.

In 1913 a great antialcoholic meeting was held in the Prussian house of deputies, Berlin. The honorary president was the German chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, and on the committee of honor all the Prussian ministers were represented and hundreds of eminent men of the empire. Doctor Jensen, inspector general of the Berlin schools, called forth much applause when he said that "the education of youth is absolutely impossible without an antialcoholic element in it." Since then such instruction has been made a part of the regular course in the public schools of Germany, and entire courses in that subject are offered by the great universities.

FOE OF THE COLLEGES.

Of all the foes of young manhood on the American college campus, alcohol is the most subtle and destructive. It is peculiarly fitting that the American college student of today, wiser and better informed than his predecessors, should give battle to his ancient and merciless adversary. If graveyards were placed on our college grounds to show the fate of the young manhood by intoxicating drink, the acres of verdant lawn around even our best institutions would become vast cemeteries ghastly with thick strewn headstones. With a devilish instinct for maximum destructiveness, this demon of the campus seems to pick out for degradation the gayest, the loveliest, the most talented, and to re-enforce his assault by outlasting the social and generous instincts which constitute the very charm of youth. Opening always the gate to passion and appetite, he is the aggressive ally of everything which degrades college life, the promoter of tragedies innumerable on every campus, the tireless enemy of virtue, purity, diligence and intellectual development.—Henry Louis Smith, President Washington and Lee University.

GOOD LINE OF BUSINESS.

It was at a campaign meeting in Ohio. The speaker said that West Virginia had profited financially by voting dry. A man in the audience disputed this statement. He said that he was a salesman, that he visited every county seat in West Virginia, and that his business had fallen off considerably since the state went dry. Another man spoke up and said that he was a salesman and "made" West Virginia regularly and that his business had increased since the state became dry. He asked the fellow who reported a falling off what his line was and the latter reluctantly admitted that he sold undertakers' supplies, at which the crowd yelled. The man who declared that prohibition had helped his business explained he sold furniture.

SURELY A MISTAKE!

"Smoky" Hobbs of Columbus was fined $400 and given six months for illegal selling of liquor. What? Columbus? Surely must be a mistake. Bootleggers only ply their trade in dry towns. That's why the benevolent wet run saloons, to keep bad men from bootlegging in dry towns. Tut, tut! Yea, it must be a mistake.—Caldwell Press.

PROHIBITION AND BUSINESS.

Endorsement of the value of a prohibition law as an aid to general business prosperity was recently signed by men representing the leading industries of Steubenville, O., among others, two paper companies, a glass company, two foundries, two clay companies, a tin plate company and a pottery concern.

HARD TO UNDERSTAND.

Just why anyone should ever suppose that because the people of any city stop buying booze they will perforce stop buying land, or paying rent or patronizing the meat market, hake shop, grocery or clothing store is hard to understand.

PROHIBITION PROHIBITS.

"When the number of streets are slashed in two in one year it is pretty conclusive evidence that prohibition prohibits not only liquor selling but crime as well," is the comment of the Youngstown (O.) Telegram on the remarkable decrease in arrests in the state of West Virginia since prohibition became the law of the state.

FACTORY REPLACES BREWERY. Tear down a brewery and upon its ruins will rise a factory.—John Mitchell, Labor Leader.

THAT KITCHEN STOVE.

How to Build a Coal Fire Without Resorting to Strong Language.

Before starting to build a fire free the grate from ashes. To do this put on covers, close the front and back dampers and open the oven damper. Turn the grate, and ashes will fall into the ash receiver. If these rules are not followed ashes will fly over the room. Turn the grate back into place, remove the covers over firebox and cover the grate with pieces of paper twisted in the center and left loose at the ends. Cover the paper with small sticks or pieces of pine wood, being sure that the wood reaches the end of the firebox and so arranged that it will admit air. Over pile wood arrange hard wood; then sprinkle with two shovels of coal. Put on cover, open all closed dampers, strike a match and apply under the grate and you have a fire. When it gets to burning well put on a sprinkle of coal. After the gas has burned out close up most all of the dampers, leaving a little opening at the slide of door where you remove ashes, and that makes a draft to keep the fire burning. If you shut it all up your fire would go out. Never allow the firebox to be more than three-fourths filled. When full it checks the draft. A large amount of fuel is consumed and much heat is lost. Coal when red hot has lost most of its heat. Some refuse to believe this and insist upon keeping dampers open until most of the heat has escaped into the chimney.

Japanese Needlewomen.

The daughters of the land of flowers sometimes curiously reverse European methods. They needle their thread instead of threading their needles, and instead of running their needle through the cloth they hold it still and run the cloth upon it. An English lady long resident in Tokyo once wrote to a friend that the impulse of her Japanese maids is always to sew on cuff frills and other similar things topsy turvy and inside out.

Two Important Matters.

"Now, Katie, do you know enough to keep your mouth shut?" asked the fashionable woman of the girl who was about to engage.

"Well, ma'am, I know enough to all right, but the question is, Do I get enough wages to encourage me to?"—Youkers Statesman.

Selfishness.

The selfish man suffers more from his selfishness than from whom that selfishness withholds some important benefit.—Emerson.

Regrets.

For all we know, the gaudy butterfly may have moments in which it regrets the fine times it had as a caterpillar.—Puck.

Wisdom is oftentimes nearer when we stoop than when we soar.—Wordsworth.

SYNOPSIS.

Dudley Larnigan, district attorney, because of his fight on the vice and liquor trusts, is killed by an agent of a secret society, the committee of fifteen. The fight is continued by his son, Bruce, who is elected district attorney. Several efforts to frame up the intrepid young district attorney fail. When Larnigan saves the children of one of the conspirators this man agrees to expose the trust and is murdered. Dorothy Maxwell, whose father is head of the insurance trust, over the telephone hears of a plot to kill Larnigan, with whom she is in love. She warns him, he escapes, and two more of the conspirators are killed. When Bruce Larnigan goes to Chicago to fight the grain trust he is assaulted and thrown overboard. He is rescued by his brother Tom, who takes up the fight. Dodson, head of the grain trust, fearing exposure, kills himself. Tom Larnigan opens a fight on the textile trust. Ayres, the head of the trust, in an effort to kill Tom, kills his own son. Dorothy, gagged and bound, is taken by the conspirators to a roadhouse. Tom, Ben Travers and Stevens go after the railroad monopoly. An attempt is made to wreck the special train on which Tom and Ben travel. Dorothy escapes from the conspirators and, with Kitty Rockford, gets on the special. When Kitty is saved by Tom and Ben the railroad president declares he'll help expose the grafters.

SEVENTH EPISODE

America Saved From War

By Mrs. WILSON WOODROW
 Author of "The Black Pearl," "Sally Salt" and "The Silver Butterfly"

BRUCE LARNIGAN, slowly recovering from the effects of the adventure on the wheat schooner that had so nearly cost him his life, began to take a more active interest in the war of extermination against "The Fifteen," the Graft Syndicate that had murdered his father. During his illness his brother Tom, who had been his rescuer, had pursued the work Bruce had sworn to finish, but Tom, willing as he was, was limited in his power.

"As district attorney here, Tom," he said as he lay in bed, "I was hampered by the limits of my authority. My jurisdiction didn't go beyond my own county, you see. At the same time I hated to give up my official position, and I would never have done it if I hadn't had something in mind that would take its place."

"What was that?" asked Tom.

"An authority that has no limits—that gives me equally great powers in New York and Seattle, Florida and Dakota! The authority of a state, even, is limited—the authority of the Federal government is not."

"Oh!" said Tom, startled. "You'd been fussing with Washington?"

"Decidedly so! It was all arranged and would have gone through long ago if I hadn't been hurt. I was to be made a special investigator or examiner, with the secret service fund and the secret service itself at my disposal. You see, I had gone into the whole business very fully with the President, and he agreed with me that the criminal operations of these great trusts constituted a terrible menace to the country. So I have arranged for you to receive the appointment that would have gone to me. You will have the official paper to-morrow—and your first task is to see what is being done by J. Brooks Carney."

"The head of the munitions trust?"

"Exactly. At Washington they are convinced that it is determined to drag this country into the European war. You can imagine what that would mean to his trust—orders of a tremendous importance."

"I'll do my best to scuttle him, Bruce! Now that I've got you within reach, I want to hold conversation with you when it's necessary to get your advice, I'm much less afraid of the rotten crew than I was!"

Bruce and Tom had hoped to keep Tom's appointment to the Federal service a secret, but they had known, too, that the Graft Syndicate was so well served by spies that there was little chance of success in this. And so it proved, for Carney himself, the man immediately affected, knew of the facts almost as soon as Tom himself. He went at once to Stanford Stone, the real head of the Fifteen—although neither Bruce nor Tom was aware of Stone's connection with the enemy.

"Here's bad news!" said Carney, when he had told Stone. "It seems to me it's more imperative than ever that we should get rid of this man Larnigan. He was bad enough before—you can guess how dangerous he will be with the whole power of the Federal government behind him."

"Yes," said Stone, frowning. "And he should be kept out of the way especially just now—since it would be a frightful thing if our present plan were revealed! That would be a blow from which we'd find it almost impossible to recover."

"You mean our plan to blow up the interned warship?"

"Exactly! You know, Carney, how important it is that we should get into this war."

"And war means orders that would bring us a prosperity such as this world has never seen," said Carney. "There's only one thing—I don't trust this man Stone."

"We'll have Dunn watch him. Dunn has fallen down pretty badly against the Larnigan brothers, but I have found him useful enough in the past." The conspiracy was widespread. Roger Maxwell, the head of the insurance trust and the father of Dorothy Maxwell, the girl whom both Bruce Larnigan and Stanford Stone loved, was concerned in it—not so much because he was likely to be of use as because Stone in order to increase his hold on Dorothy saw to it that Maxwell should be involved in every disgraceful undertaking of the syndicate. And it chanced that Dorothy overheard part of the talk of the plan for the destruction of the warship. With Dorothy at the time as her guest was Kitty Rockford, the daughter of the railway magnate, whom Tom and his friend, Ben Travers, had won from his allegiance to Stone.

"Kitty," said Dorothy, "we've got to interfere here. Your friend, Tom Larnigan, is in danger!"

"Oh!" said Kitty. "Do you really think there's any danger?"

"I do. And I've an idea as to how we can make sure. I told you about my experience with Dunn? He has an office, you know. I think I can contrive a note that will get you work there as a stenographer. If you find anything out write a note and drop it from the window. I will be watching below and will get it. Are you game?"

"Yes, I'm a good enough stenographer to pass muster. I took a course once just for fun."

There had proved to be no difficulty about getting Kitty into Dunn's office. And at last Kitty heard something that sounded important. By listening in she discovered that a certain telephone call for Dunn was from Stanford Stone, and she managed to overhear Dunn's end of the conversation, though it proved impossible to hear what Stone said.

"The best chance is 63 Pell street—hop joint," was what Dunn said.

Kitty could not guess the meaning of this. But she wrote down what she had heard and dropped the note to Dorothy. Dorothy was also mystified, but she decided to take a chance and sent an unsigned note to Tom advising him to see what there was to be discovered at the hop joint at the address given by Dunn.

"The best place is 63 Pell street—hop joint," Dunn said.

What Dunn had actually told Stone was the address of the place where Bill Bean, the eccentric and half mad inventor, was usually to be found. It was a hang out of his. It was explained.

Stone and Carney meanwhile had seen Bean and concluded certain arrangements with him. He had invented a wireless transmitter of extraordinary power, so distinctive that it was capable of being carried in a waistcoat pocket.

"It looks good to me," said Stone when Bean at Carney's request had explained the principle of his invention. "I think it's safe to try it out to-night, Carney."

"You understand?" asked Carney. "We want you to give us a convincing demonstration. If it is satisfactory we stand prepared to pay you $200,000 in yearly installments of $50,000 for the rights to your invention."

"I'd do anything for that," said the Bean.

"Then give me two of your prepared magnets," said Carney, "and tonight at 8 o'clock go to a certain dock—I have written down the location for you—and set your current to work."

"Why at the dock?" asked Bean. "I could do it from here."

"Because you are to wait for a signal; something might go wrong with our plans. From the dock you will see a small boat. Three flashes of an electric torch will tell you to go ahead."

"All right," said Bean. Carney believed in doing things himself; he took no chances with helpers who might fail him. Therefore he prepared two packages of explosives with a good deal of care, attaching to their fusing wires by means of a fine wire the magnets Bean had given him. One of these packages he left with Mrs. Larnigan, Bruce's mother. He understood that Tom was to return home a little before 8 o'clock and asked her to give him the package as soon as he returned. This, entirely unusual, she promised to do. The other package Carney meant to fasten to the stern of the interned warship as she lay at her anchorage.

Bean had obtained some money in advance upon his promise neither to drink nor to visit a hop joint until he had completed his work. But he could not resist the temptation, and by the merest chance he went to his favorite resort, the one to which Tom had been advised to go.

Once in the joint, Bean grew boisterous and displayed his money. This was too much for the other habitués of the place, and in a moment they fell upon him, meaning to rob him and if necessary kill him. It was in the midst of this struggle that Tom appeared. On general principles he went to Bean's aid, and it proved easy for him to beat off the drug weakened wretches who were attacking Bean.

Filled with gratitude, Bean left the place with Tom. And to show his gratitude Bean took Tom home with him and showed him his invention.

"I'll make you my assistant," he declared grandiloquently, and Tom, laughing, accepted the offer.

"We've got a big job on tonight," said Bean importantly. "You stick by me. Come on. It's time we were starting."

On the way, despite Tom's protests and quite forgetting his promises, Bean insisted on making numerous stops at saloons. He grew more and more exhilarated, and at last he sent by messenger a note to Stanford Stone. Tom did not know of this. He would have given much, had he done so, to read the note, which ran:

"I'm on my way to the dock. No chance of my getting drunk. I've hired a new assistant to look after me, a bully fellow called Tom Larnigan."

Stone was almost frantic when he read this note. Carney was already on his way to do his part of the work. There was no way of getting in touch with him. And so he got Dunn on the telephone, urging him excitedly to send men to kill Tom Larnigan at the dock where he was to be with Bean.

"Get Tom Larnigan!" he cried. "Have him killed. No whatever is necessary. Take any risk you get him."

Meanwhile Tom and Bean had reached the dock, and now Tom filled Bean with questions, judging that Bean would be willing in his drunken state to tell the truth. This proved to be the case, and Tom, filled with horror, learned of the ghastly plan.

Tom thought fast. And he made a sudden lunge for Bean. In the struggle, with Bean resisting the crazy inventor's hands were forced together. And at once out in the river there was a blinding flash; a terrible explosion. Carney in his boat carrying the explosives, had been blown to pieces. The death he had planned for others had come to him.

And just then, too, the men from Dunn's office appeared, attacked Tom and threw him into the water. But Dorothy Maxwell had arrived, too, having been warned by Kitty Rockford, and she sprang over to his rescue, while Ben Travers held off the mercenaries who would have tried to stop her.

So the situation was saved, and the country was spared from the war into which Stone and Carney would have plunged it.

TRICKY AND A BLUFFER.

The Spreading Adder Will Fool You If You Don't Know Him.

He's a sly creature, this snake. When he's discovered and trapped he'll make such a hullabaloo about it, with his hissing and contortions, that if you're not wise to the fact that he's only bluffing you're sure to be frightened. If you're acquainted with him, however, and refuse to run, he'll give one final twist and roll over on his back, just as though he had made up his mind to die and save you the trouble of killing him. But don't be fooled. He's only playing possum. He's the spreading adder.

His tricks have resulted in all sorts of wild stories about him. Many people believe he's poisonous, because he spreads his head out flat and hisses when he's disturbed. As a matter of fact, he couldn't hurt you if you picked him up by the head. He's only bluffing when he hisses.

Then there's another story about the spreading adder to the effect that he will bite himself and fall over dead. This belief comes from his habit of playing possum when he sees he's cornered and can't escape.

The spreading adder is about thirty inches long, a reddish brown and blotched and spotted. He lives in dry woods and on sandy hillides and eats toads and lizards. He's also called the blowing viper or the hognoosed adder.—Philadelphia North American.

HAS TO SPLIT HIS TIPS.

Not All the Money the Waiter Gets Goes into His Pocket.

Don't think the waiters are getting rich. They might if they could keep all their tips, but—

Comes a waiter of twenty years' service who says the man who does the serving is lucky if he gets 25 per cent of his tip money.

"We wouldn't complain much if we were allowed to keep our tips," he said, "but the waiter is by necessity the best tipper in the world. He has to split his tips at least five ways. The head waiter gets his, the captain has his hand out, and the 'scrub' waiter and cook are next in line.

"If the waiter keeps all the money the captain will soon get wise to him, and he will get no more 'live ones' steered up to his table. If the cook is neglected the waiter might get his orders cold from the kitchen. If he doesn't cross the palm of the head waiter with silver once in awhile he will be looking for another job.

"The popular idea that all waiters are rich is 'all wrong.' The average waiter gets about $6 or $8 a week, and some of them get less. The man that leaves a quarter in the tray is really giving the waiter about 6 cents."—Chicago Tribune.

Letters and Postage Stamps.

"Strange ideas some people have about postage," said the clerk who opens the mail. "Yes. See this letter here with three one-cent stamps on it and stamped 1 cent due? That's a case in point. The writer of that letter thought that perhaps it weighed a little over an ounce, a little more than would go for 2 cents, and so he put on a little more postage—1 cent more—which he thought would cover it, when the fact is that it required an additional two cent stamp. Of course you know that letter postage is not fractional, but that it goes in multiples of two. If a letter weighs ever so little over an ounce it requires an additional two cent stamp. But not everybody seems to know this, and so we sometimes get letters like this one with a little more postage for a little more weight."—New York Sun.

Jenkins' Ear.

There was a war known as "the war of Jenkins' ear." It came about in the following way: In the year 1731 an English merchant vessel was boarded by a Spanish guardship, and the captain, one Robert Jenkins, was most cruelly used, one of his ears being torn off in the scuffle. Obtaining no redress by appealing to his government, he appeared before parliament in 1738, when the convention of the Parlo was so excitedly discussed that war followed. Jenkins' story was verified by the admiralty records so recently as 1890.—Exchange.

Definition of an Ohm.

An ohm, as defined by the international congress on electrical units and standards, is the resistance offered to the passage of an electric current by a column of mercury of uniform cross section having a mass of 253.0248 grains and a height of 41.868 inches at the temperature of melting ice.

In the bureau of standards at Washington are four standard ohms so perfectly made and kept that when tested recently their average deviation from their mean value was less than .00001 ohm.

Music and Dancing.

It does not follow that in order to write successful dance music a person must be an expert dancer. It is said that, though Johann Strauss and his family wrote dance music for three or four generations, not one of them could dance a step.

Musical.

When a person learns to pronounce Wagner as "Vagner" and Chopin as "Sho-pin" and calls his "chello" he feels that he thoroughly understands the classics of music.—Macon News.

TESTS CLEARLY SHOW UP FACTS

Holstein Cows Lead in Production of Butter Fats.

Interesting Figures Brought to Light in Wisconsin Dairy Cow Competition.

The farmers of the country in their determination to sell milk, have naturally tied themselves to the animal that will give them the greatest quantity.

The idea that it is impossible to produce butterfat profitably from Holsteins is very prevalent and it is generally believed that in order to start selling cream instead of whole milk it would be necessary to substitute another breed.

This is not the case, for it is the total weight of butterfat in the milk that counts, rather than the percentage. This fact is set forth clearly in Research Bulletin Number 26 of the Wisconsin Experiment Station, which contains data based upon the Wisconsin Dairy Cow Competition, 1909-1911. A comparison is given of the yearly records of 158 Holsteins, 167 Guernseys and 83 Jerseys.

These investigations show that the Holstein cows produced an average of 81.60 pounds more butterfat than the Guernseys and 139.69 pounds more than the Jerseys. Even though the milk of the Holsteins tested only 3.42 against 4.98 for the Guernseys and 5.16 for the Jerseys, the total butterfat production was much higher from the former breed. It cost $20.12 more to feed the Holstein than the Guernsey and $37.19 more than it did to feed the Jersey. However, the net returns from the Holsteins were $8.44 more than from the Guernseys and $11.70 more than from the Jerseys.

This proves the general rule that, despite the greater feed cost, the greater profit is associated with high production, whether the milk is sold as milk or on a butterfat basis. Another fact in favor of the Holstein cow is that, on account of her greater size, she will convert into butterfat a lot of roughage produced on the farm, and, furthermore, owing to her high producing qualities, she will leave more skim milk to be fed on the farm.

The writer has no particular preference toward the Holstein cow, but has simply tried to correct the impression that cream, and hence butterfat, cannot be profitably produced from this breed.

STOLE MARCH ON FRIENDS

Ellsworth Couple Married Friday Evening at 8 o'clock in Petoskey

Bride and Groom Well and Favorably Known Both in Ellsworth and Charlevoix

Glen C. Townsend of Ellsworth, and Miss Hazel B. Holliday of Traverse City, were quietly married at the Methodist parsonage in Petoskey, last Friday evening at 8:00 o'clock, by Rev. L. H. Manning. The marriage came as a surprise to their friends as no inkling of the event was known prior to Friday. The groom took the afternoon train from Ellsworth to Central Lake, doubling back on the northbound train about an hour later. The bride left Ellsworth on the same northbound train and proceeded to Petoskey, where the knot was tied in the evening.

The home of the bride is in Traverse City. For the past three years she has taught in the Ellsworth schools. The groom has been a resident of Ellsworth the past two years, occupying the responsible position as cashier of the Citizens bank. Both young people have scores of close friends from whom congratulations and best wishes are extended.

The happy young couple returned to Ellsworth Monday on the morning train and were met by a shower of rice as they descended from the train. During the evening they were given a concert at the Hotel Orient by the Ellsworth band, of which Mr. Townsend is a member. They will reside in Ellsworth and be at home to their friends after June 15.

THIS YEAR'S SEED CORN.

Have you plenty of seed corn where it is safe and ready for the 1914 planting? If so you may consider yourself rather fortunate, as there is likely to be a serious shortage of first class seed corn at planting time. Any amount of corn failed to mature and ripen properly last fall. Where this was true it will be well to look around for seed corn from the 1914 crop. There is probably plenty of this if it can be located, but it should not be used untested. It is just possible that the man with a cribful of good old corn can make some money by selecting, testing and offering it on the seed corn market this spring.—Farm Progress.

EARLY CABBAGE VARIETIES.

Great Care Should Be Exercised in the Purchase of Seeds.

Jersey Wakefield has been the leader among early cabbages for more than fifty years, writes R. L. Watts in the Country Gentleman. All the early gardeners praised it, and most of our gardeners today claim it is superior to all other early varieties. It is very early, medium in size, pointed and solid. The heads are valuable for salad purposes. Charleston Wakefield attains marketable size from a few days to a week later than Jersey Wakefield. It is larger in size and requires slightly more space in the row. If the market does not demand extreme earliness, the Charleston type will be found more profitable than the Jersey Wakefield, especially if the crop is sold by the crate or barrel.

Copenhagen Market is a comparatively new variety that is attracting much attention among commercial growers. It comes a few days later than Jersey Wakefield, but it possesses merits that, in the minds of some gardeners, more than overbalance this disadvantage. The heads average at least a third larger than Jersey Wakefield. The spread of the outside leaves is less, so that closer planting may be practiced. The heads are roundish instead of pointed and they are very solid when properly matured. They also carry better in transportation than the Wakefield types.

A strong point in favor of Copenhagen Market is its uniformity in time of heading, which permits the ground to be cleared of the cabbage early in the season and another crop started. A very successful trucker in western Pennsylvania, who grows about 20,000 early cabbages annually, now plants no other variety.

Early Summer is a well known variety. It ripens with Charleston Wakefield or perhaps a few days later. The heads are flat and fairly solid.

Succession, a midsummer variety, is regarded by many as the best bred cabbage in America. It usually runs remarkably uniform in type. The heads are large and solid at maturity. Seed sown the 1st of February should produce ripe cabbage in any part of the north before the 1st of August.

Whatever the variety selected, the utmost care should be exercised in buying seed for there is marked variation in the strains of different varieties.

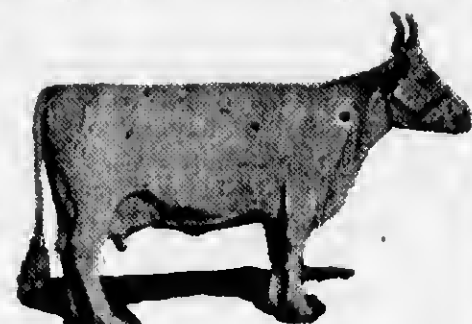

DAIRY and CREAMERY

FEED COWS LIBERALLY.

Milk Flow Cannot Be Maintained on Meager Rations.

It is easier to lose than to gain a milk flow. Near the close of winter a great many farmers and dairymen run short of feed, and as a consequence the cows suffer and the milk flow is checked. Some think they can carry their producing cows along on half rations when home grown feeds are scarce and then bring the cows up again when grass comes. This is very poor policy with the cows, for if they once drop off in their milk flow it is a very difficult matter to bring them back to heavy production.

Keeping cows up with a high standard of feeding is the only way to maintain a large yield. A cow that is worth keeping is worth keeping on full feed, whether it be home grown or purchased. If it does not pay to buy feed for the cows the fault lies with the quality of the cows. Find out which cows are the unprofitable ones and dispose of them, allowing more feed and better care for the remaining ones. The really good cow will not be profitable if she is not given a variety of wholesome and nutritious feeds, with good shelter and regular milking. Never keep cows and allow them to go hungry through the last part of winter. When the cow is placed on low rations before pastures are ready for use they become weak and lose in flesh. If in this weakened condition they go on new pasture it will be many weeks before they will recover. Don't let up on the heavy winter feeding, for pasture should only be looked upon as a supplementary feed for dairy cows, and at no season should the stall feeding be omitted. If the cows have been allowed to shift for themselves try feeding some grain through the summer season and see if you are not amply repaid for the extra feed. They should have good shelter and abundance of good, fresh water where they can get it at all times.

Garcilough May Mischief, the Ayrshire cow here pictured, has just broken the world's record for her breed in milk production. In 36 days she yielded 26,327 pounds of milk containing 897.87 pounds of butter fat. She is owned by Percival Roberts, Jr., Fairmount farm, Warberth, Pa.

BAD ODORS IN MILK.

Certain Feeds When Injudiciously Fed Will Produce Bad Results.

It is possible to increase the milk flow of a cow by good feeding and care before it is finally established, says Howard's Dairyman. No system of feeding has yet been brought forth that will increase the quality of milk—that is, in the percentage of fat. It would seem from practical experience that it is possible to ascertain systems of feeding to at least temporarily increase the percentage of fat in milk, but to sustain it throughout the period of lactation we know of no particular kind of feeds to advocate for this purpose.

Where increased flows of milk are desirable, it is very important that the feeder watch his cows closely at the time of freshening and gradually increase their feed so long as they will respond to the increase. When the animal has reached her limit of production it is well then to drop back a little in the amount of meal fed, as it is not feasible under average conditions to feed all the grain a cow will eat in order that her maximum flow of milk may be sustained.

Most any good farm grown products produce a good flavored milk. There are a few feeds that affect the flavor—that is, what we term an off flavor. The feeding of a large amount of rutabagas or turnips just before milking will invariably give the milk an objectionable odor. Permitting cows to graze on rape pasture will also cause them to produce a strong flavored milk. Even clover pasture will have its effect and so will grass.

Butter Fat Record Broken.

The Holstein cow, Ormsby Jane Sego, Aaggle 150831, has broken the record for fat production in the senior four year class of the seven day division by producing in seven consecutive days 703.6 pounds milk containing 34.304 pounds fat. She freshened at the age of four years eleven months nineteen days. Her sire is Ormsby Jane Paul 49641 and her dam is Sego Aaggle Netherland 82613. She was bred by Ernest M. Johnson of New York and is now owned by Oliver Cahann, Jr., of New York.

Feed Freshening Cows.

The cow cannot turn all the nourishment she will get from her feed into the milk pail and still have enough to build up her offspring rightly. We need good calves as much as we do good cows.

PLANS FOR GREATER FAIR

Will Break all Record in Agriculture and Live Stock Exhibits.

With practically one-half of the entire available space in the live stock, agricultural and horticultural departments arranged for at this early date, West Michigan fair officials are contemplating extensive improvements to take care of exhibitors this fall.

County exhibits, boys' and girls' clubs, granges, gleaners and farmers' Clubs from all over Michigan will be in evidence, the result of the unusual large and attractive premium list. MEN WANTED ON THE LAKES Enormous Amount of Tonnage Now Ready to be Moved.

Lake Vessels Have Already Booked All They Can Possibly Handle During Year.

The demand for iron ore is so great this year that lake vessel interests are eagerly awaiting the opening of navigation. So great is the volume of freight to be moved that every day lost is an important consideration and the lake fleet will put out as soon as ice crushers can break a channel through St. Mary's river and Whitefish bay. An effort will be made to force navigation into Escanaba by April 15th if the condition of the ice allows it. Never before have the lakes lined up such an enormous tonnage to be moved. The prosperity of the country is so great that both merchant furnaces and steel plants are in need of ore. In fact lake vessels have booked all the ore that they can possibly deliver during 1916 and with an unprecedented volume of coal and grain also to be transported, lake vessels will have to move with the utmost dispatch to fill their contract requirements.

There will not be an idle ship anywhere on the lakes during the coming season and any competent man can get a job aboard ship by merely applying for it. Wages moreover have been sharply advanced all along the line. Deckhands without any previous experience are being paid $35 per month, wheelmen and watchmen $60 per month second mate $100 per month, first mates $140 per month, and captains $2400 per annum. Even this schedule will be substantially advanced after October 1. George A. Marr, secretary of the Lake Carriers' association at Cleveland, estimates that 55,000,000 tons of ore, 33,000,000 tons of coal, and 14,000,000 tons of grain will be moved on the lakes during 1916. He says that never in all his experience has there been a season like it and that the opportunities open to young men aboard ship are better than they have ever been. The duties aboard lake vessels are simple and masters say that they can make a competent wheelman out of an ambitious boy in less than a season's sailing.

CAPT. CAMPBELL DIED THURSDAY

WELL KNOWN RESIDENT WILL BE GREATLY MISSED.

Was a Member of Masonic and Cable Orders—Funeral Held Sunday Afternoon.

The residents of Charlevoix were greatly shocked Thursday by the death of Captain Peter Douglas Campbell at 4:00 p. m. Captain Campbell had been in failing health for the past year and had become nearly blind. The cause of immediate death was a series of complications.

Peter Douglas Campbell was born at St. Charles, Illinois, July 30, 1850. When 11 years of age he went to Canada, where he remained during the Civil War, residing with a relative. He then went to Stony Creek, where he began sailing on tugs at the age of 14. He was master of a tug in and around Chicago during the time of the Chicago fire, and at this time aided in the rescue of several persons. Later he entered the steam barge business and built two boats, the R. C. Britton and the M. B. Covell. He owned three other barges about this time. He operated the Erie L. Hackley from Muskegon and White Lake to Chicago until 1896, when he started fishing in Little Traverse Bay with this boat. In 1897 he moved to Charlevoix and operated the Hackley on the Beaver Island and Charlevoix route for several years.

In 1903 he purchased a boat from the Booth Fisheries company and rebuilt it, calling the ship the Beaver. He continued operating this boat until the fire at midnight, April 20, 1915, which completely destroyed it. A strange coincidence appears in the fact that Captain Campbell's death occurred just a year from the date of his retirement from sailing activities.

Mr. Campbell was married to Lois E. Allen at Hampshire, Kane county, Illinois, 41 years ago. To this union three sons and one daughter were born, Ira A. of San Francisco, John Harvey and Peter Donald of this city and Mrs. A. H. Cameron of Chicago. The widow and four children survive to mourn the loss of a devoted husband and father.

Captain Campbell was a member of the Macabees and the Masonic orders, also a member of the Licensed Tugmen's Protective association. The funeral services were held from the home Sunday afternoon, Rev. Walker, officiating. Burial at Brookside. All the children were present but Harvey, of this city, who was away on his boat and could not get home. John M. Campbell, a brother of Michigan City, was present at the funeral.

The pall bearers were close friends of Capt. Campbell and were Captains G. W. Weaver, Wm. Finucan, S. M. Rose, O. E. Wilbur and W. J. Raehow and Henry M. Sherman.

In the death of Captain Campbell, Charlevoix has lost one of her best citizens. A man of courage and forceful manhood, he numbered his friends by all who knew him. His congenial manner and sameness won many staunch companions who join with the bereaved family in the loss of a noble character and warm friend.

A delicious course luncheon was served and the afternoon closed most happily with many good wishes for the bride. The wedding will take place in early fall.

A Sure Sign of Spring

POWERS AND LAVALLEY CAPTURED AT HOTEL MICHIGAN THURSDAY

Escaped From Traverse City Thursday Night, April 13—Reached Charlevoix Monday Night, April 17—Eluded Officers at Korth Home on South State Street.

A feeling of unrest visited the residents of Charlevoix the first of the week when it became known that two of the Traverse City jail breakers were in the city. The bark of the blood hound played its part in the fears of the many residents who are wont to fright at the sound of a criminal's name, when the chase began Tuesday morning, April 13. The final reckoning came to Powers and LaValley when they were caught in the Hotel Michigan.

The territory was being thoroughly searched for the fugitives and in a peculiar manner their whereabouts was made known. Thursday afternoon, Mrs. Biossat, owner of the hotel, went to the Michigan after some blankets to be used at the Hotel Charlevoix. She entered room seven and failed to find the blankets there. On entering the room she immediately detected the smell of cigarette smoke. After the blankets were secured from the second floor of the hotel, she left the building. When the street was reached, Mrs. Biossat met Rev. Walker and told him of the smelling of smoke, also of her fears of again entering the building.

Rev. Walker went into the building with Mrs. Biossat to see what the trouble was, and upon entering room seven, the smoke was detected by Rev. Walker also. While standing there Mrs. Biossat, peering under the bed, saw the feet of one of the men. They immediately left the room, and Walker called his son, who was working on the tennis court, to watch the front of the building. Mrs. Biossat stayed in the hall way and Rev. Walker ran for the officers.

Officers Jefferies and Howard responded and began the final scene of the capture. In the meantime Powers and LaValley, seeing they were discovered, left the building through the windows of Room 7, which is south of the office. They made their way along the bank to the building at the rear of Cooper's residence. LaValley crawled under the barn while Powers went inside the building. Jefferies followed closely behind and went to the window and looked in. Upon seeing Powers, he put his hand through the window and shook hands with him and told him to come along. Powers did so without the slightest act of resistance. LaValley asked for help to get himself out from under the barn after Powers was captured and then followed the procession to the county jail, where both men were placed in custody, awaiting the arrival of the Traverse City officers.

Friday morning both men were taken to Traverse City by Sheriff Campbell and Under-sheriff Lahym of that city, assisted by Sheriff Novak. The officers and captives boarded the train at the Belvedere station, cluding a large crowd who had gathered at the north side depot for a fleeting glimpse of the much advertised and supposedly desperate criminals.

The trip from Traverse City to Charlevoix, as told by Powers, was tedious and full of incidents. Both men followed the lake shore from Traverse to this city. For 36 hours neither had food before reaching Charlevoix Monday night.

They arrived at the home of Mrs. Moffort about 12 o'clock and asked for food. The woman refused them. The fugitives then wandered about and seeing a light at R. C. Korth's, stopped there for food and were received and fed.

After eluding the officers at the Korth home, they went into Francis Gallagher's barn, where they remained until daylight; then they went along the bank to the ship yards on Round lake, and crawled into Goldberg's boat, called the Sylvia. Powers claims they remained here until Tuesday night about 8:30, when they came up town. Here they wandered about, dodging in alleys and various places until 3:20 Wednesday morning. While on the street Tuesday night he claims they saw many persons, including the officers, known to Powers. About 3:20 the men went to the Michigan, the windows on the south side were open, and went inside, remaining there until their discovery on Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Biossat claims to have smelled smoke in the building Tuesday, which contradicts the story told by Powers. It is rumored that the men received help here, but this story comes more from the suspicions of the Traverse City officers than from definite information in this city.

Powers asserted that a two year old child could get out of the Traverse City jail, claiming he used a one-tined fork and a piece of steel to effect the delivery. They escaped about 7:30 o'clock. The jail is rotten and the steel all loose, according to Powers' version. He had no gun and denies that anyone was hound and gagged. The third man who escaped was Leon Totten, who was caught at the home of his mother in Traverse the same night. Totten tells a thrilling story, which Powers denies.

OPPOSES HARBOR MEASURE

Congressman Scott Makes Big Noise
About Appropriations.

"Clster, sinkhole and subteranean" are some of the terms Congressman Frank D. Scott applies to one-third of the propositions in the rivers and harbors bill recently passed by the house. "I refused to be sandbagged into voting for such a proposition even though there was about $1,000,000 worth of worthy projects included in my district," said Mr. Scott.

"In northern Michigan we are entitled to a larger expenditure in the St. Mary's river, the Soo locks; Menominee harbor, Alpena harbor and several other places. But we were unable to get it because someone wanted to deepen Trinity river, which one congressman said was so shallow when he was a boy he could not find enough water in it to swim.

"Another similar proposition is the St. Francis river, which you can cross without wetting your feet. Think of tying up such propositions with the Soo locks and St. Mary's river, where the annual commerce is 80,000,000 tons."

AUTOIST SHOULD GET LICENSE

SUCH IS THE ADVICE OF PROSECUTOR R. L. LEWIS.

Waiting for Decision on New Law
No Excuse Not to Get License—May Prosecute.

Have you secured your automobile license for 1916? If not, then make application without further delay. This is the advice of Prosecuting Attorney R. L. Lewis.

"Automobile owners have been holding off in the expectation that the Supreme court would render an early decision on the constitutionality of the auto tax law passed by the last legislature," said Mr. Lewis. "Now word comes from Lansing, unofficially, that a decision may be delayed for three or four months. My advice is that all owners of automobiles should secure licenses at once. If the law is later declared to be invalid, the license fee paid to the secretary will be refunded.

"Owners of automobiles owe it to themselves to comply promptly with the new law. In case of accident an automobile owner who has no license would be at serious disadvantage in court, because on the face of things he would be a violator of the law in operating his machine without a license.

"I would further call the attention of automobile owners to the provision of the law requiring automobiles to be equipped with dimmers. The law requires that the dimmer shall be used when meeting another car. Cars that are not equipped with dimmers should be attended to at once."

State Health Board Urges Clean-up Day

Says Its Time of Year to Clean up Streets and Alleys—Cities Adopt Creed.

Because this is the time of the year when "Clean-up Days" and "Clean-up Weeks" are being held in most of the cities of the state, Dr. Wm. DeKleine has drawn up a "Health First Clean-up Creed." In the statewide anti-tuberculosis survey a great deal of emphasis is placed on cleanliness as an aid in preventing and curing this disease, and the "Clean-up" creed was drawn up with the same purpose in view. Here it is:

Health First Clean-up Creed.

I believe in the doctrine of "Health First," in the doctrine that health is fundamental to the attainment of the highest personal and social freedom. Hence I believe in health laws and in all agencies that work for the promotion of public health. I believe that every individual should look upon the conservation of his own health and of his neighbor's health as a sacred moral duty, that every community should look upon the preservation of public health as one of the main functions of its corporate life.

LEADER GAVE EXCELLENT TALK

PROGRAM OF W. C. T. U. MEETING HELD LAST WEEK.

Ladies Making Plans to Have Supper in the Near Future—Normal Girls in Dialogue.

There was a good attendance at the Women's Christian Temperance Union, which met in the league room of the Methodist church on Friday afternoon, April 14, and it also proved to be one of marked interest.

It was decided to have a supper in the near future, announcement of which will be made later. One new member was secured. There were 27 members and twelve or more visitors.

The program was an excellent one, Mrs. Walker having it in charge. Topic, "The Strength of Youth." Other parts of the program were as follows:

Readings—Mrs. Burns and Mrs. Taggart.

Vocal Solo, "Sowing the Seed," Miss Audrey Correll.

In the dialogue "Josiah Allen's Wife," given by two Normal girls, "Samantha" held the attention of the audience. Josiah, as usual, defended the saloon, but was outdone by the arguments put forth by Samantha, and when the arguments got too strong for him to answer he was anxious to change the subject, and demanded of Samantha where his planting bag was.

Reading by Mrs. Iddings. The song of three girls—Esther Powell, Sylvia Black and Effie Gornell—accompanied by Pearl Durance on the piano, entitled "It's a Short Way to Prohibition" was enthusiastically received.

Mrs. Walker gave an excellent talk on the topic of the day. Among the things she said were the following:

"It is a hopeful sign for the good of the coming generations that our country is at least realizing the necessity of conserving its youth. Children are largely the reflection of their environment, and that something is radically wrong with that environment is shown by the fact that the average age of one hundred thousand prisoners placed behind the bars last year was twenty-three years. Seventy-five per cent. of our juvenile offenders are found to be in poor physical condition, eight per cent. are naturally criminal, and many are mentally deficient."

"Lack of proper home training is responsible for many of these evils, and at the root of this, in a that environment is shown by the large majority of cases, is our country's great curse—Drink."

"In order to understand just how great the ravages of this curse are on the child life, let me bring the facts to your mind: In the prenatal infant the first organ to be developed is the heart, together with the nerve center which controls it through life. Next comes

More Delinquent Tax This Year Than Last

Auditor General is Authority That Returns are Heavier This Year Than a Year Ago.

The amount of delinquent state tax which will come into the hands of the auditor general for collection will run higher this year than it did last, despite the fact that Michigan is supposed to be having the greatest wave of prosperity in her history.

Although the percentage of gain will be but one-quarter of one per cent., the amount of money delinquent will run higher than on the 1914 tax, because the 1915 state tax exceeds that of 1914 by $3,000,000 in round numbers.

In 1915 95.64 per cent. of the state tax was paid before it became delinquent and was returned as such. This year the amount paid will run about 96.40 per cent., based upon the figures from the 32 counties which have already settled with the state and closed up their books.

Late in the fall the state officials were asked to devise some way to help out the farmers of the northern portion of the southern peninsula on their taxes. The frost and the cold weather had ruined the crops there and it was feared that the taxes could not be paid. Hence an arrangement was sought by which the state would not charge the usual price for delinquency. The matter could not be regulated, however, and, according to the returns, those who were frightened had no cause to be so.

Kalkaska county, which was mentioned as being one of the "poor" ones, dropped off only 3 per cent. Last year 92 per cent. of its tax was paid; this year it paid 89. Hence dropped from 87 to 81, while Crawford, another in the poor crop belt, only lost a point from 86 to 84. The only large county reporting so far is Kent. It about follows the average drop. Last year it paid 96.87 per cent., and this year 96.39 per cent.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever. The classes of the intermediate and primary departments did splendidly, but the choir music rendered by the I. T. class was very fine, and much praise is due them and their instructor, Mr. George Block. A duet by Miss Marva Cooper and Mr. Frank Poole of Charlevoix and another by Mrs. James Block and Mrs. Harold Jacobs were also two very pleasing features of the programme. The church was beautifully and appropriately decorated with green, yellow and white festooning, potted plants and the customary downy Easter chicks. Appropriate souvenirs in the shape of Easter chicks and rabbits were given to the primary and cradle roll departments.

Farmers--Read what Fresno County, California, Offers!

This rich productive California county is sparsely settled compared to the East. There are thousands of acres ready for industrious farmers—land that will yield far more than the average farm land throughout the United States. Here forty acres will bring greater revenue than a quarter section in some parts of the country. The land is suitable for general farming. Alfalfa is cut six times each year and yields from 1 1/2 to 2 tons per acre. Big opportunities for practical dairymen, stockmen and poultrymen. Splendid climate. No severe winter.

ANTRIM COUNTY AND ITS MANY RESOURCES

By E. R. Harris
First alphabetically, first agriculturally, at the head of the list of the twenty fine counties in Western Michigan. As Michigan has more lakes than any other state, so has Antrim county more lakes than any other county. It has over three hundred thousand acres of land, and it is all good land. Over one-half of it is now good improved farm lands and the balance is just as good. All we need is good, bona fide settlers. "A Farmer for Every Forty" is the slogan in Antrim county from now on. A person with a little capital can come to Antrim county and get a start and do well along all the following lines: General farming, stock raising, cattle, sheep and hogs, fruit growing, truck growing, berries and poultry. Antrim county was nearly covered with the very heavy type of hardwood, the maple, beech, hawthorn, elm and hemlock covered the hills and valleys fifty years ago. The soil runs largely to a gravel loam and readily takes up all the moisture that may come, but does not dry out and bake and crack like some of the heavier soils in case of a partial drouth. We never have the extremes such as violent winds or hail storms, nor extremes of heat or cold. In Antrim county we raise the finest of fruits, peaches, apples, cherries, plums, pears, and all the berries grow with the real "Michigan Flavor."
Antrim county is well eared for as to transportation facilities, all the western line bordering on Grand Traverse Bay with lake boats running to many of the large cities. The G. R. & I. railway running directly across the eastern part; the Pere Marquette railroad running across the western side, with the East Jordan & Southern and the Detroit & Frederick as cross lines, there is not over a six mile haul to a good market.
Antrim county up to the present time has received over $22,000 state reward road money, showing it to be right at the front along progressive business lines.
The villages of Alba, Alden, Belaire, Central Lake, Eastport, Elk Rapids, Elmira, Ellsworth and Muncegon are all wide-awake, thriving towns, with Boards of Trade or other organizations that will do their utmost to interest settlers or business interests to locate in our fine county.

Two men were commenting each other on their habits of temperance. "Did you ever, neighbor," said one, "see me with more than I could carry?" "No, indeed," was the reply, "but I have seen you where I thought you had better gone twice after it."

I shall be back in ten minutes." On returning to seek his property he found in its place a card thus inscribed: "This was left by a man who can run twelve miles an hour. I shall not be back."

Several members of a women's club were chatting with the little daughter of their hostess. "I suppose you are a great help to your mamma," said one. "Oh, yes," replied the little miss, "and so is Ethel; but it is my turn to count the spoons to-day after the company has gone."

Some time ago little Jimmy Smith's family moved into a new community, and immediately little Jimmy was seized by a pretty young woman and hauled off to Sunday school. "James," sweetly remarked the young woman, teaching her class on the following Sunday, "you know, of course, all about the Sabbath?" "Yes, ma'am," was the unhesitating rejoinder of the youthful James. "Good!" commended the teacher, with a pleased expression. "In what way does Sunday differ from the other days?" "You sleep later and go fishing," answered James, with an air of one who knows.

JOLLIFFE—EDSON.
Pretty Home Wedding Celebrated Wednesday at Bride's Home.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ethan Joliffe, near Atwood, on Wednesday of this week, when their daughter, Hazle Joy, became the bride of Charles Edson of Lansing. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. A. Rood in the presence of some thirty-five relatives and immediate friends. The bride was gown-d in dove blue silk and was attended by her sister, Edna. A brother of the groom acted as best man. The bride has lived in Antrim county practically all her life and holds the respect and esteem of a host of friends. The groom is a resident of Lansing, Michigan, where he holds a responsible position in the Reo Automobile Works. They left for their new home in Lansing Thursday.

After the wedding ceremony had been performed the guests sat down to a six o'clock wedding dinner. The young couple were presented with numerous useful and appropriate gifts, and were showered with congratulations by their many friends before their departure.

THE BEET SUGAR SITUATION.

"If the Democrats of the Senate think they have made any friends by putting the sugar industry on a four-year reprieve, they are badly mistaken," said a prominent Colorado business man visiting in Washington. "The people of my state are thoroughly disgusted with the Democratic Senate caucus in slating sugar for the free list in 1920.

"We have been making good profits from beet sugar on account of the European war, although the beet sugar industry was in a precarious state prior to that time. It has been the intention of our beet sugar men to devote their war profits to the building of new mills and factories, and remodeling the old ones, but with a free sugar provision hanging over their heads, not one penny will be invested in the extension of this industry, because no man would be warranted in spending his money for permanent improvements. Until our beet sugar men can be assured of protection to their industry, no new capital or credit will be forthcoming. And I understand the same conditions will govern in the state of Louisiana.

"I am informed that this caucus action was offered as a compromise to Senator Hardwick's proposal to place a consumption tax on refined sugar, a plan which would put the beet sugar business out of commission, and which, I am told, had the approval of our own Senator Thomas of the Finance Committee. The State of Colorado stands first in beet sugar production, with an acreage of 160,000 and a probable yield of 225,000 tons. Senator Thomas appears to be the implacable enemy of an industry in which his own state leads. Senator Hardwick's flirtation with C. A. Spreckels, of the Federal Sugar Refining Company will never be productive of any good to my state. The consumption tax proposed by him was drawn by F. C. Lowry, the lobbyist, of the seaboard sugar refiners, who are thick with the administration. The Democratic National Committee spread broadest the free sugar propaganda of the seaboard refiners during the last campaign.

"There seems to be something absolutely sinister in the action of Democratic leaders with regard to the sugar schedule. When it comes to the Hawaiian, the Louisianan, and the beet sugar industry, every one of these Democrats turns thumbs down. What have the domestic sugar producers done to deserve this disfavor? The Democratic minority of the Finance Committee of the Senate in 1912, reported: 'The tariff on sugar is peculiarly a revenue tariff. Very much the major part of the tax levied on the consumer goes actually into the United States Treasury.'

"The tariff plank in the Democratic platform stated: 'We favor the ultimate attainment of the principles we advocate by legislation that will not injure or destroy legitimate industry.' This plank was inserted to give assurance to the domestic sugar producers. Between the time of Woodrow Wilson's nomination and his election a rumor started that he favored free sugar. Our producers put the question to him and his reply contained further assurance that the sugar beet industry would not be destroyed. Charles R. Helke, Secretary of the American Sugar Refining Company, a member of the seaboard gang, testified before the Hardwick Sugar Investigating Committee that if the duty were removed absolutely on sugar, it would destroy the industry in this country, and that he would approve of that. Mr. Spreckels declared that he stood for free sugar, absolutely. Of course they will then dominate the market and can exact any price they like.

"But the domestic sugar producers now know definitely where the Democrats stand in this matter, and they will work tooth and nail to put the Republican party into power in March, 1917. Then we will know where we get off."

ADVERTISING AS NEWS.

According to the old fashioned idea, an advertisement was simply a business card. John Smith respec-fully informed the public that he kept a dry goods store on main street, where he was prepared to give the best goods for the lowest prices. As the best goods are always the cheapest, the public should buy of Smith, etc., etc.

In the old days when newspapers and magazines were scarce, the public might read that kind of thing. Anything in print looked good to them. It made an impression on their minds and no doubt helped a lot to sell goods.

Today any bright business man knows that his advertisement is a little section of news space where he can give the public the news about his store. He records there what special opportunities he has picked up and what special sacrifices he is prepared to make. It is just as interesting as anything in the paper and is read as intently.

More than one editor residing in the eleventh congressional district will be compelled to purchase his garden seed this year. The Progress is in the bunch that will be forgotten—Elk Rapids Progress. You are right, Brother Perry. And there is a fine outlook for a scarcity of seed in this neighborhood, too.

It seems pretty tough when a patriot is anxious to offer himself in loyal service to his country, that he can't get either an office or the chance to go as delegate to a presidential convention.

PRINTERS TO MEET

Hold Annual Convention in Battle Creek May 18 to 20.

Battle Creek is expecting some distinguished visitors May 18, 19, 20, as the Michigan Printers and Press Federation are to be the guests. The Chamber of Commerce, at the request of the officials of this federation, has arrangements all made so that all sections of this organization are within one half block of each other.

The Post Tavern at the main corner will be headquarters, and at the next corner is the new Elks Temple where the big afternoon meetings will be held. Across the corner is the plant of Gage & Co., printers and engravers, and where the president earns his money. Just across the street is the new building of the Morning Enquirer and Evening News, considered the most modern and convenient newspaper plant in Michigan. The delegates of the Weekly Press are to meet in the directors' room of the Chamber of Commerce, just across the street from the Post Tavern, and the job printers have their meeting room in the building adjacent to the Elks Temple. The main room of the Chamber of Commerce has been reserved for the Daily Press delegates, while the ladies of the Women's Press section are to have the bridge room of the Post Tavern. Just a block from the headquarters the great Duplex Printing Press Company will keep open house and have in operation their new $2500 flat bed press during the convention. Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Company are to entertain one afternoon and the Postum Cereal Company will open the whole plant and the private art collection of the late C. W. Post, which consists of many wonderful paintings and works of art. The Battle Creek Sanitarium, the largest of its kind in the world, will be open to the delegates and visitors to this convention.

REVIVAL MEETINGS CLOSED

Pastor Vinyard of Baptist Church Writes Letter of Thanks.

Dear Friends—Our revival meetings having closed, I take this means of thanking each one who in any way assisted in this great work.

The Lord has abundantly blessed—144 souls were saved and all Christians who had part in the work were lifted to a higher plane. The meeting was free from excitement or sympathetic straining and the hearts of the people were reached through the Bible—The Word of God—which is the sword of the spirit. More than 100 of these converts have united with the church and many more will soon.

Our big choir, under efficient leaders, will sing at the mid-week prayer meeting, and in both morning and evening services Sundays.

If you wish a seat you had better be on time, as the capacity of our auditorium and gallery is being taxed to the limit. We shall be glad to see you. Come. The Lord bless everybody.

Root Storage Pit.

Where there are no cellars or storage rooms available the old fashioned pit makes a good place in which to store roots and some kinds of vegetables for the winter. Put in a well drained place, dig a couple of trenches, crossing each other in the center of the pit, cover these with boards, leaving an open space in the center. Put in a ventilator cover the bottom of the pit with straw and pile up the vegetables. Then place the straw over the roots, then dirt, then more straw if in a cold region, more dirt, and your pit will keep the most severe weather from injuring the vegetables.—Farm Progress.

POTASH IN PLANTS.

Marsh grass, marsh sedge, seaweed and pine straw are among the materials in which potash in small agricultural quantities has been found. The chemist of the South Carolina experiment station reports after analyses of these plants:

Four samples of marsh grass contained respectively .044 per cent, 2.30 per cent, 1.16 per cent and 1.09 per cent potash.

A sample of dead marsh sedge contained 0.03 per cent potash.

Two samples of marsh sedge ashes contained respectively .018 per cent and 1.38 per cent potash.

A sample of seaweed contained 5.85 per cent potash.

A sample of long leaf pine straw contained 0.41 per cent potash.

Marsh grass also contains a considerable quantity of nitrogen and a small quantity of phosphorus.

All such materials should be gathered green because the potash rapidly leaches out of the dead material. This fact proves its value when applied to land, for it is water soluble potash.

THE ANNUAL INVENTORY.

Every farmer should take an annual inventory. At the beginning of the year is the logical time. Instead of guessing at the profits of the past year, says the American Farmer, see how much new machinery, what equipment and new buildings were added during the year. A new automobile, a wheat drill, a washing machine, a tractor, a waste and fresh water system, a manure spreader, a lime grinder—any one or a number of these may have been purchased during the past year. Not only can one estimate and determine the profits of the past year, but he can also map out what is needed in the future, what implements and machinery will be required. The wise farmer is thinking all ready of the coming season and is taking an inventory as one of the first steps.

Our books on gardens and garden planting may suggest improvements you have not thought of for your garden. Take a few minutes to look them over.

What is your hobby? What is your recreation? Something has been written about it whatever it may be. Won't you be interested in getting the other man's views?

Was your son or daughter one of the 112 children who spent an afternoon or evening reading in the library last week? The library habit is a good one. Why not encourage your children to develop it and set them an example by developing it yourself.

Religion and Politics.

Preachers of the gospel frequently urge individual salvation as an answer to the social problem. Let me state with utmost emphasis that no individualistic spiritual experience can lift you out of the social and economic relations of the social system in which you live. There is no religious experience, no spiritual vision of God, as proposed by mystics, or Methodists, or Christian Scientists, or Salvationists, or any sort which can release you from the grasp of economic relations.

I impeach capitalism as the supreme anti-Christ of modern times. I take my stand on the life and spirit and teaching of Jesus and declare that capitalism is a menace to every purpose and program of the Christ.

Any man or church which professes to offer the word of God to the souls of men and yet leaves the American plutocracy in the saddle on the backs of the people is deluding the people. Any church in this city, or any city, which at this late date is still at peace with capitalism is a moral and spiritual tomb. The socialization of industry—democracy in fundamental equipment of society—in short, Socialism, is the logic of Christianity. And here I took my stand long years ago.—J. Stitt Wilson.

WAY-MICH-SHIN CAMP FIRE GIRLS

Entertained by Mrs. N. A. Shores on Their Regular Meeting Night.

Has a Membership of Sixteen—Delicious Refreshments Served by the Hostess.

The Way-Mich-Shin Camp Fire Girls were entertained at the home of Mrs. N. A. Shores on Wednesday evening, April 15th. At this time they had their ceremonial meeting, known as the council fire. The council fire is the important meeting of the month. It is at this meeting that the work of the month is brought to a focus. Honors are awarded and ranks bestowed.

The fire on the hearth was lighted and the girls entered the room to the accompaniment of soft music, making the hand-sign of the fire at the same time the guardian made it to recognize her presence.

When all the girls had taken their places in a circle about the fire they repeated in unison the "Ode to the Fire." Fire is the symbol of the organization, for around it the first homes were built. Camp fire stands not only for the home, but also for the genuineness and simplicity of the out-of-doors. The sun is used as a general symbol for fire.

The candle lighting or Wohelo ceremony followed. Three candles had been placed in the center of the circle, one standing for Work, one for Health, and one for Love. These were lighted by Frances Brenner, Irene Auld and Margaret Saunders, who, while lighting the candles, repeated a verse appropriate to the symbol for which their candle stood.

At the completion of this ceremony "Wohelo fur Aye" was sung, followed by roll call, which was responded to by the word "Kolah," which means friend. All sixteen members were present on this occasion.

Next came the count of the last ceremonial meeting, which was held at the home of Mrs. Jas. Saunders. This had been written in poetry by Catherine Harsha in the same meter as Longfellow's "Hiawatha." Katherine is recognized by all the Camp Fire Girls as the Way-Mich-Shin poetess.

The following is the count:

"When the nights were wild and stormy,
Moons were wan and pale with hunger,
When all shut their doors in refuge
From the howling of the east wind,
Way-Mich-Shin, our much loved Camp
Fire,
Sole from wind and storm protected,
And the warmth of health and loving Blending with the golden fire light,
First around our fire we gathered,
With the sounds of soft sweet music
One by one we took our places,
Greeting our dear Guardian, Tawa,
Greeting the great sacred fire flames
Which stand for the mighty spirit.
Then each heart grew peacefully solemn
As the candles each were lighted,
One by one, and three in number,
Lit in token of Wohelo.
One for work and health and loving,
Lit to move our depth of feeling
For the motto which we stand for.
So we rose and to our muses
Chanted "Wohelo forever."
Then as silence filled the chamber Told us each of some small kindness
Which we did for love of helping,
Love of making joy and sunshine.
Dwell we long upon these titles,
Titles which endure and strengthen
Till without them life is empty.
As our fire flames slowly dying
Made long shadows on the hearthplace,
Showing us of time's impatience,
Each arose from around the circle;
Each one guided by our Council.
Left we there the dying embers
Showing where in loving kinship Met Way-Mich-Shin, our much loved camp fire.

After the girls had mentioned acts of kindness that had not received proper recognition or appreciation by them, each girl resolved to do better henceforward.

Dora Martin entertained the Camp Fire by relating the Indian legend "Minatohaw's Hunting," which explains the reason for there being some Sioux blood mixed with the Cree Indians.

The honors won by the girls were read aloud, and the heads which are the symbols of attainment were awarded.

At the close of the meeting Grandma Shores served the girls with delicious refreshments, before which the Camp Fire Girls' blessing was very beautifully and impressively sung.

The Way-Mich-Shin Camp is an active body and expects to do some hard work in the next few months. Their immediate undertaking is the sale of Camp Fire Girls' Cocoa. The girls have already received a number of orders for this.

The members of the Way-Mich-Shin Camp are:

Margaret Saunders, Dora Martin,
Katherine Harsha, Irene Auld,
Dorothy Beattie, Vivian Bull,
Lillian MacNeill, Olive Nixon,
Leone MacNeill, Alice Dixon,
Frances Brenner, Caroline Bull,
Alice Schweitzer, Mudge Kilbe,
Thelma Grady, Iva Babcock.

Temperance

(Conducted by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.)

ON THE DOWNGRADE.

For a decade while prohibition was steadily spreading, the statistics of the federal government showed the manufacturers of intoxicants paying taxes on a constantly enlarging quantity of their products. And it surely did make a hard nut for a prohibitionist to crack—to explain the reason why the liquor trade got better while saloons were all the time growing fewer.—The Continent.

Not such a hard nut when it is known that all liquor on which the government tax has been paid is officially reported as "consumed," and that during the decade referred to large quantities were forced out of the bonded warehouses by the time light and stored in private warehouses awaiting a constantly decreasing demand.

"But," continues the Continent, with pertinent emphasis, "whatever was the real secret of that paradox, the necessity of explaining it has now quite gone by. It is a fact no more. The business of brewing and distilling is at last on a toboggan slide which nobody can deny. The report of the commissioner of internal revenue for 1913, just issued, shows a decline in both beer making and whiskey making, which demonstrates that prohibition is now prohibiting with a vengeance. The 1914 report already showed some shortage in the whiskey business; from the year before there was a decline of 16,000,000 gallons. But the new report proves how falling bodies are accelerated as they fall, for the decline in the year just past is 41,000,000 gallons—from 181,000,000 to 140,000,000.

"Even more significant is the recorded item that within the year 1913 distilleries quit business out of 743 such institutions in the United States. And meanwhile the quantity of beer made in this country decreased from 66,000,000 barrels to 59,000,000. This is, for the brewers, their first setback, but it furnishes sufficient notice that they are ticketed for the same downgrade that their distilling brethren are embarked on. The cry is 'Going down!' for the whole crew of 'em."

ALCOHOL AND PNEUMONIA.

Dr. W. A. Evans conducts a department, "How to Keep Well," in Chicago Daily Tribune. Giving advice recently concerning measures for the prevention of colds and pneumonia he said:

"Now is the time to get on the water wagon and to stay there. Whiskey and every other form of alcoholic drink is a pneumonia hegger. Alcohol fowers the fighting defenses of the human body against all forms of disease, but especially against pneumonia. This has been proved by careful scientific tests. It is a universally recognized clinical fact. This is one of the points on which the laboratory men and the practicing physicians are in full accord. If an ordinary man gets pneumonia chances are three to one that he will get well. Whiskey drinkers who get pneumonia do not have a three-to-one chance for life."

RUSSIA DRY FOR ALL TIME.

In a debate before the Russian duma the minister of finance, M. Bark, made this significant declaration:

"I deem it necessary to declare categorically that all suspicions as to the government's any intention of resuming the state sale of liquors are unfounded. I declare categorically that the government will encourage temperance after the war, also, and that any return to the old state of affairs is impossible. Proof of this intention is the fact that the government is now engaged in drawing up a bill, on lines suggested by forty-five members of the duma, for the maintenance of temperance for all time. This bill already has met with the sympathy of the entire council of ministers, and vodka, in accordance with the czar's wish, as expressed to me, will be totally prohibited forever."

BRINGS MORBID CHANGES.

That indulgence in intoxicating beverages, even to a degree short of the conditions of intemperance and inebriety, is calculated to bring about morbid changes in the human body, and to lead to mental and physical deterioration, is a fact which is only too patent to every practitioner of medicine.—The Lancet.

EFFECT IN NEW DRY STATES.

While some of the merchants in the newly dry states are loath to admit as yet that increased business is due to prohibition all agree that at least the expected calamities have not materialized, unless the loss in police and court business can be considered a calamity.

SOLUTION OF LIQUOR QUESTION.

There is but one solution of the liquor question, and that is the national extermination of the traffic in alcohol. It has already been condemned as an enemy to health and to the home, and it is not indicted for high treason because it paralyzes the patriotism of citizens in the time of war.—William J. Bryan.

WASTE OF TIME.

There is no use wasting time on any young man who drinks liquor.—Andrew Carnegie.

Suffrage Notes

The question of equal suffrage is again to be voted on in New York. Just five months after woman suffrage was declared "dead forever" in the eastern states is a result of the election last November, the resolution providing for re-submission passed both houses of the New York legislature by an overwhelming majority.

He. "There are two periods in a man's life when he never understands a woman."

She. "Indeed! and when are they?"

He. "Before and after marriage."

Philadelphia Evening Ledger.

And yet there are some men who think they understand women well enough to represent them on election day.—Woman's Journal.

The women of Cudillac are given credit by the wets for keeping Wexford county dry. The wets were sure of victory until the women turned out in large numbers and went to the polls to plead with the voters to vote dry. If these women had only had the ballot do you think they would have used it? Safeguarding the home by indirect influence, "making bricks without straw," is the heavy task of unfranchised women.

10,000 circulars are being prepared by the Denver Chamber of Commerce to send to Iowa to help in the suffrage campaign. These circulars will contain data based on government reports showing the "prosperity conditions" in suffrage Colorado.

A member of the Babson Statistical organization, of Boston, Massachusetts, says: "Those who oppose woman suffrage on the ground that it would tend to break legislation are generally those who believe that child labor in the south and elsewhere is a good thing and that legislation opposing it would be 'frenk' and socialist."

The Chicago Herald says editorially: "As for the record of Illinois women on liquor questions it has been appalling in many communities—so to the liquor dealers."

"We become more and more convinced," says the Rural New Yorker, "that the big question of modern farming is how to keep the girl on the farm contented and enterprising. The boy will stay there if the girl is satisfied."

"DUNN—this sort of nonsense has got to stop!" said Stamford Stone, with a grin meaning in his tone. "Every time these Larigans escape from your traps, I'm beginning to think that you forget that I'm in a position to enforce the orders I give you."

"Well—I got an idea," said Dunn. "It looks good. Ben's sore—he's afraid he won't get any more money. He thinks Tom Larigan put over something pretty raw, and he's got it in for him. So here's the lay out. Ben says that if he can get into the Larigans' flat he can fix things so that anyone who goes inside the front door will never come out again! I say—It's worth while. Let him make good."

Dunn went off to find Ben. And an hour or so later he telephoned to Stone.

"He's been there and you never saw a prettier job!" he reported, enthusiastically. "He's got the whole place wired—and every wire leads to some explosive!"

"Fine work!" said Stone. "I believe you've got them this time, Dunn. Well—we got Dudley Larigan when he was district attorney of New York, and it would be a strange thing if we couldn't put these two sons of his out of the running."

Stone was smiling as he made his way to the home of Roger Maxwell, head of the insurance trust and the father of Dorothy Maxwell, the girl whom both Stone and Bruce Larigan loved. Dorothy alone knew the truth concerning Stone, and though she loved Bruce, and hated Stone, she was constrained to silence because she knew that her father was in Stone's power; that he was deeply involved in the criminal machinations of the gang that the Larigans had sworn to run to earth. Stone had threatened, more than once, that if she betrayed him he would see to it that her father was ruined, and she had, therefore, had to be content with doing what she could in secret to help Bruce. And in this, for some time, she had had the aid of Kitty Rockford, her best friend, whose betrothal to Tom Larigan Dorothy expected to be announced at any time.

Dorothy saw Stone come in; she knew that already a number of other men, prominent in the Graft trust were in the house.

"We'd better keep our ears open, Kitty," she told her cousin. "I think those men are planning some new deviltry."

"I heard Mr. Welsner talking about interference with his business," said Kitty. "He said that if any outsiders came skulking around the coal mines they'd better look out—that there was trouble enough there already without bringing in any more from outside."

"They'll talk in the library," said Dorothy. "If we all in there now and go into the little alcove, we can curl up in that big settee. If they find us we can pretend to be asleep."

"They put their plan into execution, and as they expected, they soon heard the voices of the members of the syndicate—the survivors of the original fifteen. Stone spoke first.

"Welsner—you needn't worry," he said. "I saw Larigan just now—met him as he came from the station. He's taken his mother and his brother down to the country. He explained to me that he wanted them to be where it was safe and quiet, because he had to go down to Pennsylvania."

"And you'll keep him away, I suppose," said Welsner, with a sneer. "Me—I don't trust you or your arrangements, Stone! You've had plenty of chances at these Larigans, and you've missed up every one of them! Let him come, say I'll have ways of taking care of him if he turns up!"

The two girls couldn't hear all of the conversation. It was Welsner's voice, heavy and powerful, that was most plainly audible; Stone, from a more highly developed sense of caution, pitched his tone low, so that only an occasional word that he uttered was clear and distinct. And so the two girls did not realize that Tom would be in peril even before he left New York; they thought that for his danger would begin to be acute when he reached the coal fields. As soon as they could they stole out and managed to get away unnoticed.

"Suppose we went down?" suggested Dorothy. "Down to Pennsylvania? I don't believe Tom realizes the dangers he will face down there—and we might save his life! I'm sure we could be of some use."

"I'm willing," said Kitty, eagerly. Tom, meanwhile, had gone nuzzling toward his flat. He meant to accept Stone's invitation. Stone could, he knew, give him valuable information as to conditions in the coal fields, and he had offered to do so. He did not see the spy who lurked in the lower hallway of his apartment house; it was with the utmost unconcern that he inserted his key in the door. He stopped for a moment, holding the door open with his foot, and bent down to stroke a cat that had rubbed against his leg. The cat, he guessed, must belong to his neighbors. Then he straightened up, and pushed the door open. But just then a mouse ran across the doormat; the cat sprang after it, in hot pursuit. Instantly there was a blinding flash; a deafening roar, and a great explosion hurled Tom half way down the stairs. He was bruised and shaken, but he was not seriously hurt; no bones were broken. And, even as he picked himself up the spy, hearing the explosion, ran off to report that he had walked into the trap.

Stone was appalled and astonished when Tom came, as he had promised to do. But he was able to conceal his astonishment and his dismay.

"You must spend the night," he told Tom. "You can get an early morning train—you might as well have one more night of comfort. I'm afraid you'll find it pretty rough down in the coal fields. The hotels are poor, and everything is upset and disorganized by the strike, so that it will be even worse than usual."

Tom agreed, and Stone, after Tom had retired, sent for Dunn.

"He's fooled us again," he said, bitterly. "I don't know how—and I don't care! But—I've arranged a last chance for you! He's in this apartment, asleep! You can get through the window—and this time take no chances!"

"Suppose I'm caught—it's murder you're asking me to do!" gasped Dunn, growing pale.

"You've done it before—and I still have the proofs!" said Stone, fiercely. "Which would you rather do—have me hand these proofs to the prosecutor, with the certainty that you'll be convicted, or take the chance that you won't be caught? Who is going to catch you? There's no one to give the alarm except myself!"

Dunn hesitated. But he knew that Stone held the whip hand.

"I'll do it," said Dunn, gloomily.

"All right," said Stone. "There's the way you can get in."

And at once he went downstairs and notified the hall boy that he had seen a burglar, trying to get into his room!

Trenchery was the very breath of life to Stone.

"I caught a burglar for you, Mr. Stone," said Tom, when he saw Stone returning, with two or three of the employees of the house. "He's tied up in there!"

had missed his vocation; anyone who had seen him then, and had known, too, what his real plan would have been, would have been convinced of that. In him a great actor was lost to the stage. He concealed his fury, his dismay at the sight of Tom Larigan, who had once more escaped. Tom had been too much for Dunn, that was all.

Down in the coal country Dorothy and Kitty saw much of the misery inevitably attendant upon a strike. The miners were grim and determined; certain elements among them had begun to riot and to try to destroy the property of the mining companies. The militia and the state police suppressed all violence ruthlessly, but the temper of the men was growing uglier, and there could be no doubt that, sooner or later, they would organize and seek to settle the matters in a pitched battle.

But the two girls, although they saw much that was of vital interest, did not, for a long time, discover where Tom Larigan was, nor what he was doing. Tom, as a matter of fact, knew that he could not hope to accomplish much unless he was able to discredit Welsner. It was Welsner's claim that the shortage of coal, and the resultant high prices in the cities, were chargeable to the strikers, and this had done much to induce public opinion against the men. Tom, on the other hand, was sure that Welsner was resorting to an old trick, and holding back great reserves of coal.

So he was making his hunt off the beaten path, looking daily, for some evidence that would support his belief, since he knew that in guess, no matter how close it might prove to be to the truth, would be useless against such enemies.

And one day, on a specially built sliding, he found a long string of coal cars, fully loaded. There was proof of the most glaring sort that he had been right, for, across the track, a shanty had been built by tracklayers—right in the path of the loaded cars! Tom began at once to take notes and photographs and in this occupation Welsner surprised him.

"Who are you? What right have you got to come bustling in?" asked Tom, angrily, when Welsner began to abuse him.

"I'll tell you who I am—and in a hurry!" said Welsner, with an oath. "I'm Welsner—the boss of this whole country, and don't you forget it!"

Tom's anger was too strong for his discretion. In a moment he and Welsner were grappling, in a primitive, savage combat. Tom, with a fair field, could have killed his opponent, but some of Welsner's henchmen hurried to his assistance, and in a few minutes Tom, unconscious and bound, was thrown into the coal shanty. Welsner, raging, went up the hill along which the sliding ran, and stopped, at the top, where the first car stood. Suddenly an evil light came into his eyes.

"He wants the coal moved, does he?" he snarled. "We'll move it shall be!"

At once he sprang to the car, uncoupled it, and began to try to move it, so that, getting on the grade, it would roll down upon the shanty by the force of gravity.

And at the same moment Dorothy Maxwell, who chanced to be within hearing, understood his plan, and suspecting that Tom was in the shanty, ran desperately toward it. The car gained momentum. Dorothy saw that she would be too late. But Kitty Rockford, nearer the bottom of the hill, understood Dorothy's frantic gestures.

She ran toward the shanty, not knowing what she would see, but realizing that there was some danger for some one inside since she could see the car rushing down. And, just in time, she dragged Tom outside and a moment later the car plowed through the frail structure, smashing it to crushing waste.

The two girls freed Tom. And then they saw a group of men gathered on the hill about half way up. Tom went up; he returned sober faced in a few moments.

"Welsner's foot caught as he started the car, caught in the brake," he said. "He was dragged along and killed."

Tom could not aver much of the trouble that followed, but Welsner's death and the government action that followed Tom's report brought about a speedy settlement of the strike. And one more name was crossed off the original list of fifteen.

THE FIRST SKYSCRAPER.

It Was Designed by a Savoy Architect Three Centuries Ago.

Credit for the first skyscraper built in this country is generally conceded to Chicago. It was built in the "loop district" of that city in 1880, from plans by Holabird & Roche. The first example of lofty building in New York city was the structure at 50 Broadway, designed by Bradford Lee Gilbert in 1888. A few years later both these wonders became insignificant and practically forgotten because they were so greatly outdone by succeeding skyscrapers. But these were not the initial efforts, for a skyscraper was designed nearly three centuries ago, many generations before the discovery of the steel cage system of this day.

Jacques Perret, an architect of Chambery, Savoy, is the accredited author of plans for an eleven story building, 361 feet in height, which must have had twice the space between floors, for today eleven stories are crowded within a height of 150 feet. Perret's building was planned to be 100 feet long and 140 feet wide, with supporting walls twelve feet thick at the base.

While never executed, the project of Perret in many ways was a remarkable prophetic vision. Evidently it was intended for dwelling purposes, for in describing the project he wrote, "This great and excellent edifice can accommodate comfortably 500 people."—New York Post.

INDELIBLE MARKING.

Advantages of Using Just Ordinary Blueprint Solution.

There are many occasions upon which it is necessary to mark linen or wearing apparel indelibly with one's name and address, yet the ink sold for this purpose is not always convenient to use or attractive in appearance, says the American Boy.

A very good substitute is the ordinary blueprint powder, sold by any photographic dealer, a thick solution being made and used just as the ordinary ink would be. Instead of fixing this by the use of a hot iron, it is made permanent simply by washing in several changes of cold water. When thoroughly fixed the writing will appear in a very pretty shade of blue.

You prefer, a rubber stamp may be used instead of a pen. In this case a little glycerine should be mixed with the solution, which should be spread upon a clean cloth or blotter. This is then used as an inking pad for the stamp.

Aside from its convenience marking with blue print solution has the advantage that traces of the writing or any stains caused by it may be removed if desired by the application of a solution of tannin.

Gagadig Gigadab.

There was a quaint old man in Manchester, England, who for many years went by the unique name of Gagadig Gigadab. His original name was John Smith, and for many years he brooded over the possibilities of mistaken identity involved in it. The name figured frequently in criminal records, and he became alarmingly apprehensive lest he might be confused with some of the bad John Smiths. At last what he feared so much actually happened. One morning the papers reported the arrest of an accountant in a bank for embezzlement, and through some blunder of the reporter the identity of the embezzler was confused with the subject of this article, who was also a bank accountant. Then and there he determined to assume a name like unto no other ever borne by mortal man. And in Gagadig Gigadab most people will agree that he succeeded in so doing.

Excitement.

People who easily get excited don't usually live nearly so long as people who keep calm. Excitement, in fact, wastes the vitality and affects one's health to a very great extent. This is true, too, of all who seek excitement, whether physical or mental. Excitement makes the pulse beat above the ordinary rate, and one's reserve of energy is used up so much the quicker. Occasional excitement, however, is very good for one's health, especially where the pulse is slow, but the natural condition of the body should be one of calmness and regularity.

Modern Efficiency.

"But she did it to save time."

"How's that?"

WAITING FOR WEATHER.

"Clean-Up" Postponed Until the Rainfall Ceases.

In last week's Courier a notice was printed, naming Friday, April 21, as a general Clean-up Day for the village, but owing to the inclement weather, it has been postponed to Tuesday of this week, and Tuesday being the same sort of weather, caused another postponement, and we are unable at this time to name the day.

However, the committee in charge desire to ask the citizens not to wait for the general Clean-up Day for the purpose of picking up all rubbish and waste about their buildings and yards, but to do the work as soon as the weather will permit, putting all property in respectable shape for the coming summer, and when the general Clean-up Day is named, all will turn out to work on the streets and public property for their betterment.

Let's all pull together and make Ellsworth the cleanest little town anywhere in the state of Michigan. Last year we did well—let's make it better. A little paint and some hard work will do the trick. We believe this county to be the prettiest in the state—we should make other people believe so too.

By the Committee in Charge.

For Treasurer of Antrim County.

Robert E. Morrow respectfully asks the consideration and support of Antrim county voters at the Republican primary August 29, 1916. Pol. Adv. 144—pd

SEND FREE CHARTS

Can Be Obtained From Mt. Pleasant State Normal School.

In order to assist in the better teaching of agriculture in the rural schools and in the high school, the department of agriculture of the Central State Normal, Mt. Pleasant, Michigan, is prepared to send out a series of large charts prepared by the International Harvester Company. Each set of charts shows in a graphic way the essential features of various agricultural topics as corn, alfalfa, soil, live stock, dairy, oats and woods.

There are fourteen sheets in each set and each sheet is five feet by six feet. These charts are especially interesting and valuable and will be sent to schools without any cost, except the expense of transportation one way. In a circuit of rural schools, the charts may be carried by the farmers from one district to another without any cost. Commissioners, teachers and others are urged to form circuits and thus assist in the work for better agriculture.

School Commissioner's Notes

Ten real school visits and seven schoolroom calls made this week.

Clarion has a ventilating problem to figure out. It will probably be a new furnace with registers in the partition eight feet from the floor replacing the old floor cast fans.

The Deer Lake teacher is happy to learn from her director that her boys and girls may have new seats next year.

The school district on East Chandler hill has the biggest water supply problem in the county. Their well is three hundred feet deep and their windmill failed to give satisfaction. A cement cistern with a siphon hauled regularly has been tried, but it is difficult to keep it clean. They are now debating on trying a gasoline engine with which to pump.

Clarion has purchased some masts from Landseer and Maave.

Miss Margaret Stroud of the Undine school is now taking 7th and 8th grade work and has not been absent or tardy for eight years.

Twenty-six more Corn Club contestants from Eveline township on Friday the 21st.

The Star School has just had the first closing day exercises in its history. Salutatorian and valedictorian both gave splendid addresses. The recitations were well chosen and well rendered. They called it "Standard Plate" day and had the commissioner there to talk on that subject. A big potluck dinner had made all happy before the program began.

Pleasant Valley is to have a box social on the 29th. They plan on a standard school program with variations.

See notice of the eighth grade examination in another column.

If all schools had the recommended texts for uniform books every teacher would profit the second year from her first year's experience with the nature of what she is to teach. That's just one argument. It saves time.

There will be a big crowd of Charlevoix county teachers in the state normals this summer. Three cheers for the professional spirit of the teacher who wants training and goes after it.

Perfect attendance for spring term gives the student a free ticket to the fair. Four hundred certificates for those not absent or tardy for four months. The supply in this office is gone but more are ordered. If your school lets out before the new order gets here just send in the names of the boys and girls deserving them, so that the commissioner may send them their certificates when the order arrives.

In a thick forest the saplings are weak and slender. What is nature's lesson to the school room?

Bread Leavened With Snow.

The use of fresh dry snow as a leavening agent is not new, but the way in which it acts seems to be misunderstood to some extent. The popular explanation is that the raising of the dough is due to ammonia in the snow. As a matter of fact, snow contains but a very slight amount of free ammonia, probably not more than one part to a million. This quantity is, of course, by far too small to cause any expansion of the dough. The leavening action is due to the entrapped air in the snow. The air expands on heating to several times its original volume, thus expanding the dough. Steam is formed at the same time and aids to the rising process.—Exchange.

the lungs, then the voluntary muscles with their controlling nerve centers, and finally come the brain cells which have to do with the attaining of knowledge, followed last of all by those centers which control the moral and spiritual development.

"It is an unvarying law of nature that the cells last formed are the first to be destroyed. We know that in people addicted to the use of alcoholic drinks, it is the moral side of their nature which suffers first, then their mentality, and so on down the line in varying degrees, according to the amount consumed. In children of alcoholic parents the same thing may happen before the child is born, and in this way we may account for many of our child criminals, imbeciles and insane, and in many cases the poison has gotten in its work to such an extent that the child is found dead at its birth.

"These may sound like alarming facts, but talk alone will not accomplish anything. Let us all do all we can to clean up our city, to as far as possible, make the environment of our children what it should be, and to make our Union a power for good in the community."

BILLY MILLER DROWNED FRIDAY

ACCIDENT OCCURRED BETWEEN 2:30 AND DARK

Body Found by Searching Party at 11:36 P. M., Lying Off Wilbur's Dock near Majestic.

Little Billie Miller, age six years, five months and twenty-five days, was drowned Friday afternoon some time between the hours of 2:30 and 6:00 p. m. The accident took place in Round Lake off Wilbur's dock in the rear of the Majestic theatre. Just how the drowning happened no one knows. The child was last seen by his mother when he came home from school at two-thirty. He left the house immediately, and when he failed to come home for supper a search was made for him. He was not found about the streets, the home of friends or at the theatre. Finally a suggestion was made that the child might have fallen into Round Lake. About 11:30 Dick O'Neill, Charles Jefferies and B. A. Herman took searchlights and started to search along Wilbur's dock. In less than fifteen minutes the body was found in the water, face upward, he having slipped from the dock to his death.

Pikepoles were used to raise the body to the surface and up to the dock. The body was taken to See's undertaking rooms and prepared for burial.

Billie was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Milo Miller and was born September 2nd, 1909. He was a bright little fellow and was known to everyone in the city. This entire community join in extending their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved parents.

The funeral services were held from the Egbert Carpenter home on Clinton street Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Christian Science Society took charge of the burial services. The many floral tributes displayed show the esteem in which the little fellow was held by the entire community.

Big Catch of Whitefish.

Saturday was a big day for the fish tug W. J. Parmalee. At one lift the crew in charge of John O'Neill, Jr., secured 97,500 pounds of whitefish valued at $1300. This is ample proof that the fishing industry in Lake Michigan still has life and is not dying out, as has been reported.

BUY BUILDING SITE.

First Church of Christ, Scientist, Purchase Valuable Property.

With the expectation of building a suitable place of worship within the next three years or so, the controlling board of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, closed a deal last week whereby they acquire a 77 foot frontage on Clinton street, which includes the house and lot known as the Hawkins property.

Since the organization of the church in 1909 it has had a wonderful growth in membership. Originally there were nine charter members, it then being known as the Christian Science Society. At the semi-annual business meeting, January 3rd, 1916, the name was changed to that by which it is now known. While the plans for the future are not as yet fully matured, it is safe to say that when the church they are expecting to erect is finished it will be a credit not only to its members but to the city as well.

ALL MAIL BOXES MUST BE SAME

ANOTHER NEW RULING FROM POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT.

Those Erected After July 1st Must Conform to Designs Approved by Postal Authorities.

Mail boxes on rural and other routes erected after July 1st, 1916, must comply with the specifications and designs approved by the government, and an attempt will be made to standardize all of these boxes in the country, according to the announcement received by Postmaster Finucan this week.

The notification reads as follows: "The department has designed two sizes of mail boxes for use on rural and other routes after July 1, 1916, including a small size for letters and ordinary mail and a large size for all mail, including parcel post."

"Patrons may use either size and will not be required to discard boxes in use July 1 while they remain serviceable, but all boxes erected after that date must be the new type. Standard boxes as designed are not patentable and there will be no restriction upon the right to manufacture and sell them, after approval, in accordance with the postal laws and regulations."

"Almost every conceivable style of mail box is now being used by patrons of the rural mail service, but a very few are large enough to receive even the smallest parcel post packages. As a result the rural carrier is compelled to lay the package on the box, alongside a tree near the box or in some handy location where the patron may easily discover it. But it is obvious that this hazardous arrangement cannot be satisfactory. The elements, including rain, snow and wind, combat the carrier's best efforts, and the contents of the packages are liable to be destroyed, even if the packages themselves are not blown away by the wind."

MRS. M'CARTNEY BURIED SATURDAY

HAD BEEN RESIDENT OF CHARLEVOIX SINCE 1886.

Ill Since Christmas—Died at Home of Daughter Wednesday—Survived by Four Children.

The remains of Mrs. Harriet Alma McCartney were laid to rest in Brookside cemetery last Saturday afternoon. The services were held from the house, Rev. Quinton Walker, officiating, assisted by Rev. L. H. Manning of Petoskey and Rev. C. E. Taggart of this city. Mrs. McCartney had been a lifelong member of the Methodist church.

Harriet Abbott was born in Webster, New York, October 20, 1840. On September 26, 1869, she was united in marriage to Rev. William H. McCartney at Webster. To this union four children were born, all of whom survive. In the fall of 1882, she came to Michigan and settled on a farm near Norwood, living here 4 years. In September, 1886, she came to Charlevoix where she resided up to the time of her death. Mr. McCartney died May 18, 1904. Mrs. McCartney was the youngest child of a family of twelve. A brother, Rev. H. O. Abbott, of Webster, New York, and a sister, Mrs. F. R. Montgomery, of Buffalo, New York, survive.

Mrs. McCartney had been ailing since last Christmas, when she was critically ill with pneumonia. She being unable to rally from the effects of this sickness, death ensued. SHAKESPEARE TERCENTENARY CELEBRATION OBSERVED BY LOCAL STUDY CLUB.

Members and Husbands Entertained at Six O'clock Supper by Its Executive Committee.

The Shakespeare Study Club and their husbands were royally entertained by the executive committee, Mesdames Paddock, Crouter and Crane, at a six o'clock dinner on Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Paddock.

The table was a beautiful sight with its unusual width and decorations. The place cards were hand-painted characters from Shakespeare, with the quotations applicable to the guests, in some cases reminding all of the characters as identified with them through some play formerly enacted. Music was furnished by the young sons of the home with a Victrola.

After the dinner, the president, Mrs. Paddock, announced the attendance of all to see the film of "The Merchant of Venice," which the committee had arranged to have given at the Majestic on the 300th anniversary of Shakespeare's demise.

The father who was asked by his son "Say, dad, who was Shylock?" and answered "What! don't know who Shylock was; what do I send you to Sunday school for?" may now send him to the movies to see the "Money Lender." The only thing lacking was Portia's heavenly eloquence in her plea for mercy, and Shylock's tragic and impassioned plea for revenge. The many characters and interweaving of so many several plots were well shown, and the club dispersed after a very enjoyable evening.

A BEAUTIFUL SIGHT.

Wonderful Display of Aurora Borealis Last Thursday Evening.

What was probably the most wonderful display of Aurora Borealis was seen Thursday evening from about 7:30 o'clock until late in the night. A beautiful path of light extended across the heavens from east to west, growing brighter as it reached the zenith. During the late evening there were great bursts of white light following one another in quick succession across the northern heavens, and at one time a beautiful corona was seen. The northern heavens at about eleven o'clock were a perfect glory of waving, shooting lights.

MAY FIVE ARBOR AND BIRD DAY

DAY SET ASIDE FOR GENERAL OBSERVANCE IN STATE.

Gov. Ferris Requests Schools to Plant Trees and Hold Appropriate Exercises.

Governor Woodbridge N. Ferris has issued a proclamation setting May 5 as Arbor and Bird Day, the proclamation reading as follows:

Long years ago a loyal Michigan citizen planted hundreds of maples on either side of the highway fronting his large farm. These trees are now large and beautiful. These trees did not affect the productivity of his farm. When he planted these trees he had in mind the thousands of men, women and children who would receive real joy from his gift to this "main traveled road." Some day both city and country will come to appreciate the importance of tree planting along the highways, on the hillsides, in yards and in parks.

Trees without birds would get lonesome. Trees and shrubs are the natural homes of many of our birds. These winged creatures are men's best friends. They not only destroy millions of destructive insects, but they appeal to man's sense of beauty in their plumage, in their song and in their graceful movements.

The trees and birds teach "mutual aid," teach a universal poetry, teach the beneficence of the Father of us all.

Therefore I, Woodbridge N. Ferris, Governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby designate Friday, May 5, 1916, as Arbor and Bird Day and do request that this day be observed by all schools, public and private, and other educational institutions by the planting of trees for beautifying school grounds and parks, and by conducting suitable exercises for promoting the spirit of protection to trees and birds.

Remains Brought Here.

The remains of Christine Neilson, who died on Garden Island, March 12, were brought to this city Monday for burial, interment taking place Tuesday morning at nine o'clock, Rev. C. E. Taggart officiating. Deceased was 75 years of age and the father of Mrs. Matt. Jensen. The remains were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Matt. Jensen, a brother and Mr. and Mrs. Northcott.

DEATH CALLS

A. A. HANSHEW

RESIDENT OF CHARLEVOIX FOR OVER 22 YEARS.

Was R. F. D. Carrier on Route No. 3 for Over Ten Years—Funeral Services Thursday.

The death of Alonzo A. Hanshaw, for the past 22 years a resident of this city, occurred at his home on West Antrim street Monday morning about 5 o'clock, after a period of poor health lasting over a year.

Deceased was born in Tipton county, Indiana, in 1858, and was 58 years of age when death called him. He was married 33 years ago to Miss Eva Liscum. To this union six children were born, four daughters—Mrs. Ward Bennett, Bessie, Florence and Edith—and two sons, Clarence and Justin, all of whom, with the mother, survive him.

Lon, as he was usually called, was well known in this section. During the early days of his residence here he sailed on the lakos following this until about ten years ago, when the R. F. D. routes were established. He was appointed the first carrier on Route No. 3, continuing this until during the fall of last year, when his health compelled him to turn it over to his son Clarence, who had been appointed substitute carrier.

At the recent city election he was the choice of Republican candidates for the office of city treasurer, but the condition of his health was such that he was unable to fulfill the duties of the office. He was an industrious, honest and public-spirited citizen, and his death has caused deep sorrow among his many friends, by whom he was held in high regard. He was a member of the I. O. O. F. and Encampment, also of the MacKenzie order.

Funeral services will be held from the home on Antrim street, Thursday, at 10:00 a. m., in charge of the First Church of Christ, Scientist. Members of the I. O. O. F. will act as escort to the cemetery, where the regular ritualistic services are to be held.

MARRIED AT ST. LOUIS.

Popular Young Marion Township Farmer Married April 24th.

Jay Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Adams of Marion township, and Miss Alice G. Shockey of St. Louis, Missouri, were quietly married by Rev. Carroll, dean of the Episcopal cathedral in that city, on the evening of Monday, April 24th.

The groom is one of the best-known and progressive young farmers in this section. He was recently elected supervisor of his home township, showing in a great measure his popularity among the residents of that section. The bride is a resident of St. Louis, Missouri, and is well known in this city. The approaching marriage was kept a secret and when known caused considerable surprise among their friends.

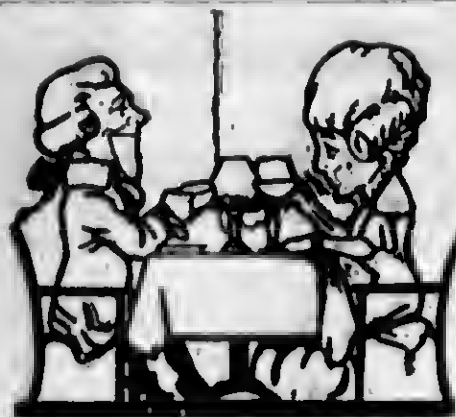

Mr. and Mrs. Adams returned to Charlevoix on Wednesday afternoon of last week and are now at home to their many friends at the Adams home south of the city. Congratulations and best wishes are extended by their numerous friends.

MANY FAVOR CHANGE IN LAW.

New Dog Tax Law a Welcome One to Owners of Valuable Dogs.

The change in the law relative to dog tax is welcomed by nearly all dog owners who think anything of their dogs. Under the former law it was almost impossible to enforce a dog tax, and consequently there are hundreds of dogs, worthless curs for the most part, running around that otherwise would have been put out of the way with no loss to the community. With a bunch of mongrel curs pestering a community someone usually tries to do away with some of them, with the usual consequence that really valuable dogs in the community get poisoned or shot. The man who owns a good dog won't hesitate to pay the small tax necessary to keep him out of the clutches of the dog catcher.

WHAT CATARRH IS

It has been said that every third person has catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that nasal catarrh often indicates a general weakness of the body, and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little, if any good.

To correct catarrh you should treat its cause by carrying your blood with the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a bulldog tonic, free from alcohol or any harmful drugs. Try it. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. Y.

Suffrage Notes

Many Charlevoix people will remember the wonderfully inspiring institute address and after dinner speech given three years ago by Dr. Fess of Ohio. Dr. Fess is now a member of Congress, and he said recently: "I believe that woman suffrage is right, and therefore I believe it will succeed. I am in entire sympathy with the efforts of women suffrage leaders to secure the adoption in the national platform of the two great parties of an equal suffrage plank."

The Massachusetts legislature, which does not believe in burdening women with the ballot, does believe that her strength otherwise is unlimited. It has just recently refused to adopt the 48 hour bill for women, but has extended the provisions of the bill to include thousands of men not formerly included, such as men employees of the state and county.

The men of Saskatchewan are much pleased with themselves for having granted the ballot to women. Commissioner Yoreth recently congratulated the women upon the victory and said that already men were admitting that their former objections were due largely to the fact that they had never seriously considered the justice of the question.

Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the president, appeared before a committee of Congress to urge the use of school buildings in the District of Columbia as community centers for the discussion of public affairs. Congressman Focht of Pennsylvania objected: "But the people of the District of Columbia have no vote. Why should they discuss politics and such things?" Miss Wilson retorted with a smile: "I had supposed that Congress cared a little something about the people of the District of Columbia whether they voted or not." If not, what about women?

Votes for women have brought to Colorado the most prosperous era in its history. So says Governor Carlson. Statewide prohibition was gained largely through the votes of women.

COUNTY NORMAL NOTES.

[Florence Milner.]

The school garden has been finally started by the normal class and training room children.

Friday afternoon the normal class enjoyed hearing a debate in the high school assembly room. The question under consideration was very interesting. The judges named the negative side as the winner.

A number of the normal students had the privilege of accompanying the school commissioner, May L. Stewart on her trips to some of the rural schools. This was a real treat and enjoyable as well as profitable.

The teachers' examinations were held in the normal room last Thursday and Friday. The normal class were in session at the library during the mornings and in the afternoon did some very profitable observation work in the ward schools and in the training room.

It was with profound sorrow that the normal class heard of the death of little Billy Miller. Billy was a member of the chart class in the training room. He was always bright and cheerful and had made warm friends with the members of the normal class. It is certain that no other pupil of the Charlevoix schools will be more missed than little Billy.

BOOST MICHIGAN.

There is only so much money in Michigan, and if the Michigan farmer, the Michigan lumberman, the Michigan miner, the Michigan manufacturer, the Michigan grocer, the Michigan clerk and the Michigan laborer sold all they produced in Michigan and bought everything they used outside of Michigan, Michigan would go broke.

Don't forget that.
Think it over seriously.
On the other hand, if Michigan people could sell everything produced to outsiders and buy everything used in Michigan, Michigan would become immensely more prosperous.

Of course neither proposition is practicable or feasible, but

How About the Balance of Trade?

When Michigan is producing more than she is buying, Michigan is prosperous and progressive, but when Michigan buys more than she produces she is on the straight road to poverty.

Everybody knows when the balance of trade is largely in favor of Europe a shortage of money and hard times prevail in America, but when America is selling Europe much more than she is buying from Europe, America is mightily prosperous.

Every citizen in Michigan understands and realizes the truth of this and the value of the principle, but a great many in every community fail to apply it to their own locality and yet grumble about their own town not being progressive, when as a matter of fact they are in a large measure responsible for its condition.

Keep the balance of trade in Michigan's favor and in your town's favor by spending your money in Michigan. It means greater prosperity for you.

Michigan merchants and Michigan people should get together—Boost Michigan.

William Alden Smith is going to let the Republican state convention run itself. He cancelled reservations he had made at the hotels when he expected to pose therein as Michigan's favorite son for president and the all-around boss of Michigan Republicans. He is now back in his place in Washington, which scarcely has known him the past year. It may have occurred to him that he would have cut a better figure in the primary had he stayed there and attended to the work for which he draws a salary.

Henry Ford declares his vote is a victory for peace. And we think Hank is right. Henry's vote sure put the quietus on one of Michigan's most brilliant senatorial disturbances.

Even a typographical error often tells the truth. For instance, we find an exchange speaking of "Oyster Bray."

One of the blessings of true living is to be able to consider yourself a part of the beautiful world around you.

The quickest way to get a larger army and navy is to get some larger congressmen.

And then, when you can spare the time, go fishing.

A NEW McKINLEY

American From Head to Heel—From Skin to Marrow

By JOSEPH SMITH

THE man who is in touch and sympathy with the human currents of his age, who recognizes the ills of his day and can prescribe the cures or palliatives for them, who is not willing to allow one evil to crowd out the consideration of others, that man with his intuitive knowledge of the strength and weakness of his fellows, will go far. He inspires faith and by his patience and tact gathers behind himself a moving force, a volume of convinced public opinion that enables him to achieve results.

Such a man is Captain John Wingate Weeks, Senator from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Captain Weeks—you'll get closer to his heart by giving him his naval title than by intoning his senatorial dignity—is in no sense a new man in public life. During these years of agitation and clamor he has been working, not spell-binding. In those perilous days of storm and stress and lungs and tongues, he has been on the job attending everlastingly to the business of the country and the interests of his constituents. He has had neither the time nor the taste for decorating stumps or adorning platforms. And yet he can speak and speak wisely and convincingly when necessity demands it and the occasion warrants it. He is more like McKinley than any other public man of the day, in his relations with his fellow men.

Big, Upright, Clear-headed, Well-balanced

Captain Weeks has never posed as an Ajax defying the lightning; he knows that a republic and a people are better served by works than words. Being endowed with Yankee gumption and a fine sense of humor and having a long experience of men and matters, he is convinced that the man who sows and sows gets more out of a tough wood pile than his who swats and swears. Captain Weeks is one of those big, upright, clear-headed, well-balanced Yankees, who were more numerous half a century ago than they are today. A sane, self-contained, honorable American, endowed with Yankee humor and horse sense, shrewd and kindly, who loves squares dealing and fair play; who believes in walking and working in the middle of the road in the sight of man and God, ready to share the sunlight of his nature with his fellows. That's Captain Weeks.

It was in the town Lancaster, in that cradle of men, the Old Granite State, that John Weeks was born one April morning in 1860; lived and grew to young manhood; learned how to cut a clean swath with the best of the hands in the hay-field, and was a hardworking farmer's boy. From the wholesome atmosphere of the north country, he went direct to the Naval Academy at Annapolis. Life was not all cakes and ale for the Annapolis man in the early eighties. We did not have much of a navy in those days, nor did we have the knowledge and appreciation of the necessity and value of one. We were too busy expanding our purse and our pride to waste much time on armies and navies, and so we neglected both. Out of a graduating class of 70 cadets only ten received commissions and the other 60 were sent adrift. John W. Weeks did not belong to the Upper Ten.

Annapolis Makes Americans

Annapolis makes Americans. It perfects their bodies and disciplines their minds, it graduates officers and gentlemen, and they are taught to understand that the standard which constitutes an American gentleman bearing the commission of the United States is character and conduct, not birth or condition. The boy who stands the tests of Annapolis for four years and graduates must be sound in body, mind and soul. From this school John Weeks graduated with honor and credit and passed into the service of his country. If the indifference and folly of that day subsequently deprived the navy of the services of Weeks and his 59 classmates they did turn back into the civil life of the Republic a heaven of worth and efficiency with a distinct value, a heaven with a lofty conception of citizenship and duty.

A Patriot in Peace and War

This is the why and because of John Wingate Weeks and the manner of man he is. Of good American stock, born in the most American of New England States, raised in the wholesome atmosphere of a New Hampshire country town he went in the formative period of his manhood to the most American of schools, the Annapolis Naval Academy, and later to spend two years in active service. The resultant product could only be one thing—a man who could be trusted under all circumstances and conditions, a high-minded, honorable gentleman, a patriot in peace and war, a public servant who could be depended upon in every crisis, a man whose word was as good as his bond, a clean-living, clean-thinking, hard-working, liberty-loving democratic American.

Pluck and Patience, Physique and Humor

It is always a hard job to keep a good man down, but it's a good deal harder to discourage or defeat a New Hampshire Yankee. When John Weeks retired from the navy he did not waste any time mourning the ingratitude of the republics. He went to work in Florida as a surveyor, running down the lines of old Spanish land grants. If any good man and true wants to learn what good hard work means, let him tackle a job surveying in the steamy air and a subtropical sun in the pleasant companionship of reptiles and insect pests, packing rod and chain and theodolite is a job that calls for pluck and patience, physique and humor. Weeks did it and stuck to his job. He needed the money and wasn't afraid of hard work; and his experience then has enabled him to have a soft spot in his heart for every fellow sweating under a hard job and in a tight place. His Annapolis experience with the hard knocks afterward in Florida helped to give him the National spirit which is so marked a feature of his character. It helps to explain, too, how it happens that he is the first New England Republican since James G. Blaine to touch the heart of the West. There is no western state in which you cannot find John Weeks' adoring friends.

Captain Weeks has succeeded in business and politics because of his gifts and graces plus hard work and square dealing. While he is firm in his convictions, unyielding in his principles and vigorous in upholding them, he has the art of compelling the admiration and affection of his opponents, who soon realize the sincerity and honesty of his views. He knows how to concede without cutting, to rebuke without reviling, to speak without stinging.

Volunteered for Service

When he began his civil career and became immersed in business, he could not forget his first love, the sea and the ship; and feeling that that day might come when his country could utilize the knowledge and training gained in Annapolis, he joined the Massachusetts Naval Brigade and became its commander and captain. When the Spanish War did come he served as lieutenant in the volunteer naval forces in Massachusetts waters. Though out of the service, his heart is still with it. When Wilson bungled us into war with Mexico through seizing Vera Cruz, Captain Weeks was one of the first to volunteer for service in the hostilities which seemed to be at hand. He is primarily a sailor and a naval officer. In Congress no man's advice and counsel so valued so highly for he brings to this subject knowledge, intelligence, sympathy and a patriotic pride.

A Worker—Not a Word-monger

Captain Weeks was never a spectacular Congressman. He is a worker, not a word-monger; he wastes neither time nor talent in useless discussion. His aim is to get results, to place useful legislation on the statute books, to allay public discontent by remedial measures and to keep the wheels of government running without friction and without waste and extravagance. In the recent days of excitement and agitation, when a great deal of demagoguery was masquerading as patriotism and garrulous humbug was posing as reform, his humor, good sense and knowledge of human nature guided him by the shoals of roaring revolution and the rocks of dull reaction. He kept his balance and smiled at both poseur and stand-patter.

A shrewd, kindly, level-headed, self-respecting Yankee, devoted to his country and loyal to his duties and responsibilities, his education and training have taught him that law, order and discipline are as essential to the progress and prosperity of the nation as financial sanity and social peace are to its industrial and commercial success. He can recognize financial folly and its industrial humbug no matter how cleverly disguised, and he is not to be fooled by the fine words that butter no parsnips. His good sense and good humor, the admirable temper he brings to the discussion of measures, his courtesy and consideration for others and his thorough mastery of the questions he advocates and the legislation he opposes have brought him respect and confidence.

The Best Liked Man in Congress

He is the most effective and best liked man in Congress today. If the members of the House and Senate with whom he has served were to choose the next President he would get almost every Republican vote and Progressive and Democrats would be glad to see him get it.

He is a man's man, he wears well, he is a permanent fixture in the affections of his hosts of friends. He is a public man whom it will pay to watch for he will go far and he is a sound and trustworthy American product. American from his head to his feet and from his skin to his marrow. The world knows no better time than that.

BATTLED FOR THEIR BRIDES

The Most Thrilling Wedding Day in the World's History.

Do you know what was the most thrilling wedding day in the history of the world? There have been many romantic marriages and many nuptial services that had to be deferred because of the opposition of parent or rival, but all of them pale into dingy gray when compared with the colorful spectacle of the abduction and recapture of the Venetian brides in the early winter of 1723, when Candiano II, the noble doge, was lending his presence to the biggest wedding party in the history of the Church of San Pietro. It had long been the custom for all the noble brides to be married on St. Mary's day. It was, moreover, the custom for the brides to bring with them all their jewels and their dowries, in gold coin, enclosed in handsomely carved chests.

The latter fact was well known in Trieste, that ancient Roman colony which was the harbor for bands of pirates who were most clever navigators. On this richest of all St. Mary's wedding days the ceremony for more than a score of brides had already begun when the pirates from Trieste burst into the church, captured the brides and their dowries and carried them to the waiting boats. Thanks to the Trunkmakers' union, there were several boats waiting, and in these the be-ribboned bridegrooms and the sturdy trunk-makers gave pursuit. There was a battle royal one of the most thrilling sea fights on record, dowries and brides were recovered, and before midnight all had been safely married—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

GET RICH QUICK SCHEMES.

For Big Investors They May Work, but Not For Small Ones.

"Those who labor hard for their money and who have a still more arduous struggle in saving small sums," says a banker in the American Magazine, "naturally fall easy victims in many instances to the desire for sudden riches. But the fatal error lies in supposing that the person of small means can afford to take the chance. If he or she loses they lose all. This large capitalist and the professional money lender have the law of averages working with them. They can afford to stink money into twenty ventures if they make a thousand per cent on one. They are protected by the law of chance, the average safety of their investments depending upon no single risk.

"Risk is a necessary part of business, but should be borne by the strong, never by the weak. The promoter who talks about the small investor being given the same opportunities as the very rich is indulging in 'humbug.' He always forgets to say that a safe 5 per cent bond or a 6 per cent mortgage, sold, impersonal depositories for funds," will at the end of five years have paid their owners 30 per cent to 35 per cent (allowing for compound interest) and that the vast majority of new ventures with big promises will have paid nothing.

"Only the man who can afford to take risks has any business to look for an investment that will make him rich quickly."

LIBRARY NOTES.

There were 1148 books loaned during the month of April. A good many of the citizens of Charlevoix are not availing themselves of the privilege of using the library. Why not at least spend a few minutes once a week in looking over new magazines or books to be found there?

We still desire old magazines. Do not forget our wants when wondering what to do with your accumulation. Phone 157.

Monday, April 24th, showed the greatest number of readers in the library for April. There were 82. Of this number there were 28 men, 22 women and 32 children.

One hundred and ten books were issued Saturday, April 22, which was the greatest number for one day.

The total number of readers who spent from ten minutes to several hours studying in the library during April was 1277. If you were one of this number, wouldn't you tell your friends what you found of interest? Wouldn't you come some time through May to see what the others find of interest and see what we have of special value to you?

Passenger Train Jumps Track.

A serious wreck occurred on the G. R. & I. north of Clarion on Monday of last week, when passenger train No. 4 left the track, the engine turning over. The engineer, Frank W. Beal, of Grand Rapids, was thrown from the cab against a fence, where he was so terribly scalded by escaping steam that he died a few hours later in a Petoskey hospital. The fireman, William Winegard, of Grand Rapids, was badly hurt, but will recover. None of the passengers were injured. Gov. and Mrs. Ferris were passengers on the wrecked train. The cause of the accident was a broken rail. The wreck delayed mail service for 24 hours.

Frank W. Beal was 50 years of age and had been with the G. R. & I. since he was 17 years of age. He leaves a wife and six children.

Harbor Springs Pioneer Dead.

Ephraim Shay, prominent business man of Harbor Springs, and inventor of the widely known Shay locomotive which is now used all over the world, died at his home on Friday of last week at the age of 77 years. He constructed and owned for many years the Harbor Springs water works system, later selling to the city.

First Boat of Season.

Great Lakes navigation was officially opened at East Jordan Thursday of last week, when the steam barge S. M. Stevenson, Captain Sanford commanding, arrived from Monistee. She is loaded with a consignment of maple lumber from the East Jordan Lumber Company's docks.

DO IT NOW.

Charlevoix People Should Not Wait Until It Is Too Late.

The appalling death rate from kidney disease is due largely to the fact that the little kidney troubles are usually neglected until they become serious. The slight symptoms often give place to chronic disorders and the sufferer may slip gradually into some serious form of kidney complaint.

If you suffer from backache, headaches, dizzy spells, in the kidney secretions are irregular of passage and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. Help the kidneys at once.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially for kidney disorders. They act where others fail. Over one hundred thousand people have recommended them. Here's a case at home:

Mrs. John Hull, 102 W. Lincoln avenue, Charlevoix, says: "About a year ago I had a severe attack of lumbago. I suffered greatly and tried many remedies, but got no relief until I took Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at the Ivy Drug Store. Later I was again having trouble from weak kidneys and backache. I again took Doan's Kidney Pills and they acted promptly in bringing me relief."

Price 50c., at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Hull had. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Mr. Erfourth at Horton Bay says he has been assured of new seats for the schoolroom for next year. These have been badly needed for some time and will effect several unlooked for improvements.

Teachers' examination April 27-29. There were 26 applicants, of whom five wrote on second grade and the remainder on third grade.

For those writing without experience or normal training, certificates will be held until statement of state normal credits is sent in. Several applicants will have to wait until the close of the summer session of the state normal schools.

Second round of visits completed in all but the Beavers. They're next. The commissioner regrets that the Nowland school, North Bay and Gill school had closed in a few days before she arrived for a second visit.

Fire Kills Two at Cheboygan.

Mrs. Aslin and her young daughter, wife and daughter of Section Foreman Aslin of Cheboygan, were burned to death when the Aslin home was destroyed by fire early Wednesday morning of last week in Cheboygan and a young son in death from serious burns he received.

Mr. Aslin started the kitchen fire and used oil from an oil can. In some way the can exploded and the fire spread all over the lower part of the house. Mrs. Aslin and the children were in a bedroom on the second floor and were trapped.

The son was rescued only after being seriously burned and Mrs. Aslin and daughter died.

Council Buys Fire Engine.

At a special meeting of the Petoskey council last week it was decided to buy a Model 12 American LaFrance Fire Engine Company auto truck, triple combination fire outfit, at a total cost of $6,000, the machine to be delivered in sixty days.

The machine is driven by a six-cylinder 105 horse power gasoline engine, which can also be attached with the throwing of a lever to a pump for use on the hill section and on the outskirts of the city where water must be taken from the river or cisterns. This pump is one of the best made and should be just what is wanted. On this truck will also be a large chemical tank and hose and six individual chemical hand outfits, searchlights, ladders, lanterns, hose, hose attachments and everything complete.

PROHIBITION GOVERNORS.

Each of the seven states which outlawed the liquor traffic January 1 is fortunate in having a governor who is heartily in favor of prohibition and will uphold the law.

Governor Carlson of Colorado says he will enforce it even to the extent of calling upon the state militia. Governor Lester of Washington urges an appropriation of $50,000 to be used in enforcement. Governor Withycombe of Oregon expresses confidence that an overwhelming majority of the citizens of the state mean to see that the provisions of the law are lived up to and that they may count upon his help to the utmost. Governor Alexander of Virginia expresses confidence that an overwhelming majority of the citizens of the state mean to see that the provisions of the law are lived up to and that they may count upon his help to the utmost.

When Governor Hay of Arkansas signed the prohibition bill, he said: "I believe the most manly act of my life, an act that will mean much to me, to my conscience, to my wife, to my two little boys, and to the people of the state to which I owe so much, was the act I performed when I placed my signature to the bill which gave Arkansas state-wide prohibition."

The attitude of Governor Clarke of Iowa is indicated by his remarks when he signed the measure repealing the malt law and putting into effect state-wide prohibition: "The banishment of the saloon ought to mean the emancipation of many a laboring man, the joy of the wife in his home, better conditions and a better outlook on life for his child."

South Carolina's governor in his New Year's greeting declared that: "With the help of God and the support of the people the prohibition law shall be rigidly enforced so long as I am governor."

WATCH YOUR LIBRARY.

While getting ready to inaugurate a prize essay contest, a W. C. T. U. woman investigated the public local library to see what the children would find in the way of reference books, and discovered that of ten books on the temperance shelf seven were against total abstinence and prohibition. Among these were "Religion and Drink," "Drink, Temperance and Legislation," "A Text Book of True Temperance," "Alcohol, the Enemy of Its Use," "Prohibition, the Enemy of Temperance," "Prohibition, Its Relation to Temperance," "Good Morals and Sound Government." The local union immediately called the attention of the library board to the inconsistency of permitting the liquor interests to teach intemperance through the city library, when the law expressly provides that the children shall be taught in the schools the evil effects of drinking liquor.

SHINGLING HIS OWN ROOF.

Chaplain McCabo once told the story of a drinking man, who, being in a saloon late at night, heard the wife of the saloonkeeper say to her husband:

"Send that fellow home; it's late."

"No, never mind," replied the husband, "he is shingling our house for us."

The idea lodged in the mind of the drunkard, and he did not return to the saloon for six months. When passing the saloonkeeper on the street, the latter said:

"Why don't you come round to my place any more?"

"Thank you for your kind hospitality," replied the former victim, "I've been shingling my own roof lately."

RUSSIA IS PRESSING.

If America is to lead the van of civilization into the promised land of prohibition, she must make haste. Autocratic Russia has shouldered her out of the front rank, and it is high time for the voice of the people to speak—to speak overwhelmingly, and to speak where the voice of the people is heard.

WHY THE SCREENS?

Why are saloons and the patrons of saloons invariably opposed to the removal of screens from these places of business? A man does not object to being seen in a grocery or in a dry goods store—why, if the dramshop is a good thing in the community, is he ashamed to be seen in a saloon?

PROSPERITY IN KOKOMO.

Kokomo, a dry city of Indiana, is having the most prosperous times in its history. No empty buildings, and such a demand for homes that this business men have arranged to build at least two hundred at once. Four of the biggest firms agree to erect 25 houses each.

FARMERS APPROVE.

The Nebraska farmers' congress went on record in favor of prohibition at a meeting in Omaha, December 8. After a heated debate, a resolution for prohibition was drawn to replace one submitted by the resolution committee opposing prohibition. The amended resolution was adopted by a vote of 52 to 7.

EFFICIENT PROHIBITION.

It was a Milwaukee mayor who said: "I am opposed to prohibition because it prohibits."

This rich productive California county is sparsely settled compared to the East. There are thousands of acres ready for industrious farmers—land that will yield far more than the average farm land throughout the United States. Here forty acres will bring greater revenue than a quarter section in some parts of the country. The land is suitable for general farming. Alfalfa is cut six times each year and yields from 14 to 20 tons per acre. Big opportunities for practical dairymen, stockmen and poultrymen. Splendid climate. No severe winter.

 Serialization by HUGH WEIR and JOE BRANDT Produced by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company (Copyright, 1916, by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.)

SYNOPSIS.

Dudley Larigan, district attorney, because of his fight on the vice and liquor trusts, is killed by an agent of a secret society, the committee of fifteen. The fight is continued by his son, Bruce, who is elected district attorney, and by another son, Tom. Bruce is in love with Dorothy Maxwell, whose father is head of the insurance trust.

NINTH EPISODE

The Insurance Swindlers

Suggested by JOE MITCHELL CHAPPLE, Author of "Heart Throbs."

ACCIDENTS at the Great Eastern lumber mills were of so frequent occurrence that when Big Jim Blake was felled under a heavy, collapsing timber and picked up for dead the affair did not cause more than a passing ripple in the affairs of the great establishment. The management of the Great Eastern has a habit of smothering the news of accidents—when their employees were the victims. It was in the little white cottage on Elm street, near the factory yard, that the tragedy struck home. The sadly smiling woman, with the two chubby children clinging to her skirts, who greeted the gruff workman sent ahead with the news of the accident, jibbed for a moment at her eyes with a corner of her apron and prepared to receive the motionless body in the automobile ambulance.

"Jim!" she cried. "Jim, my Jim!"
 The three eyes in the white face slowly opened.

"Thank God, Martha, for the insurance! It will come in handy for us now!"
 She smiled bravely back at him. The insurance! How like the big, unselfish nature of Jim to think of the insurance and protection for her and the kiddies first! And so at 10 o'clock the next morning, when it became apparent that Jim Blake was doomed to a long sleep in bed, if indeed he were to recover with his life, she put on her best Sunday bonnet and shawl and haltingly asked her way to the big brown stone building which housed the Tom Changes Clothes With the Negro Bell Boy.

Accident and Life Insurance company. It was a big building and the offices of the insurance company with in were very glittering and very pretentious, but a black lettered sign coldly announced that the company had just passed into the hands of a receiver.

Mrs. Blake started back with a gasp—the kind of dry sob which comes to a woman only under the most poignant distress. The insurance company a failure! And all the little savings of three years swept away! But this was not the worst. How was the Blake family to exist during the long weeks ahead? How were Jim's doctor bills to be paid?

A strong, cheery voice spoke at Mrs. Blake's shoulder. "Is there anything I can do for you, madam?"
 The little woman whirled to look into a frankly smiling pair of blue-gray eyes set in a tanned, resolute face, and Tom Larigan, for the speaker was he, removed his hat and offered his arm.

"Let us go some place where I can talk to you," he said quietly. "I have an idea that your story is only one of many which I have heard today. You see, I am government special officer investigating just such frauds as I strongly suspect the company is attempting to perpetrate now on an innocent public." He threw back the lapel of his coat and showed the little silver star of government authority. Mrs. Blake unhesitatingly followed his directions. Almost before she realized it she was sobbing out her story.

"You must let me take the place of the insurance company," he insisted. "How much did your policy call for?"

 She hesitated. "Twenty-five dollars a week for three months in case of disability from accident."

"Here is $100. I will see you before that is exhausted, and we will see what we can do for your husband." He rose. "Keep up your courage, Mrs. Blake. I am sure that I can help you."

"How can I ever thank you?"
 "Don't try," Tom smiled again as she turned away, but as her white figure vanished the smile faded from his face. He had work to do—grim work. The company was one of the strongest branches of the so-called insurance trust and, as such, deemed itself above the law, immune from legal investigation. Tom turned furtively away, his hands deep in his pockets, his face wrinkled in somber thought. He did not notice the skulking figure in the doorway of the building which glided unostentatiously after him. The fifteen kept their audacious antagonist under surveillance night and day.

Reaching his rooms, Tom saw in a newspaper a challenge from the very concern that was the object of his investigations. "The Accident and Life Insurance Company invites Any Investigation of Its Books and Records From Any Accredited Source."

He knew that Roger Maxwell, father of Dorothy, the fiancée of his brother, Bruce, was the guiding spirit of the concern. Was Roger Maxwell implicated in a plot to defraud the public? Tom shuddered and threw the paper from him. He would take the insurance men at their word, and if there was crooked work, heaven help them!

Had Tom Larigan been present at a gathering of the remaining leaders of the fifteen in their private office that afternoon he might have been a shade less resolute in his sudden determination. Stanford Stone, as usual, was in the presiding chair, and it was his curtly given voice which stated the purpose of the session.

"Larigan is on the trail of the insurance trust, gentlemen. Unless we get him first he is certain to deal us another disastrous blow. I suggest that we leave Tom Larigan's fate in the hands of four picked gun men whom I have selected for their discretion and marksmanship. Larigan cannot escape them. They have orders to follow him to the death. If our man escapes, Brother Maxwell, the crisis must be met by you in this instance as the most interested party."

Roger Maxwell staggered as he rose from his chair, and his face was haggard when he passed through the door. Behind him Stanford Stone smiled cynically at his retreating figure.

As Tom Larigan left his hotel in a taxicab to visit Ben Travers he noticed that two men were following him. Once out of sight, Tom spoke to the chauffeur.

"I want you to change places with me for an hour," he said coolly, showing a twenty dollar bill. "It's a joke on some friends."

For a moment the man stared, and then he winked. Three minutes later Tom, in the overcoat and cap of the chauffeur, drove slowly up to the entrance of the hotel where Ben Travers had his rooms, descended from his seat and entered the building.

The two gun men fell back with curses when they found the driver inside the taxicab. Travers welcomed Tom warmly and announced that he had bought the Daily Independent to fight graft. Tom then changed clothes with a negro bellboy and walked out to the taxicab with a trunk on his shoulders, while the two gun men, three feet away, smoked serenely, unconscious that their victim was at their elbows. For a moment Tom debated whether or not to enter the taxicab himself, but instead walked around the corner of the hotel and successfully eluded his pursuers. He at once proceeded to the Accident and Life Insurance company's offices and pushed his way into Roger Maxwell's room.

"I have come to see your books," said Tom curtly, showing his star. "I would like to start my investigation at once."

For a moment Maxwell continued his wild stare, and then he gathered himself together with an effort. "Certainly," he stammered, pressing a button, which called a secretary. "Show this man to the vaults, Jones," he ordered as the call was obeyed. Tom bowed and followed his conductor outside. Hardly had the door closed when Maxwell picked up his telephone. "Is that you, Stone?" he whispered hoarsely when his connection was established. "Young Larigan is here to see the books. He has escaped our trap. What shall I do?"

"Where is he now?"

"On his way to the vaults."
 "Let him get inside, then, and close the door!" was the curt answer.
 "Close the door?" echoed Maxwell dully.

"Certainly. It is equipped with a time lock; of course. You can say it was an accident. It will be hours before it can be opened again."

Roger Maxwell hung back the receiver and paced the floor, with his face bathed in cold perspiration. It would be deliberate murder! Maxwell approached the vault, glanced stealthily over his shoulder and then latched toward the heavy door. There was a clang of metal and then a hoarse cry of dismay from the clerk at the nearby desk, who sprang forward just in time to catch Maxwell's recoiling form.

"For God's sake, what have you done, Mr. Maxwell? Tom Larigan is inside!"

"It was an accident," stammered Maxwell. "Get help at once. Don't stand there staring."

Hours later when three experts from the safe concern opened the vault they found the body of Tom Larigan stretched on the floor. A physician, who had been hastily summoned, knelt over the form and shook his head solemnly. "Dead," he said.

Meantime, the evening newspapers on the streets were shrieking the latest sensational developments in the Larigan case, and the story of the "accident" in the offices of the insurance company, which had resulted so disastrously. Bruce Larigan, con-"Go away!" he moaned.

lessing from the injuries, which for a time had threatened an untimely death, crumpled the paper convulsively. "The scoundrels!" he hissed. "The murderous scoundrels!" There was no doubt in his mind as to the cause of the tragedy and his purpose. "But I'll have them yet! I'll bound each one to his grave or prison if it needs the remainder of my life to do it!"

Had any one been fated to look in on Roger Maxwell at that moment the spectacle presented by the usually spry, dignified looking insurance president would have been a shock. Maxwell, huddled over his desk, was seeking, as a last resort to ease his conscience of its burden, by telling the truth to a dead man, whose lips could never open against him in real life. Summoning a messenger the president directed the boy to carry the envelope to the Larigan home. It was not until then that Roger Maxwell prepared to leave his office.

At the Larigan cottage the occupants were clustered in the living room, listening with bated breath for the rumble in the street which should announce the arrival of the black wagon with the body of the son and brother. But hour succeeded hour without the expected sound. Bruce was on the point of persuading his mother to retire when a hurried step sounded outside, the front door was flung open, and Bruce was facing his brother Tom.

Tom grinned at the other's stare and flung his arms over his mother's shoulders. "It takes a hard knock to kill a Larigan," he chuckled. "Suspended animation, old man. I looked dead enough, but the doctor suspected the true facts and managed to bring me around in his office." A half hour later Tom was summoned to the door by a peal of the bell. A messenger boy extended a long envelope. It was the confession of Roger Maxwell—the confession that had never been meant for living eyes. Tom can't let his hat from the rack and let himself softly out of the front door. He was determined if possible to keep the confession from Bruce—Bruce who would give his life to avoid giving Dorothy Maxwell pain.

Roger Maxwell in his library at midnight, started to his feet with a cry that was almost a shriek. Tom Larigan stood before him. "Go away," he moaned. "Go away!"
 "Show me the sheets of Maxwell's confession," Maxwell rumbled to the door. Tom glared at his side just as Dorothy entered the room. "I fear your father is very ill," he said gently. "Better call a doctor."
 "But—how?" Dorothy stammered.
 "I will explain all later," said Tom evasively.

The early morning newspapers carried the news of the apostolic seizure of Roger Maxwell and announced that his life was despatched of Bruce hurried to the Maxwell home. Dorothy met him with a sad shake of her pretty blond head as he sought to take her in his arms.

"Not now," she said, motioning him away.

Without a word Bruce turned and made his way back to the street. Thus was it all to end.
 [Episode No. 10 next week.]

"Where is he now?"

"On his way to the vaults."
 "Let him get inside, then, and close the door!" was the curt answer.
 "Close the door?" echoed Maxwell dully.

The Mouths of Leaves.

The botanist, the real investigator who has got down to making real explorations for himself, will talk to you about the thousands of minute stomata on the surface of a leaf. These invisible stomata are really the mouths through which the leaves take in carbonic acid. They are most abundant on the upper surface of leaves.

Each is an oval opening guarded by a pair of lips which open and close according to requirements. They vary from less than 1,000 to more than 20,000 to the square inch of leaf surface.

Economy Hints

A penny saved is a penny earned.—Benjamin Franklin.

EVERY one should have on hand directions for removing various stains which are apt to disturb one's peace of mind at some time or other.

A grease spot on silk is a common thing, and yet in many cases it could easily be removed by applying a paste made of equal parts of powdered French chalk and fuller's earth. Allow the mixture to remain on the spot for a few days, and then brush it off.

Iron rust, the bane of many housekeepers, can often be effaced by applying lemon juice and salt. Spread the stained article in the sun and keep the stained portion moist with lemon.

Wash the article in the regular way when the stain has disappeared.

Milk applied to a fresh ink stain will prove successful in removing it, but the trouble is that the ink usually spills when there is so much near at hand. In this event the unfortunate one must wait until it is convenient to purchase oxalic acid. Having procured it, the spot should be moistened with cold water before the acid is applied, drop by drop. Allow it to stand a few minutes, and then rinse the stained article in cold water, to which a little ammonia has been added. A medicine dropper is a splendid thing to use to apply the acid.

It is advisable for every woman who was unable to remove fruit stains that marred her linen in the summer to place the linen out in the frost now that real winter days are here.

Stainborn tea stains can be eradicated by spreading the stained portion over a test and pouring glycerin through the material. Afterward pour boiling water.

Boiling water poured from a height will also remove coffee stains.

The Primrose is Built for Service

BOTH the reasons why you buy a cream separator are met fully by the Primrose. The first is to get all the cream with the least work; the second, to buy a machine that you or your wife can easily keep in operating condition, and that will skim closely for years.

You know that there is nothing about a Primrose to get out of order. You know, too, that it has a splash oiling system that takes care of every bearing, and that it is a clean machine—no oil in the milk, and no milk in the oil.

But the Primrose has some other exclusive features you ought to know before you buy any separator. For instance, at any position, the handle takes hold the instant pressure is applied, and lets go the instant the pressure is taken off. The spindle stays in the separator, where it belongs. When you place the bowl on the spindle, it centers itself automatically without any pounding and without trying more than once—that saves the lower spindle bearing and prevents dangerous springing of the spindle itself.

No matter what separator question you bring up, you will find it fully answered by the Primrose. Come in and take a good look at it before you buy.

SAW MILL GOES UP IN SMOKE

OLD LANDMARK NOW A THING OF THE PAST.

Was Being Operated by Its Owner, Fred Smith—Built Some Twenty Years Ago.

One of the old landmarks of this vicinity that will be missed was burned to the ground Wednesday night of last week, when fire totally destroyed the sawmill on the lake shore owned and operated by Fred Smith.

About 2:00 a. m. L. VanSkiver of the Orient Hotel noticed a bright light, and upon getting up to investigate discovered the fire. At first he thought it was in the barn across the street, used by J. H. Elzinga for storing automobiles. He aroused Elzinga by phone and then it was discovered that the mill was burning.

By this time the fire had gained such headway that little could be done other than saving lumber piles close to the mill.

The mill was being operated by Mr. Smith, both for sawing his own logs and custom sawing. The loss will be a hard blow to the vicinity, as it was the only place near the village where farmers and contractors could get their work done. No insurance was carried and the property is a total loss to those financially interested.

The mill was moved here from Mecosta some 20 years ago by the McKay brothers.

Two years later it was bought by E. H. Skow, who operated it up to five years ago, when he sold it to the present owners. The fire was a spectacular one and could be seen for miles.

Tankage For Pigs.

Tankage affords a splendid feed in connection with corn and when fed at the rate of one pound of tankage to eight to twelve pounds of corn will produce gains more economically than when corn is fed without the tankage. If tankage is not available shorts with a little oil meal will be a splendid fattening ration. Farmers feeding herds of forty to fifty should remember to feed proportionately. A herd of fifty pigs will consume ten times as much as a litter of five, and feed should be given accordingly. Many farmers fail to realize this fact and do not give the hogs a sufficient amount to produce the gains that should be desired. When hogs attain a weight of 150 to 175 pounds they should be given all they will eat, for the faster they gain at this age the more profitable will be the gain.

Parasites In Sheep.

Sheep should have access to medicated salt in winter just as methodically as in summer, for in this way the breeding parasites that winter in the stomachs of mature sheep are largely destroyed. The source of drinking water for sheep is under the entire control of the feeder while the sheep are in dry lot, thus making it impossible for them to imbibe parasites with water, which in summer is very common. It is supposed that the parasite known as stomach worm survives the winter in the open field to some extent. Therefore the farmer who would keep his farm as free as possible from parasites should by all means use the winter season in systematically eradicating the parasites in the flock itself.

Disraeli and the Editor.

Disraeli would dearly have liked to suspend the London Globe years ago when that paper, then a Whig organ, fell foul of him over his "Vindication of the English Constitution." Few editors have ever been so roughly abused as in Disraeli's letter to the Times: "It is not my passion for notoriety that has induced me to tweak the editor of the Globe by the nose and to inflict sundry kicks upon the lower part of his base body, to make him eat dirt and his own words, fouler than any filth, but because I wished to show to the world what a miserable potroon, what a craven dillard, what a literary scarecrow, what a mere thing, stuffed with straw and rubbish, is the soldisant director of public opinion and official organ of Whig politics."—London Opinion.

Kick of the Gun.

When a young American joins the national guard or following that instinct which not even long city life can entirely kill, takes a gun and starts out as a hunter, one of the earliest surprises he gets is that nasty hard kick his firearm gives him.

But the kick of the big guns in war is tremendous. Some of the guns jump into the air in others mechanism takes up the rebound and the gun slides back into place.

It is a curious fact that each of these great guns takes its kick in a way all its own.—New York World.

Strychnine.

The number of plants used for medicinal purposes in the Philippines is very large. A few are recognized as sources of standard medicines, but the number having commercial value is decidedly small. From one, the St. Ignatius bean (Strychnos ignatii), the strychnine of commerce is extracted.

COUNCIL FILLS VACANCY.

Appoints John Cook as City Treasurer to Fill Unexpired Term.

At a special meeting of the common council, held Tuesday evening at the home of G. C. Geiken, who is confined to his home by illness, John Cook was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of City Treasurer A. A. Hanshaw. The meeting was held at the Geiken home on account of Alderman Paddock and Benton being out of the city, and the confirmation of the appointment requiring a two-thirds vote.

The death of Treasurer Hanshaw caused a peculiar situation in regard to filling the office. According to law, no person under the age of 21 years can be named to fill the office, nor can it be filled by a woman. Mr. Hanshaw had not appointed a deputy, and under the circumstances, no member of the family was eligible to fill the office. Mr. Cook's familiarity with the work and his splendid past record, made him the choice of the council to fill the unexpired term.

After spending some two hours in talk and instruction, the members of the Rebekahs were invited into the lodge room, where short talks were given by Mr. Rogers, Newville and others.

ANOTHER

DOLLAR DAY

WILL ECLIPSE ALL PREVIOUS BARGAIN DAYS.

Charlevoix Commercial Association Announces Opening of "Boost Charlevoix" Campaign.

At its regular business meeting last Friday night, the members of the Charlevoix Commercial Association decided to give the people of Charlevoix and surrounding country another "Dollar Day" sale, along the same lines as that pulled off some weeks ago. The date was set for Saturday, May 20, and bargain hunters will have the time of their lives in their efforts to hunt up the store where a dollar has the greatest purchasing power.

It might be well to explain here the nature of the Charlevoix Commercial Association and its object. First of all, they are working for the best interests of our beautiful city. They will make a united effort to make Charlevoix the popular trading point of this section. If through their efforts they can induce manufacturing industries to locate here, they will act as a unit in securing a location and all necessary preliminaries will be taken care of.

Summing the situation down to a point, the entire object of the association is to "BOOST" Charlevoix and adjacent territory. Officers of the association are: J. L. Crana, president; A. A. Swinton, vice president; E. L. Dawson, secretary and treasurer. Various committees have been appointed, each one having special work to do. Dollar Day, May 20, a result of the work of one of the committees, will be their maiden attempt in the advertising line since the organization of the association, and will no doubt be a great success.

In our opinion the Charlevoix Commercial Association will perform a valuable service to the community in its endeavor to arouse a greater measure of co-operation between the city folks and their country neighbors. There seems to be a sort of instinctive feeling of difference and almost estrangement between the farmer and the city business man when it comes to a matter of trading between them. The farmer has always felt that the city man considered himself superior and as trying to take advantage of his country neighbor. The city merchant, on the other hand, has the idea that the farmer spent most of his money with mail order houses, and so the feeling has developed.

But in this city and surrounding country the people feel that such a condition of misunderstanding should not be allowed to exist, for there is no true foundation for it. Both the farmers and the merchant realize that one could not get along without the other, that the city could not exist without the farmer, and that the farmer needs the city for his market and trading place.

So, sensibly, they should at once get together, and talk these matters over, spiritedly, yet friendly. Have a "get acquainted meeting," and with the cultivation and development of friendly relations will come advanced community spirit, and both the city and the country will profit.

How to Let Down a Ham of a Cotton Crown.

Almost all cotton dresses shrink in washing and need letting down in the skirt. Before the dress goes to the tub take out the wide hem and turn it again at half the width. This brings the edge of the new hem to the crease in the bottom of the skirt, which gives a straight guide for basting. In almost every case the skirt comes out of the wash just the right length, with no streak of dirt to mark the old line.

How to Tell a Woman's Age Without Asking It.

The American Magazine gives the following rule for telling a woman's age: "My son, wouldst thou know a woman's age? Mitchell—Spencer.

A very pretty wedding took place at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of April 26th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cunningham, when Miss Mabel Mitchell, a sister of Mrs. Cunningham, was united in marriage to Mr. Ernest Spencer.

The bride was very tastefully gowned in a dress of blue messaline trimmed with shadow silk. She was attended by her sister, Miss Marie Mitchell, while Mr. Vern Spencer, a brother of the groom, acted as best man.

The bridal party took their places under an archway of flowers to the strains of a wedding march played by Miss Ruth Mitchell, and here Rev. Quinton Walker pronounced the words which made them man and wife. Anna Belle Cunningham acted as ring-bearer and Bessie Allen and Bertha Dean acted as ribbon girls.

The young couple are at home to their many friends on the Fred Decker farm.

CHEVROLET OUTPUT TO BE 75,000 AUTOS PER YEAR

Should Produce This Number by September First, According to Plans.

The Chevrolet Motor Company should this year attain the production and results that they found months ago it was thought possible to reach in two years. In other words, the company should in the current automobile year turn out 20 per cent. more cars than were projected for 1917 at the time of public financing last fall.

Barring unexpected delays in shipments or difficulties in obtaining raw materials, Chevrolet should produce in the twelve months to September 1 close to 75,000 machines. The extraordinary character of this jump in business can be appreciated from the fact that in the 1914 automobile year Chevrolet turned out only 10,000 cars.

During the peak of the load in July and August, Chevrolet will put out close to 22,000 machines and the final six months will witness the shipment of more than two-thirds of the entire year's production, or 51,000 odd machines.

The daily planned schedule of 460 cars in August contrasts with less than 100 at the opening of the year last September.

On the basis of this year's production, Chevrolet should show total earnings in excess of $6,000,000, as contrasted with a total capitalization of $20,000,000 prior to the issuance of new stock to take over control of General Motors.

Hall & Ashley of East Jordan are county agents for the Chevrolet, and J. H. Elzinga for Antrim county. F. S. Bettes has territory adjacent to Charlevoix and will demonstrate the car at any time to prospective buyers.

Don't Miss The

We want everyone interested in automobiles to make it a point not to miss a demonstration of the Chevrolet. We want you to give it during the next few days a close personal inspection because nowhere else will you find such values. Compare the Chevrolet with any car sold in Charlevoix county and you will admit the truth of our claims.

FAMOUS "FOUR-NINETY"

We ask you especially not to miss the famous Chevrolet "Four-Ninety." Here is the wonder car of the year, the car that has made the $80,000 000 Chevrolet corporation possible.

It has the celebrated Chevrolet valve-in-the-head motor with detachable head and the utmost in simplicity, power and economy of operation.

Look at its roominess, its beauty, its grace of lines—its streamline body, left-hand drive, center control, deep upholstered seat, mohair top, with curtains and cover, windshield, electric lights and electric starter—everything found in the higher priced cars.

$550 fully Equipped

THE BABY GRAND MODEL

Then there's the Chevrolet Baby Grand model for those who choose to pay a slightly higher price. This is the car that has been making good for several years.

Its low price, quality considered, is possible only by reason of big production and efficient factory system. No matter from what point of view you judge it—grace of lines, roominess, power, economy or general mechanical excellence—you will find it head and shoulders above anything else in its price field.

$750 fully Equipped

Both the "Four-Ninety" and "Baby Grand" models are furnished in roadster as well as touring models at the following prices: "Four-Ninety" Roadster, $550; Royal Mail Roadster $750—Prices include full equipment including electric lighting and starting system.

OLDEST CAR NOT FOUND

HAYNES AUTO COMPANY STILL ON THE LOOKOUT.

Trade for Twelve Cylinder Machine
Still Holds Good, Cartier
Auto Co. Says.

The offer made by the Haynes Automobile Company, to exchange one of their "Light Twelves" for the oldest Haynes car running, is revealing some remarkable motor car history.

At Reno, Nevada, is a Model 0,4 cylinder Haynes that should be decorated for distinguished service. It went to the Pacific coast as a pleasure car in 1906 and after two years of touring on the broad roads of southern California, a Los Angeles dry cleaning firm bought it to be fitted out as a delivery car. From the dry cleaning firm it went to a bakery, where it continued in its delivery capacity, and from the bakery to an express and transfer company that ran it day out and day in through the country about Los Angeles.

The express company disposed of the car to a western ne'er-do-well, who ran it on the Navajo desert as a stage for two years. Then he heard of the boom at Reno, packed his belongings and with his family of five struck toward Nevada by way of Paperville and over the grades of Strawberry Pass.

He carried his blanket and camping outfit on a trailer that he had rigged up on an old buggy running gear. The desert pilot arrived at Reno short of funds and sold the Haynes to W. W. Brinkham, the present owner. He is using it daily in going back and forth to his ranch and carrying parties on mountain hunting trips. This spring he plans to convert the motor into a tractor to pull a gang plow to his ranch.

In his letter to the Haynes company Mr. Brinkham stated that the Haynes car is still in excellent running order, although it depends on dry cells for ignition.

The motor in the car is the T-head type with a bore of 5 1/2 inches, fitted with cast iron pistons, each of which has three sets of triplicate piston rings, with a total of ten rings to the piston. It is the first model four cylinder car the Haynes company manufactured.

The Cartier company, who are the western Michigan distributors for the Haynes, have not as yet discovered any Haynes car old enough to make application for the big twelve cylinder and the factory has already lined up cars of 1899 model and the oldest car yet discovered in the Cartier Auto Company territory is a 1909. Strange as it may seem, the oldest Haynes of the vintage of 1899 discovered by the company is operating every day. This car has now run for 17 years. How is that for quality?

A. L. Hart & Son have the local agency for the Haynes auto.

"Greatness" on the Film.
It is never wise to predict that the miraculous will not occur. There may come a time when careful critics will award to some movie players the treasured adjective "great." But at the present time certainly any such use of the adjective would be absurd. The movie drama has not yet shown itself capable of giving the slightest indication that it ever can show itself capable of affording an actor the chance to do great work.—Walter Pritchard Eaton

OAKLAND FACTORY TO TREBLE YEAR'S YIELD

Versatile Line of Fours, Sixes and Eights Make Pontiac Company Popular.

Up to the first of December, about one-third of the season, the Oakland company disposed of more cars than in the whole preceding season. With its present facilities for material and production and a normal demand it is reported to the West Michigan Oakland company that the big Pontiac factory will more than triple its output this year.

After a careful analysis of the trade conditions of the preceding season the Oakland executives came to the firm conviction that the merchandising success of an established company depended not so much on the number of cylinders in a motor as on the application of proved principles of motor construction. The greatest success of the former Oakland season had been that of the high speed four-cylinder motor. The demand kept this car in the line at a lower price, namely, $1,050, made possible by an increased volume of production.

Following this announcement the Oakland company added to its line a six priced at $795, a car light in weight yet sturdy in its construction and with surprising roominess and comfortable riding facilities for five passengers. The final sensation that completed the list of Oakland offerings came with the production of the Oakland eight at $1,585, a 112 inch wheel base model of generous proportions and luxurious fittings. Here again the high speed principle was adopted.

A. L. Hart & Son are local representatives of the Oakland car and they will be glad at any time to demonstrate its special features.

WHEN A CAR GOES WRONG.

Practical Method of Discovering Automobile Troubles.

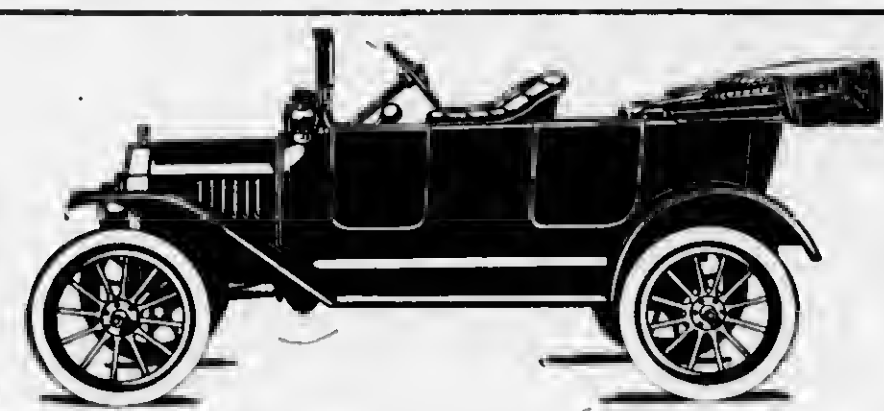

A systematic way should be adopted when a car goes wrong to diagnose the ailment of the sick car. First examine for a good spark. Without this no motor will run. Lay the plug on the cylinder to determine if a good one is present. If not, correct this first. Then crank the motor, and if it does not go next examine the carburetor, but it is better to get the motor running if possible before changing the fuel and air supply. If the spark and gasoline supply are all right the motor will run at some speed, but the car may be short on power, and if so test the cylinders for compression. This can be done properly by means of a compressionometer, which is a small circular air gauge which can be coupled up to the shell of a discarded spark plug and will fit the spark plug hole. Then the exact pressure can be seen. If the pressure is not present go after the valves, grind them in, then test again. If poor pressure, then look at the rings, but these are seldom wrong. The tire gauge on a foot pump connected up as above described makes a splendid compressionometer. It is the kind I use.

All the above means of procedure is the correct way, procuring the gasoline, oil and water supply are in their proper quantities. No car will run without these. It is also presumed the car is not broken in any of its parts so as to interfere with its running. Remember if a car has run it will do so again under the same circumstances.—Automobile Dealer and Repairer.

MOTHER'S DAY NEXT SUNDAY

ENTIRE COUNTRY WILL HONOR THE MOTHERS.

Special Services at the Churches—Send Mother a Telegram or Fine Bouquet.

The second Sunday in May is Mother's Day. This year it falls on May 14. The beautiful thought of setting aside one day in the year to be particularly devoted to one's mother was first suggested by Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia, who founded the Mothers' Day International Association to provide the necessary organized support for the fostering of the movement. Thanks largely to her efforts, Mother's Day has become a recognized institution as the day on which each of us should pause to acknowledge our debt of affection and gratitude to "the best mother who ever lived," on which we should be with her if we can, and, if we unfortunately cannot, should make a point of sending her a message of affection and cheer. Charlevoix churches will have special services and carnations will be worn in mother's honor.

In co-operation with the effort to foster the observance of Mother's Day the Western Union Telegraph Company has provided special telegraph blanks, appropriately decorated with an artistic design of carnations and bearing the legend "Mother's Day," on which all messages of those who wish to send a word of greeting to their mothers on this occasion, by day letter or night letter or in a short telegram, will be delivered, reports Manager Eldred of the local office.

The emblem of the day is the white carnation, and it is the hope of the Mother's day association that it will be worn by every one as a tribute of respect, not only for his own mother, but also for all the gentle and noble motherhood of the land.

THE COURIER'S NEW MODEL K LINOTYPE RECENTLY INSTALLED

Not many years ago the printing industry was a slow and moderate business, filled with ups and downs that would end in many pitiful circumstances. The big city newspaper business needed a thorough revolutionizing and it became the lot of Ottmar Mergenthaler to devise an invention that has completely fulfilled that contention. Years ago the printing business was but a common industry—today it stands out among the greatest of arts—offering unexcelled opportunities for the business world and individual.

Stride by stride the world has gained in its knowledge, dividing this wisdom into many different branches, scientifically and professionally. The demands of the world's knowledge made the newspaper what it is today—"the poor man's school." The newspaper of today informs the world of the happenings of the past, present and future. It is historical, rhetorical and optimistic.

Being faced with these conditions the newspaper world has demanded the most modern inventions to carry out the duties that the world asks it to perform. Among these inventions is the Linotype. The Courier, like every enterprising newspaper, has listened to the call of the world, and has installed a Model K Linotype to enable itself to keep the public well informed in the news happenings of the day. The Linotype will enable the editor to better his paper, giving more news, more thorough stories and will also add to the attractiveness of the paper—giving a new type face with every issue. No more worn out type lines to make the proof reader cuss—no more loose letters to add to the make-up man's trials.

The modern business man is coming more and more each year to require that his printer shall be a man of brains and possessed of that broad understanding of the resources of his calling which enables him to give service of greater value than the mere routine manipulation of types and presses. It is this demand from the buyers of printing and newspapers which is the most promising indication of better conditions in the printing business. The Linotype plays the big hand in making this possible for the Courier management. The Linotype has revolutionized the making of newspapers and job printing—placing the industry in the first rank of master arts.

The Courier has now become a member of the "Thirteen-em Printers." A thirteen-em printer, by the way, is a man who owns and operates a Linotype while he is not keeping tab on his investments and the rest of the office force. The thirteen-em printer is a man of affairs. He holds the world by the tail, and it is up to him whether or not the people read the news. He is a power in the land. He and his machine have made it possible to make big newspapers and do it quickly and cheaply. And he has been wise enough to place a fair value on his services and get it.

The above picture is a perfect view of the Model K now in use on the Courier. "The Hand That Keeps the World Informed" is the proper title for this almost human piece of mechanism. The key-board triumph has aided the modern printing house to do more work, better and quicker. The Linotype means a clear print on the paper. Clear print aids a newspaper's circulation. Increased circulation means more advertising and more advertising means greater profits. Greater profits stimulate expansion. Expansion means more capital invested. Investments improve the conditions of the community and are a boon felt by everyone.

The Courier has grown more and more each year. The Linotype will enable this growth to be more progressive, up-to-date and far-reaching. In the past the Courier has been issuing special editions and sections and with this issue the Linotype has made the Courier a 28-page paper, full of good news and attractive advertisements. The first annual automobile number is the work of the new Model K Linotype just installed. Everything went together just like clockwork and the machine was ready for operation in a day's time. Read the Courier carefully this week and you'll agree with us that the Linotype has revolutionized the printing industry and has put Charlevoix on the map with the other good newspaper towns and trading points in the state.

Like all inventions that perform the services most appreciated by man, the Linotype is a mechanical mystery to many, and it is with pleasure that the Courier management invites the entire community to call and see it in operation.

KNOCKED IN STREET AND INJURED BY AUTOMOBILE

First Accident of Kind This Season on Street Sunday Night.

The first automobile accident of the season occurred last Sunday evening about 8:30 o'clock on South Bridge street, about opposite the S. M. Seo & Son furniture store.

The car, which was a Maxwell, owned in East Jordan, was coming north down the street, running, according to observers, at a safe rate of speed. About the time it was opposite the store, a little Indian girl by the name of Bolton, who was crossing the street, dodged a car going south and stepped directly in front of the car. The impact knocked her down, the car being stopped as quickly as possible.

She was taken to Dr. Armstrong's office, where it was found she had received a severe scalp wound, requiring several stitches. Outside of minor bruises and being badly frightened, she was not otherwise injured.

Fitting Out For Season.

REPORTS UNUSUAL INCIDENT

PICKEREL AND DOGFISH IN A DESPERATE FIGHT.

Each Tried to Swallow the Other and Both Came Out of the Fight Victorious.

The following story was told us last week by a well known farmer living near Harwood Lake, whose name we refrain from publishing on account of his extreme modesty.

He stated that he was strolling along the west shore of the lake, when his attention was attracted by a violent commotion in the water about twenty feet from the shore, caused by the struggles of a couple of large fish, a pickerel and a dogfish, which were trying to swallow each other.

Each had its antagonist by the tail when he first saw them, and he stood there until the pickerel gradually swallowed the dogfish, and the dogfish gradually swallowed the pickerel. Then they swam away in opposite directions, the pickerel with a fiendish look on its face, apparently intended for a smile.

The farmer who told this story has lived around the lake for over thirty years and he says he has never seen a struggle of its kind before.

HOUSE STRUCK BY LIGHTNING SUNDAY NIGHT

Tore Up Carpet and Furniture, but Occupants Escape.

During the violent thunderstorm early Monday morning lightning struck the house of Joe Cogswell, 307 West Upright avenue, and created considerable havoc, nearly frightening the occupants out of their wits.

The bolt went through the house, tearing up the carpet, ripping up things in the pantry, and tore a big hole in a suitcase in one of the rooms. A woodshed at the rear of the house was also badly demolished.

The occupants, who were sleeping in one of the rooms when the bolt passed through, were not injured, although badly frightened. The experience, however, is one they do not care to have repeated.

BAD WASHOUT ON THE P. M.

CLOUDBURST CAUSES HEAVY DAMAGE TO RAILROAD.

Over One Hundred Feet of Track Washed Out Two Miles South-east of Petoskey.

Traffic on the Pere Marquette Railroad north of Charlevoix is completely at a standstill on account of the enormous damage done by the heavy fall of rain Tuesday night.

About two miles southwest of Petoskey is where the greatest damage was done. In one place over 60 feet of track was washed out, leaving a hole in the roadbed nearly 20 feet deep. A short distance from here another 30 feet of track is washed out. At many places dirt and stones to the depth of over two feet are piled on the track where the roadbed had up under the heavy flood of water.

It is near this point where the Pere Marquette washouts on the northern division usually occur, and those of Tuesday night are as bad as have ever occurred.

Passengers bound south were conveyed to this city this morning by automobiles. The train from the south, due in Charlevoix at 9:50, doubled back, allowing southbound passengers to make their points of destination. A work train and as many workmen as could be hired are now busily repairing the damage, which will take several days. Temporary tracks will be laid, allowing trains to resume their regular schedule as quickly as possible. While Charlevoix experienced a heavy downpour of rain practically all night, little or no damage is reported. Reports from the affected territory north are to the effect that they experienced a cloudburst, causing heavy damage to the railroads, highways and farmers.

Courier Again Breaks Record

In spite of the recent enormous advances in the price of paper, the Courier subscribers are greeted this week by the first annual automobile number, 28 pages of live news and advertising. This is the largest edition issued by a Charlevoix county paper, and one of the largest ever issued in the state. It breaks the 24 page record set by the Courier last December.

This issue has received the co-operation of all the principal automobile dealers in this section. Contained in this section are 69 columns of live reading matter pertaining to the automobile industry and home news, and 99 columns of automobile advertising and that of the home merchants.

This advertising came to the Courier on the merits of the paper's standing—all at regular advertising rates—no special cut price inducements being offered. This is a recognition of the Courier's large circulation on the part of the advertisers and the value of the Courier as an advertising medium.

Recently my car has been giving me quite a little trouble. The battery seems to be all right, but when I put my foot on the starting pedal it will not crank the motor. If I use the crank handle and turn the motor over about eight times and then use the starting pedal it works all right. Can you tell me the trouble?

It may be that there are some short circuits which drain the battery, or it may be that the generator is not charging properly. Be careful to keep the specific gravity of the electrolyte in accordance with the instructions of the battery maker.

Lost and Found

Story of a Bridegroom With Dramatic Tastes

By CLARISSA MACKIE

When Robert Dwight married Mildred Corson every one said that they would be happy if Dwight did not go on the stage, for which he had a strong leaning. Mildred was very much in love with him, and it was feared that if he was separated from her, to be surrounded by actresses, not only would she be jealous, but he might be tempted to leave her in the lurch.

They were married early in February, intending to go south to meet the summer coming north. A large number of friends saw them joined, pelted them with rice and old shoes, and they were driven to the dock from which they were to sail. On boarding the ship, they found their stateroom a mass of flowers sent to them by their friends. In two or three days they found themselves in Jacksonville, Fla.

To Mildred Dwight, who had been a lonely little stenographer when Robert fell in love with and married her, this leisurely life of the well to do was a delightful experience.

Robert Dwight was far from poor, his business was a prosperous one, and there was no economizing during this wedding trip. And, best of all, there was waiting for them in New York a luxuriously furnished apartment which was to be home.

No wonder the Dwight were blissfully happy, and it is not surprising that on this winter morning Mildred looked from her hotel window into a summer land of tropical flowers and singing birds and decided that this was heaven indeed.

Robert had gone out to buy some cigars at a queer little tobacco shop at the end of a crooked street, and when he returned they were going for a long drive under the palms.

Mildred glanced at the clock. Robert had been gone over an hour, and the motorcar was waiting below.

Another hour ticked away and thirty minutes more.

After the manner of brides, Mildred became alarmed over the long absence of her loved one, and, twisting a white chiffon veil over her little hat, she went out to look for him. She knew the way to the tobacco shop, and she soon reached the crooked street.

Her heart sunk when she saw that down its length were an unusual number of people.

Had anything happened to Robert? She moved through the crowd, not daring to ask for fear of the answer she might receive, and she had nearly reached the end of the street and the shop when something happened—something that shattered her beautiful bubble of happiness and ended that most blissful of honeymoons.

Mildred saw Robert coming out of the tobacco shop. He paused in the doorway to light a cigarette. How handsome he looked in his well fitting white flannels, with a white hat set back on his dark hair! He tossed the match away and glanced up the street. His face brightened into radiance; his eyes glowed with excitement and lover's ardor.

Mildred thought he saw her, but he was looking at another woman, a woman who was running down the opposite pavement. Nay, she was only a slight young girl, exquisitely lovely and evidently in deep distress.

As she ran toward Robert he advanced to meet her with outstretched hands. The cigarette he had tossed aside performed a blazing paragon and fell at Mildred's feet. But she did not see it.

Her anguished eyes saw nothing save the glad look in Robert's face and the joy of the girl as she flew into his waiting arms.

"You!" cried Robert.

Mildred saw no more. She fled back along the crooked street with a wildly beating heart and an insane desire to laugh loud.

Did any woman ever have such an odd ending to a honeymoon?

An hour later she left the hotel with her trunk and handbag, and what excuse she made to the clerk I do not know, but there was no message for Robert Dwight when he came home at last to find her gone.

Six months later and it was summer time in New England. Mildred Dwight had resumed her maiden name of Mildred Corson and had obtained a responsible position in one of the large manufacturing of a Connecticut city.

As Miss Corson she acceptably filled her position and won her way into the hearts of her fellow clerks. Not one of them knew of the tragedy which had blighted her honeymoon, nor did one of them guess that Mildred had ever been a bride.

She found a pleasant boarding place and congenial friends. In the city were several good theaters and an occasional concert.

Still Mildred was very unhappy. She loved her husband, and, although the newspapers had told her that Robert was making a worldwide search for his vanished bride, she maintained silence toward those who had known her in the past.

There was a Saturday in August with its customary half holiday from work. Mildred had spent a quiet afternoon in her own room, and after the evening meal one of her new acquaintances, Clara Fisher, came with an invitation to attend one of the open air moving picture theaters.

Mildred rather liked the silent drama, so, clad in dainty white gown, the two girls entered the theatre and found seats near the front.

Overhead the stars were shining, and outside the inclosure was the hum of city street traffic. The orchestra was unusually good, and Mildred found herself strangely stirred when the violins drifted into McDowell's beautiful "The Wild Rose."

The orchestra had played the melody during their first meal in that Florida hotel, and it brought back painful memories of her brief spell of happiness.

Then the title of the play was flashed on the screen.

"Lost and Found."

With the first picture came a realizing sense of looking upon familiar scenes. Surely, surely this was the sunny south and the quaint streets those of Jacksonville.

And the girl! Mildred almost arose from her seat and cried out with surprise as she recognized the lovely face of the heroine as that of the woman who had flown to Robert's arms. So Robert's sweetheart was an actress!

One scene after another flashed before her vision, melting into a whole, which brought her, trembling and incredulous, to the moment when she found herself gazing down the crooked little street of the tobacco shop.

Then she saw her own slender figure and while veiled face looking toward the shop from which her husband, Robert, was emerging, lighting a cigarette. The entire scene was repeated, incident for incident. He tossed away the match, glanced up the street, became eager, alert, tenderly smiling, flung away his cigarette and advanced with outstretched arms to meet the heroine's graceful flying form.

Robert in the moving picture! Why, how had it happened?

All the way home she was asking herself the question, and through the darkness of her perplexity and doubt came one ray of light. During his college days Robert had been one of the college players and was considered a talented amateur actor.

"I am glad he married the girl," sighed Clara as they reached Mildred's door.

"Yes," said Mildred absently, "but he was married before that."

"Who was married before?" asked Clara, puzzled.

"Why, Robert, of course."

"But there was no Robert. His name was Arthur."

"I am stupid tonight," was Mildred's only explanation as she parted from her friend.

The next day Mildred obtained leave of absence and in her straightforward way went directly to New York and called at her husband's office.

She was trembling like a leaf when she was shown into Robert's private office.

He stared at her as one looks at the newly risen dead. His face was thin and worn and his brown hair sprinkled with gray.

"Robert?" she said meekly and then promptly fainted away. When she opened her eyes she was lying on the leather couch, and Robert was on his knees bending over her. His eyes were tender and anxious.

"Can you ever forgive me?" was her first cry.

"Yes, dearest," he said generously. "But tell me what happened to send you away from me that day? I have searched land and sea for you, and I had given you up for dead when you appeared before me."

In a few broken sentences Mildred told her husband of her surprise and jealousy that day in Jacksonville and how when she was assured of his perjury she had taken a train for the north and disappeared. Then the motion picture play on the screen had thrown a ray of light on the matter.

Robert's explanation made that ray a brilliant light of understanding which cleared up the mystery which had parted bride and groom for almost a year.

"You remember I told you I always acted in our college theatricals," he reminded her, "and many of my friends had urged me to enter the profession. But I did not seriously consider it and only now and then basked to tread the stage."

"But that morning in Jacksonville I started down to the tobacco shop with only one thought in my mind—to get back to you. As I turned into the street I met my old friend of college days, Jack Hudson, president of our 'Players' club. He was glad to see me and tearing his hair insanely over the fact that his star performer had come down with the measles that very morning."

"Buddling fell upon me like a long lost brother and pleaded with me to take the part of the measles one. So I did, and when I reached the hotel, full of my experiences and with Miss Gray and Hudson accompanying me to meet the only woman in the world, my wife had vanished without a word. So you believed that I was false to you?"

Mildred's punishment had been great. Indeed, and she humbly acknowledged her lack of faith. "But how was I to know?" she asked pitifully.

Robert smiled wisely.

"In great love there is no forgetting of faith," he gently reminded her as he drew her face to his shoulder. "As the man in the play lost and found his sweetheart, so I lost my wife and have found her."

"With a greater love for you and unwavering faith," dashed Mildred.

DAIRY GOSSIP.

Don't let the cows out in the storms to stand around. It does not pay.

The cows that produce the largest amounts of butter fat do it most economically.

The calves should by all means be kept in clean, well lighted and ventilated stables.

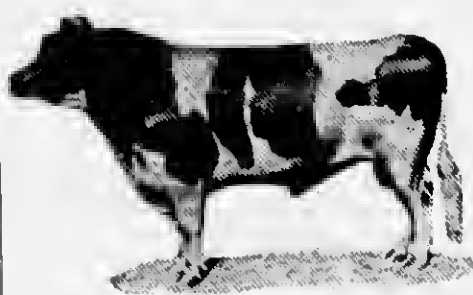

A gallon of cream testing 25 per cent should churn a little over two pounds of butter.

The object of cow testing and keeping records is to improve the herd and increase the output.

PRODUCTIVENESS IN AGED COWS IMPORTANT

It is of paramount importance to the dairyman that a dairy cow should not only be a large producer in her prime, but that she should possess the constitution to continue to be a profitable cow and a regular breeder to a ripe old age. A cow that is still lucrative when she is sixteen or eighteen years old is worth far more to her owner than a cow whose productive life ceases when she is about nine or ten years old, for in the latter instance the depreciation is so great that the profits are seriously curtailed.

The official records made by the cows of each breed ten years of age or over give perhaps the best idea of productiveness of the different breeds in old age. The Holstein cow, Valdesa Scott II, who made at the age of eight years two months one day, 33.50 pounds fat from 694.6 pounds milk in seven days, came back at the age of ten years two months sixteen days and made 29.99 pounds fat from 611.4 pounds milk in seven days, and 113.96 pounds fat from 2,473.7 pounds milk in thirty days. These butter records for seven and thirty days are unequalled by any ten-year-old cow in the world, says a correspondent of Kilmall's Dairy Farmer. Among the most striking records made by the oldest cows in the advanced registries is that of the Holstein cow Hark, who made 13.61 pounds fat from 418.4 pounds milk in seven days, freshening at eighteen years ten months twenty-one days. Another Holstein cow, Lavera Hortensia Beauty, calving at the age of seventeen years eleven months fourteen days, made

With her large frame, strength and vigor, the Holstein cow comes naturally by a hardiness that lessens her susceptibility to disease, makes it possible for her to thrive under ordinary care and gives her a long and useful life. With these same factors go unusual digestive powers, making her the greatest of machines for the conversion of the coarse feeds of the farm into money value. The bull shown is a Holstein.

16.83 pounds fat from 581 pounds milk in seven days, beginning her record seventy-two days after freshening. The oldest Guernsey cow in their advanced registry, Belle Brandon, made 428.43 pounds fat from 8,061.3 pounds milk in a year, calving at the age of fifteen years.

Pegs Irene II, a Jersey who holds all yearly records for her breed for cows over twelve years of age, made 15.75 pounds fat from 262.3 pounds milk in seven days and 500.4 pounds fat from 9,230 pounds milk in 365 days, calving at eighteen years of age.

The average profitable productive life of a cow is being greatly prolonged by the official test, and it will probably be long until instances of great records made by cows sixteen and twenty years old will be as common as the large records made by cows eleven and twelve years of age that are being reported at the present time.

Skim a Fairly Thick Cream.

Farmers will make more money by separating a reasonably thick cream than a thin cream. Skimming high test cream leaves more skim milk on the farm to feed to hogs, calves and chickens. Skim milk utilized in this way has a feeding value of about 35 cents per hundred, while if the milk is left in the cream nothing is realized. The buttermaker usually wants a cream testing around 35 or 40 per cent butter fat. In the winter if the cream is above 40 per cent it is rather difficult to get the cream all out of one can into another or into a vat. Cream testing about 33 per cent in the winter and 40 per cent in the summer is right for butter making.

Oilmeal Better Than Cottonseed.

We consider oilmeal a little better feed on the whole, than cottonseed meal, says Howard's Dairyman. Oilmeal is not as rich in protein as cottonseed meal, but it contains other properties which give it a preference. This is especially true if there are no slag or roots to feed. Oilmeal has a good diuretic effect upon the animal's digestion. In other words, it tends to overcome the constipating effect of dry feed. It helps to keep the animal's digestion in good condition.

SALTING OF MINES.

Modern Engineers Have Eliminated the Old Time Faker.

Many mining engineers at one time or another have been "salted," but few ever mention it. At the most they may apologetically tell of it in after years as something that happened in their younger days when they were green hands. Few tell about it promptly, when exposure may do some good, says the editor of the Engineering and Mining Journal.

There is nothing disgraceful in an engineer's being salted, in so far as he is concerned. The disgrace belongs to the man who commits the crime. Nor is the engineer justly open to criticism unless he has been grossly careless or has displayed inexcusable negligence, neither of which can generally be charged to an experienced engineer. No matter how careful be the precautions to safeguard his samples that the engineer may take, the villainous will find ways to tamper with them if they be clever enough. There is far less of this now than there used to be for the reason that the engineer has developed systems of check samples and other methods that act as tell-tales, and there is no particular use in anybody salting a lot of samples if the trick is going to be discovered promptly.

In many of our mines of nowadays, moreover, such as the porphyry copper mines, the sampling is so extensive an undertaking, running so long and employing so many men, that a salting system almost beyond conception would have to be devised in order to be successfully carried through. On the other hand, the drill sampling of gold dredging ground is singularly difficult to safeguard, and if there be united with that a wide reaching system, possible under certain conditions, as it appears, the combination is well nigh irresistible.

The Ounce of Prevention.

Supply the poultry with a hopper of bran where they can help themselves at will; also supply them with charcoal and grit. In short, do your best to keep them in good health. There is a good deal more sense in preventing a chicken from getting sick than in curing it after it gets ill.

JUST THINK IT OVER.

The Charlevoix man who is always criticizing Charlevoix is like the kid who hankers for a chance to pull the other kid's nose. He forgets that the condition of the town is most likely brought about by his own shortcomings and those of others of his kind. He sees only the delinquencies of others and forgets that perchance his own may be even more glaring and destructive. He weaves a halo around his precious brow and bespatters that of his neighbor. He sees evil where good exists, failure where success is assured, and poverty when prosperity is in the ascendant. If he, like the unruly kid, wants to pull anybody's nose, he would confer a favor upon suffering humanity by tweaking the bump on his own face. It needs it.

DO YOU KNOW OF ONE?

Do you know of a mail order house that has ever contributed one cent in taxes or otherwise toward the expenses of Charlevoix?

Do you know of one that has ever contributed a cent toward our churches or our schools?

Do you know of one that has ever contributed a cent to the welfare of the community in any manner, shape or form?

Do you know of one that has done anything but pull money out of the community, money which never comes back?

If not, why do you continue to enrich people who never do anything for you and yours, and yet demand their pound of flesh in advance?

KEEP RIGHT AT IT.

You have, we presume, been doing a little cleaning up and polishing up around your premises of late. That is, good and very commendable and we admire you for it. But let us gently whisper in your ear that one lone clean-up is not enough. Things look nice, and clean, and pretty just now, but in a few weeks they will begin to take on a dingy and ragged appearance, and every additional week will but emphasize the depressing and destructive effects of indifference and neglect. Do it again, and keep right on doing it at frequent intervals. It will add cheer to your own life and to those of your family and friends. It's a good thing to do and we hope to compliment you on keeping right on with it.

To Cemetery Lot Owners.

No work will be done on any lot in the cemetery until the regular amount charged is deposited with the City Clerk.

By Order of Cemetery Board.

Showed Them How.

In "Welsh Humor" is this story: "Sir Foulk Fitzwarren was recounting to his knights his exploits against the Saracens. These being calmly received, Sir Foulk said, 'But right here, the other day, I jumped from the ground to the top of my castle.' The knights being skeptical, Sir Foulk invited them to come the next day and see him perform the feat. When they assembled he jumped up one step of the stairway and continued jumping, step by step, till he was on the top of the tallest tower. 'But we could do that too,' chorused the knights. 'Not till I showed you how,' retorted the redoubtable warrior."

The Result.

"His wife made a man of him."
"He looks like a homestead job."—

CLOUD FORMATIONS.

Why the Masses of Moisture Are Able to Float in the Air.

Clouds consist of particles of condensed water vapor and in some cases of extremely fine spicules of ice, which is also formed from water vapor. Water vapor which arises by evaporation from the surface of seas, lakes, etc., is lighter than dry air at the same temperature and pressure. It is also invisible.

It disseminates itself through the atmosphere and ascends to great heights. There, owing to the fall of temperatures and to other causes, it begins to condense into particles which are slightly heavier than air and which become visible clouds.

Owing to the influence of winds and of rising currents as well as to the fact that the condensed particles are nearly as light as air the clouds remain floating, like fine suspended matter in water, until further condensation creates particles of sufficient size to form raindrops, whose relative great weight brings them rapidly to the ground.

That clouds do slowly descend even when not condensed into rain may be observed when they are seen to dissipate and disappear without apparent cause. This is caused by the cloud's descent to a level where a rise of temperature causes the condensed water vapor to revitalize, thus becoming again invisible.—New York Journal.

MOST ANCIENT TREATY.

Carved in Stone on the Walls of Two Egyptian Temples.

On the walls of two of Egypt's greatest temples, that of Karnak and the Ramesseum at Thebes, carved in the everlasting stone of the dry land of the Nile, says the Christian Herald, is the oldest international treaty known to man. Rameses the Great, one of the signers, is the best known man of remote antiquity. Khetasar (the czar of the Kheta or Hittites), the other party to the treaty, is unknown except to a few, and his nation is little known even to the scholars.

The Hittites were a mighty race, whose empire, equal in rank with the mighty empire of Egypt and Babylonia, once extended over 400,000 square miles of territory in Asia Minor and Syria. A few years ago practically nothing was known of the life and civilization of these mysterious people.

They are mentioned in the Bible and in the Egyptian and Assyrian records, but until very recently their own story had never been read by modern man. Today, thanks to the excavations that were carried on at the capital city of Carchemish, much has been learned about this great group of tribes, and orderly evidence about them is now available for the first time in 2,000 years.

Scientist Who Couldn't Light a Fire.

Lord Kelvin, like Lord Morley, once amused a Scottish audience with a display of ignorance. At a lecture in Edinburgh, with Lord Kelvin in the chair, the Duke of Argyll was taken suddenly ill. "When the aged peer was carried down to one of the waterooms," said a local paper, "one of the first things to be thought of was the lighting of a fire, and this task was tackled by the duke's host, Lord Kelvin. But instead of placing some paper in the grate and some wood on that in the orthodox manner, he amazed the on-lookers by desperate efforts to kindle a handful of sticks at a gas burner. Ordinary mortals may be pardoned for taking some satisfaction in the fact that even so great a philosopher as Lord Kelvin did not know how to light a fire."

Oddest of Queer Fishes.

A queer fish that does not swim is the "sargasso fish," known to sailors as the "frogfish." It lives in that vast mass of floating seaweed called the Sargasso sea, in mid-Atlantic.

Its pectoral fins are so modified and developed as to resemble arms, and it uses them for clinging to the weed. Very gaudily colored, it changes its hues to match the aquatic vegetation by which it is surrounded, and when the latter decays and turns brown it assumes a corresponding shade.

The fish lays its eggs in a jelly-like mass, which, absorbing a great quantity of water, becomes three times as big as the mother fish herself, assuming the form of a narrow raft three or four feet long and two to four inches wide.

Looking Back.

"This car of yours seems to give you great pleasure."

"Yes, I often wonder how I ever got along without it," answered the motorist loftily. "Walking tires are dreadfully and is—er—somewhat plebeian."

"Pardon me for reminding you of the painful past, but I happen to know that you used to cover considerable territory as a mere pedestrian."—Birmingham Age-Herald

After the Wedding.

"Your pa promised to give a dowry of 20,000 marks. When is he going to pay?"

"Well, if he promised 20,000 marks he meant 2,000, and you ought not to insist on such a trifling sum!"—Meggendorfer Blaetter

McSwine's Gun.

McSwine's gun is a prodigious cavity in the cliffs on the coast of County Donegal, Ireland, into which the tide rushes with such force as to produce a sound like the booming of a cannon, which can be heard twenty or thirty miles away.

THIS IS YEAR STATE BOARD

WILL EQUALIZE ASSESSED VALUATION OVER MICHIGAN.

Charlevoix County Will Equalize on the Fourth Monday in June This Year.

The state board of equalization--consisting of the secretary of state, auditor general, state superintendent of public instruction, state treasurer and the chairman of the state board of tax commissioners--meets this year at the office of the state board of auditors on the third Monday in August.

These meetings are held on every third and fifth consecutive years, the last one being held three years ago and the next one in 1918. The meetings are held for the purpose of equalizing the assessments on all the taxable property of the state, and the law creating this board provides that the various boards of supervisors of the state shall hold a meeting on the fourth Monday of June in each year prior to the state board's meet.

Charlevoix Board to Meet.

In conformity to this law the board of supervisors of Charlevoix county will meet on that date this year their last adjournment being subject to the call of the chairman and clerk of the board. At these June meetings the supervisors equalize their assessment rolls in the manner provided by law, and each supervisor shall add up the columns of his assessment roll, shall enumerate the number of acres of land on his roll, and shall enumerate the value of real and personal property assessed so as to give the aggregate of each.

It shall be the duty of the clerk of the board to prepare a tabular statement from the aggregates of the several rolls, and a certified copy of this statement signed by the chairman and clerk of the board shall be forwarded to the auditor general on or before the second Monday in July following. Charlevoix county should have representative citizens before the state board of equalization and they will be able to do some good.

Send Delegates.

Three prominent men of the county should attend the meetings, two of whom are supervisors. The law creating the board of equalization provides that any county may be represented before the board at its regular meeting, sending duly accredited representatives. The date and time of hearing of such representatives will be fixed by the state board and oral statements will be taken down in shorthand and filed in the office of the auditor general.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

To the Electors of Charlevoix County:

I have decided to be a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds on the Republican ticket, at the August primaries. I have been a resident of Charlevoix county 35 years and would respectfully solicit your support. M. A. McDonald, Pol. Adv. 1912 Eveline Township.

HOW TO WARD OFF DISEASES BY HAVING CLEAN HANDS.

Most epidemics of typhoid fever nowadays are ultimately traced to a single person who, either sick with the disease, or sickening with it, convalescent from it or acting as a chronic "carrier" of the germs, literally hands the infection to those who happen to be in contact with him.

But if typhoid and dysentery and cholera were the only diseases spread by unwashed hands we wouldn't say a word--we'd leave it to the health authorities. Unfortunately a lot of other diseases are peddled about in the same manner, such as diphtheria, pneumonia, sore throat and "cold" in the head, and with the exception of diphtheria and pneumonia these diseases do not interest the health authorities.

There are families where children sit at table and say grace with unwashed hands. There are other families where parents take a squint at the children's hands and, if they discover no microbes thereon, let the youngsters sit right down and shovel in whatever contamination may have been collected through the day. Is it any wonder grandma still has occasional seeming indication of her idea that "sugar makes worms?" Worms make worms, and children help the work along by transplanting the eggs from contaminated soil to food and from the food to their own innocent mouths.

BUILDING WIRE FENCES.

Fifty Per Cent of Those in This Country Are Improperly Constructed. (Prepared by United States Department of Agriculture.)

The cost of fencing is a considerable item on every farm. In constructing his fences therefore it will pay the farmer to see that the work is well done and that the full benefit is obtained from the labor and material employed. It is no exaggeration to say that 50 per cent of the wire fences in use today are not properly constructed.

The ends and corners are by far the most important elements of a fence. It is absolutely essential that they remain firm and solid if the fence is to be rigid. Points to be borne in mind when setting wooden end or corner posts are: First, the posts used should be large enough to give sufficient strength; second, they should be set deep enough not to heave through the action of frost; the end or corner post being put into the ground to a depth of four and a half feet and the brace post four feet deep; and third, the brace post should not be set so close to the end post and at such an abrupt incline that there is a tendency for it to force the end post out of the ground. It is generally considered that the two posts should be set about ten feet apart, which would require a brace twelve feet long. The brace is usually inserted in a mortise on the end post twelve inches from the ground line.

Where steel posts are used the instructions furnished by the manufacturer should be carefully followed. Concrete end and corner posts, should be made of a good grade of concrete and thoroughly re-enforced. The re-enforcement, which may be done with scrap iron such as wagon tires, axles, etc., should be placed so that the strain caused by the pull of the fence will bear against it.

The distance that line posts should be set apart depends on the location of the fence and the number and kinds of stock to be turned. In the field fence the common practice is to set them approximately every twenty feet; around barn lots and pens, posts are set more closely together. Many farmers set posts one rod apart, which is a convenient arrangement because it supplies a quick method for measuring portions of the field, checking up the amount of work accomplished each day, etc.

In woven wire fencing the necessary tools are a woven wire stretcher, a single wire stretcher, for use in attaching the fence to the end posts, a pair of wire cutters, a barbed wire stretcher, a splicing tool, and hammers for stapling and fastening the fence.

Before the wire is stretched the fence row should be freed from obstructions and ridges and uneven surfaces should be smoothed off so that the fence will be straight on the ground. The wire should be securely fastened to one of the end posts and then unreeled.

After the wire is unreeled the stretchers are attached, leaving plenty of chain to draw up the slack in the wire. The stretching should be continued until the line wires are so taut that they cannot be pressed together by hand. The fence should then be securely fastened to the corner toward which it is being stretched. The next step is to fasten the wire on the line posts. In doing this the line wires should be kept as nearly horizontal as possible and should not zigzag up and down from post to post, following small irregularities in the ground line. The fabric should not be fastened tightly to each post, but the staples should permit for lateral movement of the wire. This will provide for the contraction and expansion of the wire under varying weather conditions and will also on the entire fence line to bear a part of the force of any blow that is directed against the fence.

The final step is to place a strand of barbed wire about four inches above the top of the woven wire, so that the stock will not be able to get their heads between the two. A woven wire fence should not be considered complete without this strand of barbed wire. It protects the woven wire by preventing stock from reaching over and crowding it down.

Solid Hog Comfort.

This hoghouse may be made of any convenient size. Run here is the bill of material needed for one 12 by 12 foot ground plan.

Eight 2 by 4 inch by 8 foot plates; ridge and floor joists; two 2 by 4 inch by 8 foot end plates; four 1 by 12 inch by 12 foot floor and side; two 1 by 12 inch by 18 foot ends; six 1 by 12 inch by 8 foot roof; walls and two pair six inch strap hinges.

You will notice that a floor is provided for. This makes the hoghouse dry and warm for winter use. On bright days open the roof door to let in the sunshine.

The roof door is also convenient for the purpose of watching the sow during farrowing time.—Farm and Fire side.

FOURTH ANNUAL TROUT SUPPER

HELD AT ELLSWORTH LAST TUESDAY EVENING.

Over Forty-five Present—Event Always Looked Forward to by Its Members.

The fourth annual trout supper was held at Harris hall Tuesday evening, May 2nd, about forty-five being present. A bountiful supper was served, consisting of trout in several ways, together with salads, cakes and other good things, served with the usual Ellsworth spirit.

L. VanSkiver's side won over Art. Ely's in aggregate of catch, the losers, therefore, cooking and serving the supper, following the custom of previous years.

Wm. Boss, Jr., made the largest individual catch, 35, and M. Struick easily won the contest in amount consumed by persistently pawing at every platter passed.

The following affiliated clubs were represented: Ananias Hunting Club by Judge Harris, chief commissary officer and medical adviser; White Line Bass Club by L. VanSkiver, pilot; Wee-Catch Trout Club by Geo. Hunter; the Big Haul Blue-Gill Club by Art. Ely; the Old Maids' Club by several, of course.

The Old Maids' Club claim the honor of originating these suppers, but the Ananias Club claim half the credit on the grounds of teaching the ladies how to serve the fish.

Among the out of town visitors were Conductor Hawker of the Pere Marquette and M. H. Butters of Ludington, who expressed their appreciation of the hospitality shown to them.

Mr. VanSkiver, as chairman, named the following committee of arrangement for the year: Mrs. E. R. Harris, Mrs. C. E. Bearas, Mrs. M. Struick, Mrs. L. VanSkiver and Mrs. L. K. Clark.

How does horsepower, as applied in mechanics, compare with the horsepower of a horse? In other words, how do they measure horsepower?

The rate at which an engine does work is often measured in units called a horsepower, one horsepower being work done to the extent of thirty-three foot pounds per minute, supposed to represent the maximum rate at which work could be done by a horse. Work done by an engine may mean either of two things—namely, the total work done by the engine, or the effective work done by the engine. Both kinds of work are obtained by calculation. The total work is called the indicated horsepower. The useful or effective work is that which remains of the total work after a deduction has been made of the work necessary to overcome the frictional resistance due to bearings and other working parts. This useful work is called brake horsepower.

In measuring the indicated horsepower of a motor there are several factors to be considered—pressure on the piston in pounds per square inch, the area of the piston in square inches, the stroke in feet and number of strokes per minute. The product of these divided by 33,000 will give the indicated horsepower.

School Notes

ROCK ELM SCHOOL.

Saturday afternoon the members of the Bird Club met on the school grounds and after spending some time playing games, supper, consisting of sandwiches, fish and roasted potatoes, was served.

Friday afternoon the school went fielding and brought back more vines and shrubs, which they planted around the schoolhouse. More birdhouses have also been put up.

The mothers' meeting was well attended. The regular schoolwork continued until time for the afternoon recess, giving those present an opportunity to know something of the work being done. After recess a short but enjoyable program, consisting of songs and recitations, was rendered by the school, after which Miss Stewart gave us a very interesting talk. All who were present felt that the afternoon had been pleasantly and profitably spent.

FOR HOUSEKEEPERS.

How to Remember Certain Proportions in Cooking Common Things.

Four eggs to one quart of milk for custards.

One teaspoonful of vanilla to one quart of custard.

Two ounces of gelatin to one and three-quarters quarts of liquid.

Four heaping tablespoonsful of cornstarch to one quart of milk.

One even tablespoonful of baking powder to one cupful of flour.

One teaspoonful of soda to one pint of sour milk. One teaspoonful of soda to one pint of molasses.

One teaspoonful of baking powder is equal to one-half teaspoonful of soda and one teaspoonful of cream of tartar.

In preparing for baking, mix dry materials in one bowl and liquids in another; combine them quickly and put at once into the oven.

The oven for baking bread should be hot enough to brown a teaspoonful of flour in five minutes. For biscuits it should brown in one minute.

Robbing a pie crust with butter a few minutes before it is time to take it from the oven will make it crisp.

How to "Do" Your Hair For Evening This Winter.

Colours of tortoise shell or imitation amber, with touches of gold inlay on the ends, are intended to be thrust through the loose knot of hair.

Pins whose tips are on hinges so that they may be folded down daily after they are thrust into the hair are set with rhinestones and with colored gems.

Tall Spanish combs of crystal set with brilliants that are beautiful in dark hair or the gray hair of the middle aged woman make stunning hair ornaments.

Gray, plus of artistic shades and shapes are popular not only with white haired women, but also with girls who have blue eyes, since the use of gray pins or a gray comb in the hair will accentuate the blue and deepen it.

I have a friend who cleans carbon out with salt. He runs his engine two or three minutes to warm up, then removes the spark plugs and puts one and one-half normal salt tablets in each cylinder and then runs the car about fifteen miles. By that time there is no carbon remaining in engine or valves. Will the chemical action set up by the salt and heat do any damage to the cylinders?

While salt will burn off the carbon by chemical action due to the combination of salt and carbon into sodium carbonate, it is very likely that the combination of chlorine with the hydrogen in gasoline would form hydrochloric acid, which would tend to have an intense rusting action on the cylinders.

The clutch of my car is faced with some fabric, and for the past month I have been bothered by the clutch slipping. Will you kindly suggest a remedy? The car will stand in the middle of the street on high gear and not affect the running of the engine—that is, the clutch in high will not retard the engine to any appreciable degree, although it will hold on low and second, but better in the former.

There must be something radically wrong with the particular facing on that car and would suggest your having a new clutch facing applied. If this does not remedy the trouble there must be some interference with the clutch entering the flywheel as far as it should. Perhaps the clutch pedal is striking the floorboard, preventing it from engaging. It is very possible that heavy grease has leaked into the clutch housing and that the lining is more in need of thorough cleaning than anything else.

Most Gas In Anthracite.

The volume of gas given out by coal subject to laboratory examinations varies over a wide range, says the Coal Age. English bituminous coal gives a volume of gas 75 to 82 per cent of its own volume, cannel coal from the same country 40 to 70 per cent, semi-bituminous 30 per cent, steam coal 500 to 811 per cent and the typical coal 1,000 per cent. The coal at Nanticoke, Pa., gives a volume of gas 3.1 times its own volume (310 per cent); that at Benton, Ill., after seventy-five weeks, 1.82 times; that at Harrisburg, Ill., after forty weeks, 1.05 times; that at Poonbontas, Va., 0.947 times in forty-five weeks and that at Connellsville 0.16 times in sixty weeks. It will be seen that nutbracite contains the most gas.

To Straighten a Miter Saw.

In using a miter saw on wood with a spring to it the saw is apt to stick, so that a warp or uneven cutting edge is produced, which can be seen by sighting lengthwise of the teeth. This warp can be removed by striking the top of the metal flange on the back of the saw, directly opposite the warp or kink, a sharp blow with a hammer.

The necessary force can be determined by beginning with a light blow and increasing the force until the edge is straight.

Removing Oil From Marble.

In shops it is sometimes desirable to remove grease and oil from marble floors or marble used in machine construction. An easy and effective way is to apply strong lye and quicklime. Any strength solution can be made as needed, and no matter how strong it may be, it will not injure the marble.

The best method of application is simply to throw on the lye, powder with the quicklime and use some water with a scrub brush.

$250,000,000 FOR HIGHWAYS.

This Huge Sum Was Spent In 1914 For Roads In United States.

Very nearly a quarter of a billion dollars were spent in highway construction and maintenance in the United States during the year 1914, as shown by statistics issued by the office of public roads and rural engineering. One-fifth of the work was done under the state aid system, the various state highway departments paying $24,220,000 and the counties and townships $25,220,000. State aid laws are in effect in forty-four states. New Jersey having instituted the system in 1881 and Tennessee and Georgia being among the last to adopt it.

Thirteen states spent $25,000,000 during the year in the construction and maintenance of state roads solely at their own expense, making a total of almost $50,000,000 paid directly out of state funds. One-third as much ($12,500,000) was spent for repairs and maintenance as was spent for new construction ($35,500,000). This shows the enormous loss resulting from the building of types of roads whose surfaces are not durable under present traffic conditions. Six eastern states paid two-thirds as much out of the state treasury for maintenance as for new construction.

NEW PLAN IN LEGISLATION NOW PENDING IN CONGRESS.

Would Affect 50,000 Postmasters if Plan Should Become a Law—More Democratic Economy.

Should a certain piece of legislation that is pending in congress and that is receiving ardent backing from the postmaster general be enacted into a law, Postmaster Geo. T. Finucan would become the postmaster of not only Charlevoix, but Charlevoix county outside of Charlevoix would become sub-stations and operate under the direction of the Charlevoix office. The same sort of situation would be created in every other county throughout the country.

That such legislation is ever contemplated will be news to most persons, as it has attracted virtually no attention. Under its sweeping provisions 50,000 postmasterships throughout the country would be abolished. The officers themselves would not be wiped out, but after the postmasterships had been abolished the offices would be open to the appointment of superintendents. Postmaster General Burleson is openly and earnestly backing the legislation and doing all he can to procure its passage.

The legislation proposes a reorganization of the postal savings system. The house committee on post-office and postroads refused to recommend it, and the bill as it passed the house did not contain the provision. It was incorporated in the senate bill, however, and is now one of the amendments in dispute between the house and senate conferences. The provision which would go far toward uprooting the established postal service reads as follows: "Hereafter, the postmaster general may establish under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe one or more branch offices, non-accounting, for the transaction of any postoffice business which may be required for the convenience of the public." In a statement before the house committee explaining the operation of the proposed legislation, the First Assistant Postmaster General stated:

"By making the county the unit and subsidiary to the main office situated at the county seat the number of accounting offices would be reduced from 56,000 to 3,000. The county postmaster would be assisted by a clerk in charge under his immediate supervision at each subsidiary office.

It is said that more than 50 members of the house have been in conference with the postmaster general recently in regard to this part of the act. The conferences have been at the request of the postmaster general, who is insistent on the approval of the item.

There was a similar proposition once before when the postoffice department wanted to get rid of assistant postmasters by abolishing the office. Congress would not stand for it, and it is believed by many that the measure will be repealed in the house on the present wholesale proposition.

It is anticipated that there will be a general and sweeping opposition to the measure from local communities that would lose their postmaster and become sub-stations if the legislation goes through congress.

WILL NOT COMPETE.

Gleaners Withdraw from Exhibiting Products at County Fair.

The Gleaners wished to enter an exhibit at the county fair to be among themselves, the same as the exhibits held by the grange each year. The Gleaners were informed that in order to enter into the fair exhibits they would have to compete against the Grange. This the Gleaners will not do and they immediately withdrew from the plan of holding exhibits at the fair. Contrary to reports in circulation, the Gleaners have not and will not do anything to fight the Grange in its efforts for better farming, but are desirous of co-operating with them in every possible way.

Suffrage Notes

"No man who is opposed to woman suffrage will ever again be elected president of the United States," said Chief Justice Clark of North Carolina recently. There are twelve suffrage states and all are in this doubtful column. No candidate can afford to ignore the vote in these suffrage states.

Senator Weeks of Massachusetts is a possible candidate for president. He has been a strong anti-suffragist. In case he is nominated can you imagine him or his party spellbinders saying in Colorado or California: "We do not believe women know enough to vote? Will you vote for our candidates?"

The outlook in Iowa for a decided suffrage victory in June is most encouraging. The papers of the state, the candidates for governor, and eight out of the eleven Iowa congressmen are all favorable and are aiding in the campaign.

Some women may not know as much as some men, but it was recently shown in Illinois that some women know more. It was at the election in Ardmore, about 15 miles from Chicago. Ninety-seven per cent. of the possible vote was cast; 67 ballots were found to be defective; of these 21 ballots had been cast by women and 46 by men; 120 women and 118 men had voted altogether.

In New South Wales in Australia, where woman suffrage prevails, a woman does not cease to be a natural born citizen in case she marries a foreigner, as is true in the United States.

The United States census is soon to make public information regarding the fearful death rate among babies. Out of every 100,000 native white boy babies born nearly 5,000, or about 5 per cent., die during the first month. Girl babies have a somewhat better chance, as a little less than 4,000, or less than 4 per cent., girl babies die during the first month. Better care for the mothers would save many of these precious baby lives.

Will Teach in Iowa.

Miss Jessie M. Himes, for a number of years in charge of the Charlevoix Normal Room, will teach during the summer vacation in the State Agricultural College at Ames, Iowa. The college situated there has the reputation of being the largest in the United States with the exception of Cornell, and it is quite a compliment to Charlevoix's teaching staff to have one of their members asked to fill the position tendered to Miss Himes.

Birthday and Farewell Party.

The members of the 2nd grade were entertained last Friday afternoon by their teacher, Miss Correll, in honor of the birthday of a member of the class, also as a farewell to Forrest Bartholomew, Jr., who is about to move with his parents to Chicago. The afternoon was greatly enjoyed by the members of the class.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS

Events of Interest to Courier Readers

Lou and Guy Hankey of Petoskey have purchased the new elevator erected at Onaway eight months ago by D. & D. Mahoney and which has been operated but a short time. The elevator has a capacity of 20,000 bushels of grain and will be used for wheat, beans, corn, oats, and in fact all kinds of grain raised in that section.

Guy Hankey is quoted as saying that Onaway is a great bean raising section and that the land there is especially adapted to this crop. "We will probably receive more beans there than any other kind of grain," said Mr. Hankey while discussing the crop situation there.

The Hankey Milling Company now owns elevators at Petoskey, Boyne City, Gaylord, Onaway and a half dozen other North Michigan towns.

Must Cut Out Smoking.

Bruce Nutt, a young Cheboygan lad, was before Judge Humphrey one day last week charged with smoking cigarettes on the public streets in violation of the state law, which says "thou shalt not if you are under 18 years of age." He was assessed a small fine and costs, which he paid. Truant officer Finn apprehended him and took him before the judge. Mr. Finn says that there are more to follow and if the law is meant to be of any good he is going to see that it is lived up to, and in this he has the backing of the good people of the city and county, who can see no good in a boy sucking his life away on the vile pimp sticks.

Name City Manager.

W. R. Caldwell of Detroit, a man widely experienced in all branches of city work and city government, has been employed by the new city council as Petoskey's first city manager.

His salary was fixed at $2,000 per year and his term of office until the first Monday in November, 1917. The contract under which he will work contains a clause that the contract can be terminated by either party upon a 30-day written notice.

Mr. Caldwell named City Engineer Tripp as assistant city manager. The city manager will have the naming of a city marshal, chief of the fire department and policemen in the very near future.

Used Profane Language.

John Luff of Cheboygan was before Justice King last week charged with using profane language in the presence of children. The complaint was made by Deputy Sheriff Lew Berry. Luff was fined $15, and costs, amounting in all to $18.85, or thirty days in the county jail. Not having the necessary funds with him, he was taken to jail.

Widow Provided For.

The arbitration board appointed to decide upon the compensation due Mrs. James Kent for the death of her husband gave her $6.72 per week for a period of 300 weeks.

Mr. Kent was killed at the Boyne City Chemical Company several weeks ago while unloading a car of coal.

The widow appointed E. A. Ruegger to act for her on the board, the chemical company A. G. Urquhart, and the state board sent an agent. These three constituted the board of arbitration provided for by the Workmen's Compensation Law of the State of Michigan.

Will Celebrate the Fourth.

Members of the city council at Petoskey have gone as record as favoring a big celebration there on Tuesday, July 4, and Mayor A. B. Klise, under instructions of a resolution, named a financial committee to take care of the financial part of the celebration.

These men are expected to secure the money to be contributed by the business and professional men of the city toward the event and at a future meeting will report to the council and will work with other committees yet to be appointed to make the celebration a big success.

With the city backing the movement officially it should be the biggest thing ever pulled off in Northern Michigan. There will be auto races, boat races, ball games, horse races and all manner of amusements and entertainments.

Rules on Fly Paper Law.

Announcement has been made at the attorney general's office that the enforcement of the so-called "poisonous fly paper" law, passed in 1915, is up to the prosecuting attorney of each county.

For weeks manufacturers and dealers in fly paper have asked state officers to tell them who will test fly papers to determine whether they are banned.

The law makes it a penalty to manufacture or sell any fly paper containing poison except under certain conditions. It practically bars all papers or solutions for fly killing which are poisonous.

Joins Canadian Army.

Don A. McIntosh, son of Captain J. V. McIntosh of Traverse City, who commanded a local company during the Spanish-American War, has enlisted in the Canadian contingent and has been sent to the government school at Winnipeg for instruction. He has been living in Saskatchewan for several years, having gone there and taken up land at Moose Jaw.

Junk Dealer Fined.

The case against H. A. Arnold of Boyne City, charged with having purchased junk from boys under the age of 16 years, was heard by Justice Hammond last week. Prosecutor Lewis represented the people, while Mr. Arnold acted as his own counsel.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty and Justice Hammond placed the fine at $25 and costs, with an alternative of 30 days in the county jail.

The defendant was permitted to go upon his own recognizance pending the payment of fine. He declares he will serve the sentence, and will doubtless go to the county bastile.

There are circumstances which mitigate the feeling of many in the case of Mr. Arnold, although he is admittedly guilty of technically violating the law. He has never been formally notified, as was the dealer previously prosecuted. He has been in business but a little over a year and has been found straightforward, honest and conscientious.

RUNS RESORT SPECIAL.

Well Known Pere Marquette Conductor to Have Charge of Fine Train.

Conductor William A. Hawker will run the resort special between Grand Rapids and Bay View during the 1916 season and a main line passenger train on the Petoskey division the remainder of the year. Everyone who travels occasionally or regularly in Northwestern Michigan knows Mr. Hawker. He is sixth on the passenger conductors' seniority list and began his services with the Pere Marquette in September, 1891. He was promoted to be a freight conductor in 1892, and since June 1, 1898, has been a passenger conductor.

THEATRICAL

One of the greatest character studies ever contributed to the American stage, "David Harum," enacted for several years by the distinguished star, Wm. H. Crane, has at last been converted to the screen. William H. Crane makes his first appearance in motion pictures in this quaint portrayal in a five-part production of the Famous Players Film Company on the Paramount program.

The human note that is struck in the early part of the production, and maintained consistently throughout the story, is the main strength of the subject. In all the eulogistic reviews of the play that have appeared in newspapers throughout the country its human qualities and fidelity to truth have always been emphasized as the dominant keynote of the drama. It is this lack of exaggeration in the types and events depicted that make the subject a veritable page out of the book of life.

There are many "David Harums" all about us—men with a stern exterior and a kindly heart that beats in sympathy for all the rest of the world—who do good quietly and secretly and who sometimes bring about a pretty romance such as the one "David Harum" creates for his two young friends.

This five-part feature will be at the Majestic on May 15th.

WORK OF AGRICULTURAL AGENT

BRIEF STATEMENT OF WHAT THEY WILL ACCOMPLISH.

Effort Always Made to Secure Adoption of Better Farm Practice and Social Life.

The object of the work of the county agricultural agent as officially stated by the Michigan Agricultural College and the United States Department of Agriculture is to give instruction and demonstrations in agriculture in order to secure the adoption of better farm practice, organization and administration, to the end of increasing the profits of farming and improving rural social life.

Method of Procedure.

Men well trained in science and the practice of agriculture and known as county agricultural agents are employed and located permanently, one in each county or like area of the state (with or without assistants) as rapidly as circumstances warrant and funds permit.

These agents co-ordinate and apply the results of several departments of the Michigan Agricultural College, the United States Department of Agriculture, and other research institutions, with such studies of farm practice and farm organization as may be made by the agent in the course of his work, to the end of carrying concretely to the farmers of the county or community, on their own farms, a knowledge of sound principles and successful practices in agriculture.

They also aid in the reorganization and redirection of the agriculture of the community, and in the correlation of all economic and social forces with the agencies working for the improvement of agriculture and country life, in so far as may be possible and desirable; and bring into existence when needed, and co-operate with, agricultural clubs, associations and other organizations whose objects are the improvement of agricultural practices, marketing methods, and educational, home and social conditions throughout the country. Farmers and members of their families are met individually and in groups for the purpose of study, instruction, and demonstration in field, barn, creamery, school and elsewhere.

A. O. O. G. Arbor No. 1715.

A. O. O. G. Arbor No. 1715 met at their hall in Advance, April 28, for their usual meeting. Five new members were taken in, making a total of 47 members on the roll call, of whom 38 were present. Five visitors were present. The State Overseer, E. H. Magnant, is still present. On Friday, May 5, in the evening at 8 o'clock at our hall in Advance there was a public meeting of the A. O. O. G. Our Worthy Companion, E. H. Magnant, had the chair. Fine talks were given on what the A. O. O. G. really means to the farmer. Business men were specially invited as well as farmers. Mr. H. Coblenz was also present at this meeting.

Next meeting will be on May 12. All members are requested to be present.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

There is a knock in the engine of my car, which has been run only about 300 miles. This knock takes place when the car is running slowly on direct or when the throttle is being opened and the car picking up. It seems to occur about every two revolutions of the crank shaft. Can you tell me what is the matter and the remedy?

From the information you give the motor is evidently suffering from a connecting rod knock. It is impossible to say whether the knock is due to a loose piston or bearing looseness. Another possibility is that the motor has a piston slap which occurs at every explosion stroke. It sometimes happens that practically all the bearing of a piston is taken upon one ring. The result is that the piston oscillates about this ring, which gives rise to a sharp audible every two revolutions. Since you have had the car such a short time you can no doubt get it repaired by the manufacturer.

How can one tell whether the height of level in the splash system is correct?

The oil level in a splash system can generally be determined by a riser gauge mounted on one side of the crank case. The level in the troughs is generally governed automatically, and if the oil is of sufficient depth in the pan to give a feed to the pump the oil in the troughs will be correct. If the motor smokes it is sometimes an indication that the level is too high in the crank case; but, as a rule, the splash level is worked out in the factory and need not be touched by the driver.

My motor misses when idling and when driving on high in different cylinders at less than twelve miles per hour, causing a very bad jerky motion, apparently in the rear universal. Have had the valves ground recently and there is fairly even compression. The ignition seems to be all right and no change in the carburetor seems to help it. There are apparently no air leaks and the car operates well when the motor has to pull. Can you tell me what is the matter?

The motor missing may be due to loose connections in ignition wiring, broken conductors, breaker point burned out, dirty or improperly adjusted; valves not seating properly, dirt or water in gasoline, spark plug points improperly adjusted or not set deeply enough in the valve caps, weak battery, valve spring weak or broken, mixture too rich or too lean, particles of carbon under the valves, defective spark plugs due to cracked porcelain or other causes, air leaks around the intake manifold, valve stem guides, valve caps, spark plugs or petcocks; valve lifts improperly adjusted and many other minor causes. A good order of procedure would be to take the simplest points of the above list and go through them, checking them off, and then go into the more complicated causes.

The distributor contact should be carefully examined to see that good contact is being made and especially that all the contacts are clean. In case the valves are not seating properly and the valves have been reground lately examine the valve seat in the cylinder to see if it has become deeply pitted. It is sometimes necessary to take a light cut off the valve seat in the cylinder before proper seating can be secured.

Can you give me some reasons as to the cause of my motor overheating very quickly? I have to continually fill the radiator with water.

Your loss of water is due to evaporation, caused by the motor overheating. Possibly the cylinders are heavily carbonized. This carbon, forming a coat on the inner walls of the cylinders, prevents the proper cooling of the motor by the water. The loose connections between radiator and motor may be checked with dirt or possibly the propeller is loose on the shaft. If so the water will not circulate and an overheated motor is the result. Drive with your spark advanced as much as possible. This will help to keep your motor cool and also give you additional power.

I am troubled with explosions in the muffler of my car. Have ground in the valves and have tried adjusting the carburetor and valves without effect. I get the explosion whenever I cut down the gas and particularly in going down hill. Am using an exhaust horn. Would this have any effect on it?

The only reason for getting an explosion in the muffler is that an unburned charge has found its way into this part of the car. This means that the cylinders are not firing regularly and consequently that there is trouble with the fueling in either the carburetor or ignition. It would be well to examine the spark plug points and see if they are not too far apart and also to adjust the carburetor so that the motor fires regularly on all four cylinders. The exhaust horn has no effect whatever to do with this muffler explosion, which are due to the fact that an unburned charge escapes into the muffler, to be followed by a hot exhaust, which explodes the unburned charge in the muffler.

Is alcohol a good carbon remover? How should it be used? Alcohol is a good carbon remover and for the purpose can be used in its denatured state, which is more economical and just as good. You should use five or six tablespoonfuls of oil time. The best way of applying is to use a sort of squirt gun composed of a rubber bulb in which there is a long, thin nozzle which can be directed against the walls of the combustion chamber and down on the piston head through a spark plug opening. This can be easily made and should have such a bend in it that it will be easy to insert into the opening for the spark plug and at the same time will be so shaped that the stream of liquid can be directed against any of the likely spots for carbon.

Carbon deposits are likely to accumulate in pockets and recesses of the cylinders and also on the piston head. Sometimes on motors which have been allowed to go for a long time without having the carbon removed it is deposited in a conical shaped mass on the head of the piston, and very often the tip of the cone becomes incandescent and serves to preignite the incoming charge, thus giving rise to the so called carbon knock. Other places for carbon cones to form are in the top of the combustion chamber and in the recesses above the valve ports. The ports themselves, which are swept by the incoming and outgoing gases, are most often quite free from any but a soft deposit.

In using denatured alcohol or kerosene mix it half and half with kerosene. Together they form a solvent of the resinous material, which acts as a binder for the particles of carbon, which in themselves are incapable of cohesion. When this binding material is dissolved the carbon forms into its natural flakes or scales and can be easily removed. Sometimes after the carbon has been loosened it is necessary to blow out the cylinders so as to remove the carbon flakes and prevent them from again solidifying and becoming a hard carbon deposit. It is a good idea to clean one cylinder at a time and then run the motor after ward with the petcock of the clean cylinder open. This blows out the flakes of carbon which have accumulated, due to the action of the solvent upon the resinous binding material, and leaves the cylinder clean. Another method which has been used successfully in introducing either denatured alcohol or kerosene into the cylinders is to feed it into the air intake of the carburetor while the motor is running. The motor will have to be running at quite high speed when this is done, as it will stall as soon as it starts to sputter when the rich kerosene mixture begins to be drawn into the cylinders. The suction of the motor draws the kerosene into the cylinders. There is some debate, however, as to whether or not this method is actually as good as the introduction of the liquid into the cylinder itself when the motor is not running.

Cleaning a cylinder with alcohol has its best effects immediately after the motor has come in from a trip and is still warm. At this time a portion of the liquid injected into the cylinders is vaporized, and the vapor of kerosene or denatured alcohol is an effective solvent of the carbon binding material. The best way of carrying through the work would be to lift the hood as soon as the motor comes in from a run and then turn the crank until two of the cylinders are on top center with all valves closed. When this is done these two cylinders should be treated with the liquid, which is squirted in through the improvised gun. The motor is then left standing overnight with the alcohol in the combustion chambers of the two cylinders treated. The two remaining cylinders, if it is a four, are treated in the same manner at the next opportunity. Some people inject about a teaspoonful of kerosene or denatured alcohol into the priming cup after each trip.

In which type of axle is the wheel most likely to come off in case of accident or breakage? Will the wheel come off if the axle is broken on a three-quarter floating?

In the semi-floating axle, should the shaft break in the middle, the wheel will come off in a short time, while in the floating it will take a longer period in a three-quarters floating axle the wheel is more likely to come off than in a floating, because the shaft is rigidly attached to the wheel hub.

Is the power of a gasoline motor usually rated on the speed of piston travel or revolutions of crank shaft? The standard rating is based on piston speed of 1000 feet per minute.

In the average life of a motor how many times must carbon be burned out?

This will depend entirely upon the condition of the motor. Some motors with leaky rings become so full of carbon after three or four hundred miles that they start to pound and preclude to such an extent that they cannot be efficiently operated.

VALUE OF CONCRETE ROADS.

Concrete roads built in the United States during 1914 cost on the average $11,921 a mile of sixteen foot width. One hundred and forty-four concrete roads built during the twenty years previous to 1914 cost $12,704 a mile of sixteen foot width. Most concrete roads are sixteen feet wide.

Upkeep and repair charges have been less than $25 a year for a concrete road built in Bellefontaine, O., more than twenty years ago. The yearly maintenance of the fifty-one miles of concrete roads in Wayne county, Mich., costs $28.43 a mile. It costs $13.02 a year to keep up a concrete road at Spencer, Mass.

Concrete roads are not affected by the weather, traffic or mud or trash tracked upon them, as is the case with some improved roads. Freezing and thawing have no effect on them if properly constructed. Heat does not soften them, nor cold make them brittle. Concrete increases in strength with age. —Farm and Fireside.

WINTER CARE OF ROADS.

Keep Ditches and Drains Open and Use Road Drag.

Water, not cold, is the cause of the deterioration of roads in winter, according to the road specialists of the United States department of agriculture. Cold weather does not in itself injure roads, no matter whether they are earth, gravel or macadam. In fact, an earth road will stand more traffic when it is solidly frozen than at any other time. Excess water, however, is always detrimental to a highway. When cold weather turns this water into ice the damage that it does is greatly increased. Ice occupies considerably more space than the water from which it is formed, and every person who has lived in a cold climate is familiar with the powerful bursting effect of water when left to freeze in a confined vessel. The same action takes place when a wet road freezes to any considerable depth. It simply bursts, or, as we generally term it in road parlance, the road heaves. Later, when the frost leaves, the road is disintegrated and rutted badly. If this process is repeated a number of times during the winter a gravel or macadam road may be practically destroyed, while an earth road may become entirely impassable.

A dry road will not heave. Rock, gravel, sand and even clay when perfectly dry contract slightly on freezing. In order to expand on freezing these materials must contain or be mixed with water, and the more water they contain the greater the expansion which takes place. But so long as the road remains frozen the damage does not become apparent; hence the frequent and erroneous idea that it is the thaw which injures the road. The injury was done when the water in the road froze and the particles of the road surface—broken stone, sand or still finer particles of earth or clay—were pushed apart by the expanding power of the freezing water. The thaw merely allows the ice to melt and assume its original volume as water.

During the winter whenever a thaw is coming on the cross ditches and side ditches should be opened up as far as possible so as to prevent water collecting along the roadway. If the thaw is so pronounced that the roadway is softened the drag should be used. Sometimes one round trip of the drag with the hitch reversed will entirely rid the earth road of slush and melting snow and leave the road surface practically dry. Don't get the idea that the drag is not needed on your earth and gravel roads in the winter time. Instead, keep it where you can get at it readily, for if the winter is an ordinary one you will need it many times.

Bill For Defense Highway.

A national highway system, extending from coast to coast and costing not to exceed $100,000,000, is a new defense suggestion contained in a bill introduced in congress by Representative Stephens of California. The sale of fifty year 3 per cent bonds in denominations of $20 and multiples is proposed as the means of raising the fund.

The bill provides that the highway shall be constructed by army engineers and that its construction and use shall be under such regulations as the president may prescribe.

It is provided that the national defense highway shall begin at Los Angeles, proceed by a practical route to Jacksonville, Fla., thence northward to New York and Portland, Me. At New York the westward trail would start for Chicago, thence to Minneapolis, thence through the Dakotas, Montana, Idaho and Washington and thence down the Pacific slope to Los Angeles, San Francisco and San Diego. Rights of way through the states are to be acquired by the president.

To Aid the Traveler.

The highway authorities of Massachusetts, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Maine and New Hampshire have agreed that if a simple scheme can be devised all main routes in these states will be marked with distinctive colors throughout their length, painted on telegraph or telephone poles, so that once started on the road to any place the traveler need only watch the markings on the poles to avoid getting off the road.

LIBRARY NOTES.

Have you read Irving Bachelor's "Keeping Up With Lizzie"? It is a humorous recital of the effect on a small New England town of the extravagance of the leading grocer's daughter and of her conversion into a sensible, home-loving girl.

Will Levington Comfort's novel, "Routledge Rides Alone," is a romantic story of the adventures of a young English war correspondent in the Far East during the Russo-Japanese War.

"Kennedy Square," by F. Hopkinson Smith, is a pleasing but sentimental story of Baltimore in the "fifties," with the conventional "before the war" atmosphere and the conventional Southern "gentleman of the old school" as its central figure. Theme is the clash between the old regime and the new.

"The Golden Silence," by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, tells of an American girl's search for her sister, married to an Arab. The story centers in Algeria, and descriptions of the desert and of Algerian life are excellent.

These four books were selected at random for comment. There are hundreds of others in the library fiction stacks.

Fish Frozen by New Method.

A novel way to freeze fish for shipment has been invented in Denmark, which consists of dipping the fish in fresh water and then thrusting it into a vessel containing refrigerated brine. The fresh water film around the fish coagulates instantly, preventing the access of the salt from the brine. So quickly does this method work that a live codfish eighteen inches long was frozen in half an hour and was in fifteen minutes.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

As showing what possibilities there are in land, it is related that a farmer near Kansas City, Mo., sowed eighty acres to meadow with mixed grass seed. When it had grown up he discovered that a large amount of daisy seed was mixed with the other, and he had nearly a perfect stand of daisies all over the field. No attempt was made immediately to eradicate them, and before long people in the city began to notice the field, which was very beautiful during early June and July. So many people came out to the field to gather daisies for decoration that the farmer finally put up a sign, "Ten Cents Admission." He was usually too busy to give systematic attention to it, but his children often went over into the field and collected from the people who were gathering the flowers. In this way they made quite a few dollars during the season, which they counted their own.

The field ran along in the same way till four years ago a woman took charge of it and began to give it regular attention. The daisy field has become well known throughout Kansas City as a place to gather the little flowers for decoration, and during the six weeks when the daisies are at their best there is a crowd almost every day. The flowers have become especially popular as wedding decorations, and it is fortunate that they come in early June, when so many of these are needed. The woman who lives on the place at present takes her sewing or a book and sits under a shady tree which overlooks the whole field, so that she can collect from the people who come. On week days the receipts at 10 cents for each visitor amount to from $4 to $5 and on Sundays from $7 to $8. No limit is set on the number of daisies each person may carry away, as there is always a large surplus.

The Kingston apple orchard near Seymour, Ind., is an example of first class business management and the success that may follow the use of thoroughly up to date methods. It contains 110 acres and is owned by J. J. Peters. Last year the income from the orchard, which then contained only thirty-five acres in bearing was $1,275, or approximately $125 to the acre. The remaining part of the 110 acres is too young to be in bearing. While this orchard is operated as a private enterprise, it is also a sort of experiment station for Purdue university, and the methods used are suggested by the station men. Thorough spraying is one of the things which has brought success.

In order to secure a strong, vigorous and healthy crop of lambs, we must begin to care and feed the pregnant ewe lamb long before the lambs are born. We are all anxious to secure strong, healthy lambs, because the high price of feeds of all kinds and the increased cost of labor, rent, taxes, etc., is teaching us every year that the weak, sickly or stunted lamb has no place on the corn belt farm. These weak lambs are money losers.

In the management and feeding of ewes during the winter season there are many little details to look after. It is careful attention to these details that leads to success in sheep raising. One of the first of these is kind treatment. No animal on the farm will respond to kind treatment as readily as sheep, and it is also always true that sheep will lose money for the owner if they are not properly cared for.

Winter quarters for pregnant ewes need not be very costly. The barn or shed should be made so that it will keep the animals dry above as well as under foot. It should be dry, airy, have plenty of windows and at the same time permit no drafts. Ewes should have the privilege of a clean, dry, bedding each night. If they are forced to lie on wet doors rheumatism and colds may set in. This condition impairs the health of the animal.

A four or five year rotation works satisfactorily. Corn, oats, rye or wheat and hay one or two years. This may be varied by putting part of the corn stubble into potatoes and cabbage, seeding with peas and oats after this, bringing the rotation out the same. (The cabbage is worth all it costs to raise to feed to the dairy.) Remember good seed plays an important part in the production of a good crop. Buy the best seed and raise better. Save your own seed wherever practical. Give the fruit the best care you can without neglect to the general farm crops. Spraying pays, but can be overdone on a general farm.

Burglarizing the Farms.

The farmer who sells all his crops off the place and also burns all his corn stalks and straw reminds one of the burglar who takes all the valuables he can carry off and sets fire to what is left.

THE MIDNIGHT SUPPERS.

How to Make Dream Cakes on Your Chafing Dish.

The easiest things in the world to make in a chafing dish are dream cakes, and everybody who likes a rare bit will rave over these toothsome dainties, which are built of cheese, cream and slices of bread. They are less trouble than the ordinary Welsh rabbit, which requires a good many ingredients and prolonged cooking, and they are "hearty" enough to make a sustaining supper after an evening of bridge. Two or at most three dream cakes will be all the average person can eat, unless he is willing to risk the possible wild dreams which are said to have given these rich delicacies their name.

Press half a pound of soft rarebit cheese through a potato ricer or a colander until you have a pile of light, flaky cheese particles. Mix with the cheese half a cupful of sweet cream. Season with a pinch of salt, paprika, a dash of mustard and a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Have ready slices of bread, cut rather thick and with the crusts trimmed off. Spread one slice thickly with the cheese, another slice down upon it and then brown the sandwich thus made in a chafing dish brazier in which butter is bubbling. When golden brown and crisp serve piping hot on a small plate. Do not have the sandwiches too large; small ones will brown more quickly.

Ordinary slices of bread, trimmed at the edges, may be cut in two diagonally to make three cornered dream cakes.

How to Teach Children the Great Law of Cause and Effect.

Children should be taught from the beginning the great moral law of cause and effect, not to look for wealth without work, for honor without honesty. Teach them that character stands above surroundings and that esteem should be bestowed where it is due, whether for mental endowment or material wealth.

It is not nil of morals to moralize, and less precept and more example is to be commended. The living realization, the quiet suggestion, the favorable opportunity, are the efficient teachers. Ignorance is responsible for a great deal of wickedness, but evil example and parental neglect are responsible for vastly more.

A sense of right and wrong should be cultivated early in a child's life, and much may be accomplished in this direction before the child leaves the mother's nursery training.

How to Case Harden Iron Utensils When They Are Quite New.

Make up a paste of powdered prussiate of potash and water. Coat the iron with this paste and set it aside to dry. Let the forge fire be clear and bright. When the paste is dry upon the iron thrust the iron into the fire until it is cherry red. Keep it at this heat for a few minutes and then take it out. Plunge it into cold water, and it will be found converted into steel at the surface.—Popular Science Monthly.

How to Sew Buttons on Children's Clothes For Permanency.

When you sew buttons on the children's dresses run a tape down the wrong side first. If each button is sewed through to the tape no amount of hard wear or abuse in the laundry will tear it from the goods. Another wise precaution is to use linen thread for the buttons on your boy's suit.

How to Add Life to Candles During the Long Evenings.

With the shorter days here candles are being used more and more for dinner. If the candles are given a coat of colorless varnish and allowed to dry thoroughly before lighting they will not only last longer, but the varnish will prevent the wax melting and running down.

MAMMOTH DREDGES.

New Panama Excavators Are Equipped With Giant Dippers.

No less than thirty four men can find standing room in one of the dippers of the new Panama canal dredges that are now being completed at a plant in New York harbor. The dippers of each of these mammoth dredges measure no less than 10 feet 9 1/4 inches in height from the bottom band to the upper edge of their manganese steel lips. They have a capacity of fifteen cubic yards, and it is expected that each dredge, which has a displacement of 1,500 tons, will be able to excavate about 300,000 cubic yards per month in actual operation on the isthmus.

In other words, a dredge of this tremendous capacity could excavate the 1,200 acreage of Central park and Prospect park in New York one foot deep in less than six months' working time. These dredges were ordered by the isthmian canal commission as a part of the permanent equipment for the maintenance of the canal and for immediate use in completing the channel through Gatun lake and the Culebra cut.

The rock dippers are of extra massive construction and are fitted with heavy manganese steel teeth. The dippers are hung on a three and one-fourth inch single part wire rope hoisting cable in accordance with the latest practice. These cables are the largest ever manufactured for a dredge. The dredges are designed to dig to a depth of fifty feet.—Engineering News.

Water Power Saves Coal.

It is claimed that under the most favorable conditions a pound of coal can be made to produce one horsepower. From this minimum the estimated quantity ranges as high as even six or seven pounds. Assuming, however, that on the average a horsepower hour in steam can be produced by three pounds of coal and that this quantity probably understates the average quantity of coal required and the corresponding saving by the substitution of water power, the power now produced by the natural water powers of the United States saves at least 3,000,000 tons of coal per year. This is based on a day of twelve hours.—American Machinist.

Wall Paper Cleaner.

The following mixture to clean wall paper has been used with the best results for years, says Popular Mechanics: Thoroughly mix together three parts of wheat flour and one part of powdered whiting, then add sufficient water to make a dough. To clean a dirty papered wall take a piece of the dough that can be easily grasped in the hand, press it against the surface and make a long stroke, downward. During the process of cleaning keep kneading the dirt into the dough. The preparation can be mixed in any amount desired by using the proportions named.

Origin of the Word "Pagan."

The Latin word from which pagan is derived originally meant a fountain or spring; then the village which sprang up around it, and finally the residents of the village. As Christianity took strong root at first in the large centers of population and the worship of the pagan deities lingered longest in the country and among the country villages, it came to be understood that a pagan or villager was, in virtue of his residence, a worshiper of the old gods, and thus the term acquired its present significance.

"He isn't a true Bohemian," said the poet. "He's a poseur."

"How do you know?" asked the artist.

"Hub!" snorted the poet, with who scorn. "I don't believe he owes a cent in the world!"—Dallas News.

SYNOPSIS.

Dudley Larigan, district attorney, because of his fight on the vice and liquor trusts, is killed by an agent of a secret society, the committee of fifteen. The fight is continued by his son, Bruce, who is elected district attorney, and by another son, Tom. Bruce is in love with Dorothy Maxwell, whose father is head of the insurance trust.

TENTH EPISODE

The Harbor Transportation Trust

Suggested by ZANE GREY,
 Author of "The Light of Western Stars," "The Rainbow Trail," "Riders of the Purple Sage," etc.

BRUCE LARIGAN and his brother Tom, who had taken up Bruce's work of exposing the machinations of the members of the graft trust, headed by Stanford Stone, after the almost fatal injury to Bruce, felt that it was even more important to protect the public against the extortion practiced by the great grafters than it was to pursue their own revenge.

"I started just for revenge," said Bruce, shaking his head, after Tom had told him of his success in getting evidence against the coal trust. "But, even if these men killed our father, we can't let our hatred of them prevent us from doing our duty."

"They're not above stalling from any one," said Tom. "And the next thing to get after is the distribution of food and supplies of all sorts right here in New York. There's a combination that absolutely controls the movement of every pound of freight in the harbor. I'm convinced that somebody in this combination goes in for smuggling too."

"Now you're talking about Grant Fisher, Tom," said Bruce. "Good heavens! How did you know that, Bruce? For a sick man you're mighty up to date, but it's not going to be easy to get any evidence against him."

"I know that," said Bruce. "Have you got a plan at all?"

"Yes—and no," said Tom. "It's not worth being called a plan, really. It's just an idea. I want to follow a hunch I've got without telling you what it is until I know whether or not it's going to work. All right?"

"Go ahead," said Bruce. "If you fall down come back and we'll get together."

Tom had already spied out the ground, and he went straight from the flat where he lived with Bruce and their mother to the office building in which the Harbor Transportation company, of which Grant Fisher was the head and the moving spirit, had its headquarters. He knew that outside Fisher's private office there was an anteroom in which those who had appointments with Fisher waited for his summons.

"Sa, the apium's all ashore and in Gruen's place."

In the main office, outside this anteroom, he asked some trivial questions and then, waiting for his chance, slipped through the door while the attendant was away. He was alone for a minute, and he immediately hid his hat and gloves, so that any stranger coming in might suppose that he was employed about the office in some capacity.

In a few moments the door was opened and a man who had all the earmarks of a sea captain of the old school came in.

"Just a minute, Captain Monk," said a voice. "Mr. Fisher will send his buzzer when he's ready for you to come in."

"All right, all right!" boomed Monk in a deep voice.

The buzzer sounded; Monk went in. And right behind him was Tom. Monk, it was plain, supposed that he was attached to the office. Fisher, glancing at Tom, paid no more attention to him. As Tom had hoped, he supposed that Monk had brought some one with him.

Tom realized in a moment that luck had favored him to an almost incredible degree, for Monk, without preamble, launched into a report of the most confidential sort.

"Well, it's all right, hose!" he announced. He spoke in what he evidently believed to be a low, carefully modulated voice, but every word was audible to Tom. "I brought in the cargo all right, all right. And none of them smart Alecks of customs boys was a bit anxious to search the ship—not with the lions and figners and critters of that sort the hold was full of. So, the opium's all ashore and in Gruen's place."

Tom had heard all that he needed to know. Slowly and so as not to attract suspicion to himself he went out the door.

Fisher, meanwhile, had frowned slightly as he saw Tom go.

"Look here, Monk," he said, "this sort of thing ought to be kept pretty much to ourselves. The next time you have a confidential report to make don't bring any one with you."

"What?" roared Monk. "I didn't!"

"Then who was that fellow who came in with you?"

"Him? He works for you, don't he? He just followed me in, and when you didn't say nothing I supposed he was all right."

They stared at one another a moment. And then Fisher, with a sudden suspicion, reached into his desk for a bunch of photographs, which he studied. He cried out sharply and then handed Monk a picture of Tom Larigan.

"That's him?" said Monk.

"Yes, and he's Tom Larigan," said Fisher. "A government special prosecutor or agent—a spy set upon the syndicate to destroy it! A blue trick we've let him play on us!"

"The —!" said Monk, with a great deep sea oath. "I'll get him or my name's not Monk!"

"You'd better try," said Fisher satirically. "If you don't he'll get us—I can promise you that! I'll go to work too. Go along now and warn Gruen to be careful. That wild animal store of his has been too useful to us for us to let the government get on to its real character."

Fisher, when Monk had gone, telephoned at once to Stanford Stone, telling him what had happened.

"All right," said Stone after a moment. "I suppose I shall have to pull us out of the hole that you and Monk in your stupidity have dug for us. Fine business!"

Stone set the wheels of his organization turning at once. He sent for Dunn, the man who served him in his most critical affairs and over whom he held as a constant threat his knowledge of a certain criminal episode of the past.

"As a matter of fact," said Stone. "I'm not sorry this has happened. Fisher's a fool, but his folly has turned out well this time. Larigan will go to Gruen's. You can see to it that when he does so he walks into a trap."

Meanwhile, however, there had been a change in Tom's plans. He had gone immediately to the office of the Independent, the newspaper which was backing Bruce Larigan's fight, with Jack Stevens as its editor. There he had found Bruce and also a telegram from Washington ordering him to go at once to Rio de Janeiro, where it was said, the consul would be able to give him instructions concerning a special mission connected with the operations of the graft syndicate.

"You'll have to go," Bruce said. "But I'm nearly well now. I'm well enough, at any rate, to take hold of this affair. So there need be no change in our plans."

And another factor was about to be introduced into the case. Dorothy Maxwell and her chum, Kity Rockford, were by this time, thanks to their more or less accidental success in the past in helping the Larigans, convinced of their own powers as detectives. Dorothy had been engaged to Bruce. Stanford Stone was in love with her, and owing to his hold upon her father and his threat if she did not yield to him to ruin him Dorothy was afraid to come out openly against Stone. In secret, however, she was his enemy.

The two girls while out walking spied Dunn and, remembering him from previous attempts against the Larigans, determined to follow him. Dunn, however, recognized them, and when they entered Gruen's store almost on his heels they were seized and thrust into a small storeroom in the cellar. In the next hour, although they did not know it, were sent to the lions that had been imported, with the opium, by Monk.

Meanwhile Dunn made all his arrangements with Gruen. A trap door was arranged so that it would drop any one who stood upon it into a cellar, and this cellar was the one that contained the lions.

"That'll be the finish of any one who goes down," said Dunn gloatingly. "Mr. Tom Larigan won't find it easy to argue with our friends down there."

However, Tom had decided not to go to Gruen's. He was impatient for the time of his departure for South America to come, and he and Ben Travers, his old friend, went down to the docks to see about his passage. Monk, with some of his crew, aided them, and Monk saw the chance for his revenge.

At a word from him the two were seized and dragged on board his ship. They were roughly hauled and were left unconscious. And Monk, gloatingly, went to the telephone and reported to Fisher, who happened at the time to be with Stone.

"Good enough," said Stone. "South America? They'll be gone for months, and by the time they return we'll be invincible. It's different from what had been planned, but it will do. Tell Monk we won't forget to reward him!"

A little later Stone heard from Dunn of the capture of the two girls. His rage equalled his astonishment when he saw Dorothy. He realized then that he had no chance to win her, and his love for her turned to hate.

"Is Molly's place still running?" he asked Gruen.

"Yes," said Gruen, with a grin. "Molly's place was a dive of a singularly notorious sort. It was a resort of the worst type, a place to which the women of the streets sank when they were weary at the end of the tether. No woman who ever entered it came out alive. Its customers were sailors and men of the roughest sort. And it was to this place that Stone ordered the two girls to be taken!"

The girls had not been idle during their captivity in Gruen's cellar. They found a pick and a crowbar in their cell, but could make no impression upon the heavy door. So they turned their attention to the padlock. This was out on the door by which they had been thrust in, but on a smaller door which might lead, they thought, to the cellar of the next house. As a matter of fact, though they did not, of course, suspect it, it actually led to the cellar in which the lions were confined.

It was Bruce and Jack Stevens who came to Gruen's instead of Tom and Travers. But that made no difference to Dunn's men and Gruen. They were attacked at once, and Bruce was knocked senseless at the beginning of the fight. Jack, stepping on to the trap, fell into the cellar among the lions. In horror, he backed against the door, and it opened behind him. The two girls removed the padlock just in time and dragged him through, closing the door before the lions could enter.

But now the men who were to take the girls to Molly's place came in, and Stevens, against fearful odds, put up the best fight he could. The noise brought the police, and Stevens and the girls were rescued just in time. The police cleared out the store above as well and saved Bruce. But no one could save Fisher. Coming to see the success of his plan, he fell through the trap, and there was no one to open the door for him. The lions made him their prey instead of Stevens.

Out at sea Tom Larigan came to his senses to see Monk's evil eyes glaring down at him.

"Well, you're here! And there's no turning back on this ship," said Monk. "So I suppose," said Tom coolly. "Where are you bound, captain?"

"Rio de Janeiro."

"Good! Look at this, captain!"

Tom showed his telegram from Washington and the official papers that gave him his authority.

"Well go with you as passengers," said Tom. "I imagine you know enough of Uncle Sam to understand that it's time for you to turn against the men you've worked for!"

CRYING FOR HELP.

Lots of it in Charlevoix, but Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys often cry for help. Not another organ in the whole body more delicately constructed. Not one more important to health. The kidneys are the filters of the blood.

When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous. There can be no health where there is poisoned blood.

Backache is one of the frequent indications of kidney trouble. It is often the kidneys' cry for help. Heed it.

Read what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for overworked kidneys.

Proof of merit in the following statement:

Mrs. W. A. Cochran, 221 Washington street, Petoskey, Michigan, says: "I had kidney complaint for some time. The kidney secretions were unnatural and caused me much annoyance. I suffered from backache and was subject to dizzy spells and headaches. I did not rest well and mornings felt lame. When I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills I used them and they gave me relief."

Price 50 cents at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Cochran had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Three Bells attendance record, the past year—best in the county. Out of 29 pupils enrolled 79 received diplomas of honor for being neither absent or tardy throughout the entire year. Up to the present writing this is more than three times what any other school has yet gained. There were during the first four months 24 neither absent or tardy and 20 during the spring term. If any school can beat this, send in your record post-haste.

SWORDS OF JAPAN.

Religious Rites in Their Making and a Final Blessing.

That the Japanese are past masters in the art of sword making is proved by the splendid weapons, equal to those of Toledo and Damascus, which they turn out. The actual methods of sword making in Japan are jealously guarded, an extraordinary feature of the industry being the religious ceremony which accompanies every process of their manufacture. The walls of every sword making shop in Japan will be found to be covered with allegorical representations of the sword makers and the chief goddess of the Shintos.

Evil spirits are kept away by charms consisting of bits of paper and wisps of straw, while, should any woman enter the shop, disaster would certainly come to the sword which is being made and to their wielders. Consequently women are absolutely debarred from entering business as sword makers, while not only is prayer offered up before the work begins, but various religious rites peculiar to the Japanese are performed in order that the swords, when finally completed, may be said to have been well and truly made.

Even the final processes of polishing and sharpening are characterized by certain religious ceremonies, and finally the weapons are offered, one by one, to the sword god to be blessed. This ceremony consists in placing the swords in front of the goddess of the Shintos on the wall, with an offering of sake, rice and sweetmeats, after which prayer scrolls are read and blessing upon the work is invoked.—Pearson's Weekly.

KEEP IN HARNESS.

Why It Is Dangerous to Retire From Active Work.

In Farm and Fireside Dr. David E. Smith gives some advice to workers who are planning to retire from their callings and enjoy a peaceful old age. "The abrupt change from an active member of the producing class to an idle member of the consuming class," he says, "is too much for a man who is facing the setting sun. And just here is the excuse and reason for this article. I want to sound a note of warning to those contemplating such a move.—Safety First."

"For a man in declining life whose arteries are already beginning to harden from indulging in rich and stimulating food the change should be made gradually, allowing his system to accustom itself gradually to the changed conditions. A lessened amount of rich and stimulating food should be indulged in. Regular hours must be maintained, regular exercises that will bring into play and actively all the different muscles of the body in order to insure the elimination of the waste products of the body."

"A sedentary life, inactive and pur-poseless, with nothing to live for, no object in view but to live and eat and wait and waste away, with a lessened income and greater expense, with more and greater demand upon the purse strings—how great the temptation to become restless, nervous and irritable."

Tires Must Be Matched.

The Scientific American calls attention to a common cause of rear axle troubles, the same being the variation in diameter of different makes of tires. Though these are theoretically 31 by 4 inches, in practice they vary as much as half an inch and sometimes even more. Some of the results of the use of odd tires are all leaning from the rear axle case and the brake drum of the wheel with the smaller tire. Difficulties in steering and tires wearing unevenly. The moral, of course, is that tires of the same type and make should be used on wheels of the same axle.

Hugo and His Disciple.

A young man, an admirer of the great poet, attended one of Victor Hugo's recitations, became engaged in argument and lost his temper. Hugo solemnly rebuked him, and he subsided. Presently the guests retired. One of them, however, had forgotten his umbrella and returned to get it. Looking through an open door from the vestibule, he perceived the young man on his knees before the poet, sobbing out his apologies for his disrespect, while Victor Hugo, with almost regal dignity, extended his hand to him and bade him rise.

R. L. Stevenson and Women.

It may perhaps be recalled that it was to the late Dr. Trudeau that Stevenson once admitted that he felt he had been rash when he promised a lady over the dinner table that he would put a real woman into his next book. "I've often wondered, Stevenson," said the doctor, "but never thought to ask, why do you never put a real woman in a story?" "Good heavens, Trudeau," was the reply, "when I have tried I find she talks like a grenadier!"—Westminster Gazette.

Use For Old Rubber Buggy Tires.

When the rubber becomes worn down to the steel channel on the light buggies its usefulness ends usually, writes a correspondent of the National Stockman. At the first of this winter's cold period I used some of these rubber strips for weather strips around some of the doors of the house. Simply nail them with both nails every three or four inches and have them close enough to push just a trifle against the door. You'll be surprised how much wind is kept out and how much warmth is kept inside, also you'll be surprised how well they look as soon as they are painted.

The Chenoworth Baronetcy

It Was Lost and Was Revived

By F. A. MITCHEL

When James Chenoworth, having lost both father and mother, decided to sell the homestead and go abroad for awhile he sat himself down to examine a large number of papers that had been accumulating for many years. Indeed, there were documents among them that dated back more than two centuries. There was a tradition in the family that the first Chenoworth in America had been a soldier of King Charles under Prince Rupert and, when the Protector Cromwell prevailed, had come to America to make a new home for himself.

The family documents were kept in what was called a hair trunk, from being covered with the skin of some animal from which the hair had not been removed. James Chenoworth spent many hours over the contents of the trunk, reading the papers. In time he took up a paper which he unfolded. It was a fragment yellow with age. The ink was also faded and almost illegible. James put it in his pocket, intending to try to decipher it later, for words in it which he could easily read seemed to refer to his ancestors. What he ultimately made out was this:

"At the beginning of the parliamentary wars James Chenoworth, son and heir of Sir Ralph Chenoworth, went out to fight for the king. His Arthur, two years his junior, joined the parliamentary forces. The brothers were enough. At the end of the war having been lost, went to America. His home and When the Chenoworth James, Chenoworth Chenoworth resolved that during his travels he would visit England and hunt up his ancestral record. Placing the fragment in his portmanteau, he made his preparations and in due time went abroad. At a hotel in Switzerland, where he found a mixture of English and Americans, he fell in with an English family named Smithson.

The main attraction in this family was Miss Gladys Smithson, a girl about twenty years old. Both she and Chenoworth were fond of winter sports, and they were where they could enjoy them to perfection. Miss Smithson was the only child of her parents, and Chenoworth learned that through her mother she was an heiress. Since he possessed an income of barely $2,000 a year, he repressed any desire he felt to make love to the young lady.

This was fortunate, for Miss Smithson's mother, who had an interest in her daughter's adding to rather than dividing her prospective fortune, not suspecting that there was any special interest between the two young persons, made no objection to their being together, and when they separated she invited Chenoworth when he came to England to call upon them at their home in that country.

Perhaps neither Chenoworth nor Miss Smithson realized the delicate bond that had been slowly forming between them till the moment of separation came. Gladys gave him her hand at parting, and he held it just a trifle longer than at an adieu between mere friends. Miss Smithson looked at the floor. Chenoworth looked into her face, then released her hand and turned away.

He met many young women on his travels, but none of them caused him to blush from a spot very near to his heart the image of Miss Smithson. He had planned a trip to Russia but, hearing in his journey the image of his companion in Switzerland, he shrank from a visit to that cold country and resolved to forego the trip and give himself more time in England.

When Chenoworth arrived in London he sent his card to the Smithsons at their ancestral home in the county of Kent, with the result that he received an invitation to visit them for a week end. As he was driven into the place between two imposing gateway pillars and up to the manor house, through an avenue lined with trees that had been hundreds of years growing, his heart sank within him, for he realized that an American with a barely two thousand a year could never aspire to the hand of the girl who would inherit such a splendid home.

Whether Mrs. Smithson had discovered in her daughter a disposition to pine for Chenoworth and scented danger, certain it is that the mother received him without the cordiality he expected. Her daughter, on the contrary, welcomed him with a mingling of pleasure and embarrassment. During his brief visit there were moments of exquisite pleasure for both him and Gladys, succeeded by moments of depression. There was a union of hearts, but they were constantly reminded that any other union was impossible.

When Chenoworth was making this visit, one afternoon while Gladys was engaged, he was entertained by her mother. He mentioned the fact that his ancestors had come from England and his discovery of the fragment among his family papers. The lady was doing some kind of knitting while he was talking to her, on which she kept her eyes, but Chenoworth noticed that as he passed from one point to another she was becoming deeply interested. Finally she asked abruptly to see the fragment to which he had referred. Taking it from his portmanteau, he handed it to her.

For some time her eyes were bent upon it, while the American's were bent upon her. Evidently there was something in this bit of yellow paper, torn in half, that moved her profoundly. She handed it back to him without remark. But he noticed a slight tremor of her hand as she did so. Presently, evidently nervously, she asked:

"Mr. Chenoworth, do you intend to look up your ancestry while in England?"

She awaited his reply with suppressed emotion.

"That is my intention," he replied.

"But I don't know where to begin."

There was no reply to this. Later Miss Smithson reappeared, and the two young persons went out into the grounds together.

Chenoworth was to return to London the next morning. What was his surprise before going to bed to be asked by Mrs. Smithson to remain longer. He replied that nothing stood in the way of his doing so, and his departure was deferred. Mrs. Smithson's treatment of him seemed to be undergoing a change, though she did not seem to have made up her mind with regard to his attentions to her daughter. On the second day after her interview with him during which he had showed her the fragment she asked him to let her see it again. He did so, and she asked him if he would object to giving her a copy of it. He at once complied with her request.

The next day Mrs. Smithson announced that she must go to London to do some shopping. She charged her daughter to take good care of the guest during her absence, which was entirely unnecessary, for it was evident that Miss Gladys was as much enamored of Chenoworth as he was with her. The lovers were in a seventh heaven during the mother's absence, which lasted several days.

Chenoworth was puzzled. Why did Mrs. Smithson leave him with her daughter during this interval? Why had she changed in her treatment of him? There was no explanation. On her return the mystery deepened. She would not hear of Chenoworth's departure, saying that she was planning some social functions at which she desired his presence.

Chenoworth was beside himself. His attentions to Gladys were very noticeable, and her mother was encouraging them. She had no information concerning his standing in America nor as to his income, which, it was evident from his careful expenditures, was not large. Why, then, was she giving him every opportunity to win her daughter when that daughter might make a very advantageous match?

Chenoworth was anxious to hunt up the records of his ancestry, and he realized that to do this he must go to London. Gladys had told him that he had better go to an office of her father's. But whenever he proposed to depart Mrs. Smithson objected, and he deferred his going.

And so it was that Chenoworth kept putting off his departure until one evening, while out on the terrace with Gladys, under the moonlight, he told her that he loved her, but he knew that owing to his limited means a marriage with her was impossible.

Then they conferred together upon what Mrs. Smithson meant by a marriage with her was impossible. It was finally agreed between them that Chenoworth should learn what was in store for them by asking for Gladys's hand.

He approached Mr. Smithson with doubt and fear. He was given to understand that if he was acceptable to the daughter he would be acceptable to the parents. This thrilled him, and he went to Gladys with the good news at once. At a subsequent interview he gave Mr. Smithson a statement of his financial affairs, to which the gentleman listened with respectful attention, but made no comment. If Chenoworth's mind had not been taken up with love, curiosity would have come in to claim its share of attention.

Chenoworth did not leave the manor house till he departed on his wedding journey. When he returned he was saluted by his mother-in-law and every one else as Sir James. When the first excitement attending the couple's return had worn off Chenoworth was informed of what had been going on during his courtship.

Mrs. Smithson had inherited her estate through the female branch of the Chenoworths. She was aware that the heir to the title had two centuries before disappeared in America. On receipt of a copy of Chenoworth's fragment she had taken it to a world of law in London, and they had given her the following reading of it when complete:

"At the beginning of the parliamentary wars James Chenoworth, son and heir of Sir Ralph Chenoworth, went out to fight for the king. His brother, Arthur, two years his junior, joined the parliamentary forces. The two brothers were enough alike to be twins. At the end of the war, the king's cause having been lost, James Chenoworth went to America. Arthur returned to his home and succeeded to the title. When the restoration came James Chenoworth had died, leaving a son, John. The sons of James Chenoworth are the rightful heirs to the Chenoworth title and estates."

Mrs. Smithson's action was explained. By taking James Chenoworth for a non-law she revived the baronetcy and secured for her daughter the estates which were legally hers.

Farmers--Read what Fresno County, California, Offers!

This rich productive Californian county is sparsely settled compared to the East. There are thousands of acres ready for industrious farmers—land that will yield far more than the average farm land throughout the United States. Here forty acres will bring greater revenue than a quarter section in some parts of the country. The land is suitable for general farming. Alfalfa is cut six times each year and yields from 14 to 2 tons per acre. Big opportunities for practical dairymen, stockmen and poultrymen. Splendid climate. No severe winter.

A Story of a Reformed Card Sharp

By ELEANOR MARSH

A man rode up to a settler's cabin in the far west, threw himself from his horse and asked for something to eat. The settler was not at home, but his wife received the stranger, and her daughter, a child of twelve, looked up at the man with a pair of big black eyes wonderingly.

The mother was evidently troubled at his coming, but children are not aware of the differences in persons, and the daughter, who seldom saw any one except her parents, did not seem ill disposed toward him. On the contrary, his arrival was something out of the common in her life. The man was young, not over twenty-one, and not bad looking, but there was something in his appearance to make the older woman shudder. She set out some bread and meat for him. It was not very tempting, and he asked if it was the best she could do.

"Mother," said the girl, "you have forgotten that you made pies yesterday."

The mother cast a quick reproving glance at her daughter and, going to a cupboard, took out a pie and placed it on the table before the stranger.

"Wouldn't you like a cup of coffee?" asked the child.

"Reckon I would," replied the man.

The woman frowned, but her back was turned toward the man, and he did not see her face. Besides, his attention was fixed on the child, who was instrumental in bringing forth what there was in the larder. He was fighting his way through the world. His hand was against every man, and every man's hand was against him. He was touched by the only kindness he had received in a long while.

The woman made the stranger a cup of coffee, and, having eaten and drunk, he said:

"I've had a square meal, thanks to you, alamy. Now I'm going to have a sleep. In case you hear or see any one coming, little girl, wake me at once."

"If you're sleepy," said the child, "why do you want to be awakened?"

"See here, yonker: if some men come along they're probably hunting for me, and the sooner you awaken me the better it will be for me."

"Why are they hunting you?"

"To hang me."

The girl asked no further questions. The man stretched himself on a bunk fixed to the wall in the living, dining and bedroom in one, while the woman went to the other room, the kitchen, and washed the dishes. The stranger must have been long without sleep, for no sooner had he stretched himself on the bunk than he fell into a deep slumber.

There is something so inoffensive, so powerless, about a sleeper as always to attract sympathy. In this case sleep seemed to relax the man's features so that the animosity against mankind so marked upon it when he was awake disappeared. Twenty-one is the very beginning of manhood, and the youngster, his face being in repose, was singularly handsome. Perhaps the girl was old enough to feel drawn to one of the opposite sex. At any rate, she looked upon him sympathetically out of her great black eyes and presently got a blanket and threw it over him. Then, remembering what he had said to her, she went outside and scanned the country roundabout. Far in the distance she saw several men on horseback galloping toward the cabin.

The sleeper was conscious of hearing voices.

"Mother, some men are coming. I'm going to wake him up."

"Do no such thing. He's a desperado, quite likely a horse thief. Let him alone, and they'll get him."

"I won't; they'll hang him."

Then the man felt himself shaken. He started up.

"They're coming," said the girl. The man sprang to the door, shaded his eyes with his hand against the sun, caught the child in his arms, kissed her, vaulted on to his horse and dashed away.

Not long after his departure a posse rode up to the house.

"Anybody been here?" asked one of them.

"Who are you looking for?" asked the woman.

"Jim Gay, the card sharp. He took $500 last night from a greenhorn in Silver City."

"Well," replied the woman, "a young fellow has just been here and lit out. Reckon if you go that a-way (pointing) you'll be on his track."

The men rode on, leaving the mother and daughter together, the latter receiving a scolding for protecting the stranger. The father came in later, and when told that Jim Gay, the card sharp, had been there and had been saved from capture by his daughter he gave her another scolding.

"Who is that fellow anyway?" asked his wife.

"I never saw him, but they say he's the slickest man at cards in the territory. He doesn't take much interest in doing a snicker. He rather runs to men who pride themselves on being up to all the dodges in the profession. But he's skinned so many of them that they won't tackle him any more."

"Papa," said the girl, "is it wicked to play cards? You play cards sometimes, don't you?"

No response was made to the question. The father's besetting sin was the gambling table.

During five years following this episode the country round about the settler's cabin was filling up, but with that rough element which seeks new countries. Silver was what attracted the crowd, and many were growing rich from the mines. Scarborough, the settler, was in a position to avail himself of opportunities; but, being subject to a passion for gambling, whenever he got a good thing he gambled it away. In vain his wife pleaded with him to keep away from the gambling tables. It is singular how credulous are those who are afflicted with this passion. And yet is not the passion so strong that they are swept away by it, knowing that the chances are all against them?

Meanwhile the little girl who had saved the card sharp was growing to be a woman. She was a serious character, for she lived in a country where she saw a great deal to indicate to her that the world is not a bed of roses. Then, too, she experienced trouble at home. Her father was a bright man, but they say "death loves a shining mark," and it is hard to find a person with a superior intellect who is not handicapped by some glaring defect. Just as soon as Scarborough made a deal by which he pocketed a handsome profit he would go on gambling den and lose it, and then, too, to men who were his inferiors.

One evening Scarborough, who had just sold a piece of property for $3,000, was being relieved of it by a gang of sharpers. While he was playing a young man of clerical cut and wearing a white cravat entered the den and, taking position in the center of the room, began to speak against the gambling passion. The proprietor looked at him as though uncertain whether to stop him or let him proceed. Seeing that no one in the room paid any attention to the speaker, he chose the latter course.

While the young clergyman was inveighing against the sin of gambling a girl of seventeen entered and, moving straight to Scarborough, put her arms about his neck and begged him to come away.

"Mother says that you will lose all the money received for the sale of the property," she pleaded.

"I've lost it already, but I'll get it back again, and more too."

"Oh, father!"

"Just you go home and tell your mother not to worry. I'll come out all right."

When the girl entered the gambling house the clergyman ceased his remarks on the sin of gambling and fixed his eyes upon her intently. He heard what she said to her father, and when he refused to go away with her the clergyman went over to the table where her father was playing and looked over the game.

"Gents," he said presently, "would you mind a man of the church taking a hand in this game?"

There was a burst of laughter and much chaffing of the clergyman at having preached against gambling and then going back on all he had said. But the men at the table, except Scarborough, were all card sharps and thought what a fine thing it would be to fleece a parson. He was admitted to the game with a welcome and, taking $100 from his wallet, invested the amount in chips.

Never at that board had such hands been held as by the parson. If the best hand against him was a full of nines he held a full of tens. When he dealt the cards it seemed that he was enabled to give the others such hands as would draw them out, and he always topped them. The chips all came his way, and before long he had a pile before him that filled the others with envy. Then he said:

"Gents, no more playin' for chips. Cash these and let the game go on for hard money."

Since he was winner, there could be no objection to this, and the game proceeded on a money basis. When the parson had won more than $2,500 he suggested a jack pot. The betting was opened with a pair of queens. The parson bet so high that he drove all the rest out except one man. When he was called and showed his hand he was found to hold four kings and an ace. He won $500 on that hand alone. Turning to Scarborough, he said:

"How much money did you bring in here?"

"Thirty-two hundred dollars."

The parson counted out the amount, pushed it toward him, deducted the hundred dollars he had begun the game with and left the balance on the table.

"You're a fine parson, you are," said the man who had lost the jackpot.

"Who are you, anyway?"

"I'm Jim Gay, who used to be known in these parts for the slickest card shifter of all professionals."

"One day, when a posse was after me, I got into the cabin where this man and this girl were livin'. The girl was a child then, but against her mother's wishes she warned me of the coming of the committee and enabled me to show a clean pair of heels. Somehow I couldn't get her kindness out of my head, and it worked on me till it reformed me. I concluded to get an education to preach, so that I could spend the rest of my life exposing men who fleece and are fleeced. Do you remember me, little girl?"

"Yes, I do."

The three of them took the regained funds to Scarborough's cabin. It was invested in a silver mine and made the family comfortable. The father never gambled again, and Mabel Scarborough, as Gay's wife, is now assisting him in his crusade against gambling.

Fighting Fires With Chemicals.

That chemicals will entirely take the place of water within the next five years as a means of fighting fire was the prophecy made at a recent convention of fire fighters. In the large cities most of the small fires are now put out with chemicals, and it is not a big step from this to the use of guns for shooting powdered chemicals or chemical bombs into buildings for putting out big blazes. As an argument against the use of water, a case was referred to where in a small fire the fire loss was $5,000, while the loss due to the water poured on the flames amounted to no less than $20,000.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Decorating Candles.

Candles can be easily decorated by the following method: The designs can be selected from paper prints tightly wrapped around the candle with the design in contact with the wax. Strike a match and play the flame over the back of the paper. Allow time enough for the melted wax to harden and then remove the paper. The print will be transferred to the wax. Select designs that are not finer than the circumference of the candle. A good impression of ink on thin paper works best.

Navigation Aids on Hudson Bay.

The Canadian minister of marine has announced that his department is making active preparations to improve the aids to navigation on the Hudson bay route this season. Twelve new light houses will be established from the South strait to Port Nelson, and a wireless station will be established somewhere on the strait. A boat has been sent up to locate and start work on the light houses and place the necessary buoys in the strait and at Port Nelson harbor.

ELECTRICAL PROGRESS.

Possibility of Transmitting Heat and Power by Wireless.

Although electrical energy has become so commonplace that its use is regarded as an incident, it is within the memory of the most of us when its simplest applications were all curiosities. The engineer of the electric lighting plant, modern thirty years ago, if he entered the power plant today would find it difficult to understand the use and operation of the numerous electrical devices found therein, says the editor of Power.

The strides that have been made in this branch of engineering have surpassed the wildest dreams of thirty years ago. On one occasion a professor of electricity solemnly stated to his class that the trolley car would always require a trolley wire as a means of electrical transmission. Today street cars are successfully operated by means of storage batteries. The professor spoke according to the light of his time and could not see the developments destined for the future.

One of the greatest overhead charges against the electric transmitting plant is the cost and maintenance of the

AVERAGE COST OF AUTOMOBILE

CUT TO $814.00—OVER 700,000 MADE LAST YEAR

And the Business is Still in Its Infancy—Nearly Everyone to Have a Car Soon.

Do you want an automobile? So does everybody else.

Which means that the automobile business is becoming one of the biggest things in the world.

Last year—July 1914 to June 1915—we made 703,527 automobiles in America.

This year we'll make over a million.

And the industry is only 17 years old. Unlike the bicycle craze, it is not dying out. The automobile is no longer the plaything of the rich man. Folks on small pay are buying more than the well-to-do, for the price is getting down within the reach of all.

Of the 700,000 cars sold in the United States last year the average price was $814. Eight years ago the average price was $2,123. But that year only 44,000 cars were marketed.

The automobile to-day is knitting the country together as the railroads united the remote settlements 30 or 40 years ago. The growth of the motor car industry is even more amazing when you stop to consider it than was the spread of the iron rail.

Eighteen or 20 years ago, when the pioneers were experimenting with the first "horseless carriages," people laughed at them. They poked fun at Haynes of Indiana and Winton of Ohio, and Olds was known in Central Michigan as "Olds Fool."

It was 1899 before the automobile began to be produced in commercially important quantities. That year 3,700 were made, worth $1284 a piece on an average. The cars for three or four years made comparatively little headway. In 1903 only 11,000 cars were made and the price was a little bit lower than in 1899—$1150.

But from that time on the price went steadily upward and the automakers vied with one another for the trade of the wealthy. Luxury after luxury was placed on the cars, the richest styles were invented, and the auto craze swept over the rich and the near-rich of the nation.

Homes were mortgaged in order that families might have cars as expensive as those of their wealthiest neighbors across the street. Extravagance was the order of the day—both in buying cars and making them.

For every auto company had a method of its own. There wasn't a part in any make that would fit the component part of another. Automobiling meant having a high-priced chauffeur, really a mechanic, and if anything went wrong or broke it took days and weeks to get another part from the factory.

Then somebody took a tumble to what was going on. Whether it was Ford or Olds or somebody else matters little. Several makers saw that cheaper cars would have to be produced—and that all makes would have to be standardized. The year 1907 saw the birth of automobile sanity. Prices started coming down. People no longer thought it necessary to pay $4,000 or $5,000 for a car de luxe. Almost ANYBODY could have an automobile—so why pay enormous prices for a snobbish social distinction that no longer existed?

The average price paid for a car in 1907 was $2,123. In 1908 it was $1,621. This is what the average buyer paid—not what the average make cost.

The large quantity idea of production had its birth. The number of autos made nearly doubled in a twelvemonth.

Some firms tried to make cars as low as $250. This seemed to be carrying the thing too far. These makes never were popular.

Standardization was born. Automobile engineers designated standard size parts, so that a motorist was not obliged to seek the nearest branch of his particular factory to get his car repaired.

Luxuries that were only in the highest priced cars in 1906 began creeping into the cars of moderate cost. This was made possible by group production, turning out many cars at a time instead of only one.

The good roads movement received its first great impetus. "National roads" laid out across the Alleghenies by the early American government before the railroads were built were revived and extended across the continent. Today there are scores upon scores of organized roads connecting distant sections of the country, including the famous Lincoln highway, Midland trail, and Santa Fe trail, across the Rockies.

Brick and cement roads have been extended from the city limits far into the country, in many cases connecting large cities with pavements such as even the cities did not have 15 years ago.

Values of farms have doubled and trebled in countless with improved highways, and the cost of hauling produce from the farm to the market has been pared to a minimum. Loads of 8,000 pounds have been hauled on concrete roads, whereas 800 pounds was the limit of the dirt roads they supplanted.

Women now drive the largest and heaviest cars with more ease than their sisters six or eight years ago operated their little runabouts and coupes.

Were right in the midst of the century's greatest domestic development.

AUTOMOBILE GUIDE RAIL.

Device to Prevent Injuring Car Body in Narrow Passage.

A narrow passage that requires careful driving, to keep from scratching the body of an automobile, can be fitted with a guide rail that will make the driving easy, says Popular Mechanics. The rail consists of three pieces of lumber, one for the bottom of the rail, which is one inch thick and six inches wide, and two for the sides, each one inch thick and five inches wide. These are nailed or screwed securely together, as shown, in the form of a miter box. The rail should be somewhat longer than the passageway and if possible the sides should spread out a little to enable the driver to start the wheel into it without difficulty.

When ready to set the rail drive the automobile into the passage, carefully centering it, and mark the location. Remove a sufficient amount of earth to permit the rail to be sunk to within one inch of the top and tamp the dirt in solidly on both sides.

PRESENTS MANY FINE FEATURES

NEW 17 STUDEBAKER TYPES ARE VERY ATTRACTIVE.

Claim 1916 Output Will Exceed One Hundred Thousand Cars—The New Models.

One of the features of the automobile season is the appearance of the new series 17 Studebaker, six cylinder and four cylinder models.

The basic design of the series 17 cars shows no radical changes. The mechanical principles are retained intact. Refinements have been in the direction of greater roominess and comfort, along with still further conveniences. In spite of added features, however, the new series 17 four cylinder, seven passenger touring car now sells for $875. The three passenger roadster is priced at $850.

A notable addition to the Studebaker line is the six cylinder, seven passenger sedan model, the price of which is $1,675.

Other new series 17 six cylinder models are the three passenger landau roadster at $1,370; four passenger coupe at $1,600, and seven passenger limousine at $2,500. The four cylinder models include the three passenger landau roadster in addition to the touring car and roadster types.

One of the refinements in the series 17 cars is the divided front seat. The seats are adjustable fore and aft. The brake and clutch pedals have been lengthened in order to provide greater leverage and a consequent ease in control. This pedal adjustment, supplemented by the front seat adjustment, provides for drivers of varying sizes.

Unique Arrangement.

Another contribution to ease in driving is the removal of the cowl board forward and upward, thus gaining more leg room, and the more compact grouping of instruments upon the cowl. The arrangement is unique. Illumination of the instruments is secured by a new indirect lighting system.

By moving the gasoline tank from the cowl to the rear of the car and installing the Stewart vacuum feed system to insure a steady supply of gasoline at all times, more room is obtained in the front of the car.

Several refinements that anticipate the wishes of drivers are the provision of radiator guard to prevent mud from splashing up into the radiator; the removal of the carburetor air control bracket from the steering post to the cowl board, and the lapping of the upper glass of the windshield over the lower glass, thus rendering the windshield stormproof.

1916 Output 100,000 Cars.

The motor has a 3 3/4 inch bore and a 5 inch stroke developing forty horse-power in the four cylinder model and fifty horse power in the six cylinder car. The Wagner two-unit electric starting and lighting system is used, with still further refinements that give it power to turn the motor over easily, even in the coldest weather.

Rear axle is of the full floating type, with a complete equipment of Timken bearings throughout. The long resilient springs are of the 3/4 elliptic type in the rear and semi-elliptic in front. Riding comfort on the road is further provided by the Goodrich tires of generous size, 34x 4 inches safety tread on the rear.

Coincident with the appearance of the new series 17 models it is announced that the Studebaker output for 1916 will total 100,000 cars. The factory force is now working on a schedule that insures that number of machines during the coming year.

The Studebaker has two hustling representatives in this section of the state—A. L. Hart & Son of Charlevoix and J. H. Smith & Son of Central Lake.

ROCK ROADS—ROCK VALUES.

Kansas City Banker Points Out Money Value of Good Roads.

Kansas and Missouri are very active in building good highways—"rock roads," as they are called in that country, where limestone is the hardest material. One of the good roads boosters is W. S. Webb, a Kansas City banker, and he puts year round highways in terms of banking.

"We bankers will lend $10 to $25 an acre more on a farm situated on a rock road," he says. "Bankers in this neighborhood are keen judges of farm values. Most of them have farms as places for rest and play. Few bankers are good farmers when it comes to making actual profits on crops, but their farming pays handsomely in health and in understanding of the problems confronting farmers, with whom we do much of our business."

"The first thing the banker does when you approach him for a loan on farm property is to determine the selling value of the farm. He will lend you half the selling value, and he arrives at the selling value by ascertaining three things:

"First.—The soil, its character, condition and producing capacity, for a fertile farm in good till will grow crops, no matter where located or what the nature of its improvements."

"Second.—Its location, which means convenience to markets, schools, stores and other factors that increase value. Here is where the kind of road running past the farm plays a big part."

"Third.—Buildings and improvements."

"Suppose the land is set down as worth $40 an acre. If it is located on a rock road over which the owner can haul crops any month in the year the banker will add $10 an acre for that item. Probably the buildings will not come to more than $10 an acre, so the hard road is worth as much as the buildings in actual money. The total selling value of that farm is $60 an acre, and the banker will lend $30. On land worth $100 an acre a hard road adds $25."—Country Gentleman.

—a FOUR with the Power and Flexibility of most Sixes!

With its big 3 3/4-inch bore x 5-inch stroke FORTY horse power motor, this Studebaker rivals most of the Sixes on the market both in POWER and in flexibility of operation. It has driving, brute power that masters any hill or the roughest going you ever met. And yet it is power so marvelously adapted to the car's weight that it is as economical of fuel as most cars with much less power.

It's a motor that makes this new Studebaker a wonder to drive, and we'd just like to have the opportunity of taking you for a trial run, anywhere you say, as long as you say, as HARD as you say. Come in today.

Mr. Auto Driver:

We're Preaching the Gospel of Better Tires

Every motorist is clamoring for better tires, and so are we. If we could get hold of a truly resilient tire that would never puncture or blow out, we'd be tickled to death. We'd lay in a supply as tall as a church steeple. But there's no such tire. Men can't design it. Seems to be too tough a problem for this generation. So the thing to do is to look for the best among the present makes of pneumatic tires. We've done a lot of looking. Haven't found any pneumatic tires that can't be punctured or blown out, but we have found one that's a mighty sight less apt to commit either of those life sins. It's the Goodyear No-Kim-Cut tire. For one thing, this Goodyear tire never rim-cuts. That's a big point in its favor. "Rim cutting" seems to be done away with, too, by the flat-bladed piano wires in the bead of the Goodyear. Holds tire so tight to rim that tube can't slip under. And we note a lessening of blow-outs, due, so we understand, to a costly curing process called the "On-Air" method. We also like the ease with which one can apply and remove a Goodyear No-Kim-Cut tire. There's no hook to rust into the rim. All in all, the Goodyear No-Kim-Cut tire comes nearer perfection than any other.

Your Size in Stock There's a whole lot of demand for the Goodyear No-Kim-Cut. Most every body seems to be getting wise to it. We have had so many calls that we put in a complete stock—all sizes—both smooth and All-Weather treads. Your size is here.

Stick to Your Old Tires When you need new tires, you, but don't throw away the old ones till you are sure they are done for. Drive up and let us take a look. Perhaps we can suggest an inexpensive way for you to get another thousand miles from them. We're here to serve, you know—not merely to sell.

Expert Advice For the Automobile OwnerQueries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

Is it advisable when going down small grades or turning corners to throw out the clutch and let the car coast, or would the added wear on the clutch offset any benefit to the differential? My car has a cone clutch.

Excessively frequent engagement and disengagement of a cone clutch naturally increases the wear on the facing and operating parts, proportionately impairing their condition. It is very improbable that any possible degree of wear on the differential which would be avoided by throwing out the clutch and letting the car coast down small grades or around corners would be sufficiently great to compensate for the increased effort to the driver and the greater rapidity of wear on the clutch facing and linkage resulting from making this constant practice.

Is there more danger of fire from placing the gasoline tank in the coil than if located a greater distance from the engine?

No, because the tank is sufficiently remote from the ignition.

If one or two lifting rods on the intake valves of a six cylinder car are too tight or too loose, is there much loss of power? If so, would this be more noticeable in starting than in regular running? Would it have the same effect on the exhaust side, and why?

When the car leaves the factory the lifting rods and valve stems are adjusted so that the clearance between them is only sufficient to allow for expansion of the metal caused by the heating of the engine when running. As a rule there is only the thickness of a visiting card allowed for this clearance. Naturally the motor operates best with this clearance, and when one or more of the lifting rods are too tight or too loose the power output of the engine is diminished. If the rod on the intake side is too loose the valve remains closed for too long a period and is likely to stick. In either case the amount of the incoming charge of gas is cut down so that the explosion in the cylinder is much weaker than would be the case if the valve clearance were correct. If the rod is too tight the valve cannot close properly, and as a result the incoming charge of gas is not properly injected into the combustion chamber, and when compression and explosion take place the partly open valve makes a bad leak, which, of course, greatly reduces the power of the cylinder. Conditions such as these make starting more difficult, and their effect on the engine is more noticeable at this time than when running. If the lifting rods on the exhaust side are too loose the valves remain closed too long and prevent the scavenging stroke of the motor from driving all the burned gas out of the combustion chamber to leave it ready for the incoming charge of fresh gas. An exhaust valve is also more likely to stick if too loose than if its clearance were only the correct amount. If the lifting rods on the exhaust side are too tight the same conditions obtain as on the intake side. The valve cannot close properly, and it is impossible to secure perfect compression, which is requisite for the development of maximum power. The results of the lifting rods having incorrect clearance on either side are the same in a motor, whether of two, four, six, eight or twelve cylinders, though, of course, the effects would be more apparent in the engines with fewer cylinders.

Will a six volt starting and lighting battery give as brilliant a light with fifteen candle power bulbs as a lighting system operated through a battery from a generator driven by the engine, the same fifteen candle power bulbs being used?

Though a six volt starting and lighting battery will give practically as brilliant a light as a generator system for a short time the intensity of the light will naturally decrease in proportion to the amount of service which the battery is called upon to perform. On the other hand, with a generator system the battery is constantly being recharged and the lights are maintained at maximum brilliancy.

What is the average size, in cubic contents, of the combustion chamber of an internal combustion engine with relation to its horsepower?

The displacement of the motor is no exact measure of its power. As usually figured, it requires 8.5 cubic inches per horsepower at 1,000 r. p. m.

I have had trouble with my generator. The ammeter shows only a slight current. After I clean off the commutator with sandpaper it works well for a short time, but very soon the old trouble returns. What is the matter? The difficulty is probably due to a rough commutator. Cleaning with sandpaper, while it cleans the bars of the commutator, will leave the mica high, with the result that the brushes make imperfect contact, and the commutator bars soon burn black. The only way to correct this trouble is to remove the armature and have the commutator turned down in a lathe. There is also a possibility that the brushes which you are using are too soft.

When my throttle is at full retard it ordinarily permits enough gasoline to reach the engine to keep it running. Recently, however, my engine sometimes stops. Turning up the needle valve and allowing a little more gasoline to flow the engine would run all right throttled down even after the needle valve was returned to its original adjustment. What is the matter?

A number of solutions are possible. Your motor may not be running as well as it did formerly, with the result that it is more likely to stop when throttled down. It is also possible that the auxiliary air valve in the carburetor sticks occasionally, temporarily rendering the mixture inadequate. Valve trouble or any slight irregularity in operation frequently causes a motor to stop when running very slowly. You should see that all of these points are checked up and also that the link age between your throttle lever and carburetor is working properly; that there are no loose set screws permitting the lever to turn on the shaft, etc. Frequently a thorough cleaning and oiling will suffice.

Is thermo siphon cooling as efficient as the circulating pump?

Yes. If properly designed, though there are limitations to the size of the engine to which it is adaptable

HOW TO ECONO-
MIZE ON GASOLINERECORD FOR GALLON NEARLY NINETY MILES.Depends Greatly on Driver and Condition of Car—Advice on What to Do.

Gasoline is elastic; a gallon will drive a car almost any distance—the record is nearly 90 miles. This is food for thought for those who are worrying over the high price of fuel. By taking a few simple precautions it is possible for every owner to reduce greatly the consumption per mile. If the car is run too slowly or fast there is fuel waste—15 miles per hour is a good average.

Until now the average motorist has been careless about the amount of fuel he used because it was comparatively cheap and was a small percentage of the total car expense.

Make sure that you are getting all the gasoline you pay for. Some owners are not. Watch the counter on the pump to see that it registers the correct number of gallons and that the operator does not tamper with it while filling your tank.

Furthermore, be certain that you obtain full measure. Some gasoline pumps leak; others have been fixed to give a short gallon. It is almost impossible to find the error by examining the pump, so it is necessary to check the amount in your tank by frequent measurement. Or if this is not feasible it is advisable occasionally to put a gallon in a can of your own and measure the quantity when you get home.

Most cars can be operated with a leaner mixture without affecting the production of power. Some motorist may even deem it advisable to run with a very lean adjustment, notwithstanding a reduction in hill climbing ability or speed.

The exact adjustment must be determined by trial.

An auxiliary air device which may be attached to the manifold and operated from the dash, should be used. It will be found helpful when running with light load along a smooth level road or down hill. When the motor is used as a brake the suction on the carburetor is reduced to a minimum by opening the auxiliary air device wide. The car should run easily. All the bearings be well greased and free. It should be possible to push the car without difficulty with one hand on a smooth level surface. The importance of reducing friction to the minimum is shown by the fact that a racing car in good condition may be pushed with one finger.

The wheels should spin readily, which means that the bearings must be free and the brake bands and shoes must not drag. When descending long hills the car should be allowed to coast with the motor dead and the clutch out, or the shifting lever in neutral. If the latter is done, then the motor must be started and the clutch shaft brought to a speed higher than that of the car before the gear can be re-engaged.

Except on very rough roads, it takes less power to drive a car with tires well inflated. Use the tire gauge often.

Drive with the spark advanced as far as possible; usually this is all the way.

Retard it only when the motor knocks.

Don't allow your power to be wasted by leaky valves or piston rings.

Always shut the engine off when the car is standing. A great deal of fuel is wasted by idling, more than motorists realize.

Traffic should be avoided. There is an astonishing difference between the amount of fuel required by identical cars, one driven in traffic and the other in the country. Running on low gear, slipping the clutch and the idling of the motor when standing are the causes.

New Rubber Substitute.
Among the most recent substitutes for rubber is seaweed in England there is being made a product from seaweed which is said to be as good as rubber for the manufacture of tires and similar purposes, and, while it has not been used for boats, the experiments which have been made in this direction seem to indicate that it will be found cheaper and more durable than either leather or rubber.

To Find Acid In Oil.
A simple method of ascertaining whether an oil contains acid or not is to immerse a polished copper plate in it for a few minutes, says the American Machinist. If no acid is present there will be no change in the appearance of the plate, but a trace of acid will dim the surface.

GOOD ROADS AID IN MARKETING

BETTER HIGHWAYS A GREAT BENEFIT TO ALL.

New Method of Merchandising Suggested to Farmer for Disposing of His Products.

Although the subject of good roads has been written about and talked about from every possible angle, it is a subject that vitally affects every citizen. It has an influence on his business, and this difference between well paved streets and roads is the difference between the backwoods boundary town and the up-to-date city.

We must realize that the question of good roads is largely a question of finance. Regardless of the number of good roads editions of newspapers, good roads banquets, good roads conventions, the building of good roads involves vast sums of money.

In the early days substantial aid was given road building by the United States government; with the advent of the railroad the building of pikes and canals was carried on by counties and cities without government aid. A great many million dollars were given to the railroads and little or nothing to perfecting a national road system.

Motorists Want Good Roads.

The present agitation for the improvement of country roads is directly due to the influence of the automobile and the urgent demand is from the country districts, ably seconded by the automobile owning population of the cities. The cities are usually well paved, the streets carefully named and numbered, but the farmer is groping along in the streak of mud that runs by his farm much as he did 50 or 100 years ago.

The proprietor of a farm is engaged in the business of farming. Frequently, the farmer, when you ask him what business he is engaged in, will remark that he is not in business, that "he is only a farmer." The farmer is mistaken in this.

Every owner of a farm or every renter of a farm, is surely the original business man. True, he is not a manufacturer, but generally he is in business on his own account, finding his own capital, producing his own product, and then, after he produces it, he has to be business man enough to sell it in the best markets at the highest prices.

Farmers Demand Better Roads.

Imagine the business man without a number on his building, without a sign designating the character of his business and with nothing whatever to attract trade to his place of business—then you will realize just what the farmer is doing with reference to his own business. The actual investment in the average farm in dollars and cents is more than the average investment of the city business man.

One of the first steps the farmer is taking toward becoming a real business man is to insist that his method of communication with his neighbors and his trading center be equal to that of the city business man. He is asking good, hard, smooth roads that can be traveled in any day of the year, over which his team or automobile can travel in any day of the year, over which his team or automobile can pull a maximum load with a minimum amount of effort. These roads would enable him to reach his market when prices are highest and when his goods are ready for delivery.

Vast volumes of business are transacted in the cities and they deal on a margin of one per cent. or various fractions thereof and fortunes are made in those slight changes in values, yet the difference that a farmer can realize in the value of his crop between selling it at the favorable time would probably represent a saving to him of 10 or 15 per cent. of the value of his year's product.

Farmers Using Antiquated System.

The farmer has a greater variety of goods to sell than many merchants in the city, but he does not display his wares nor does he make known his sales place, but he is following the antiquated methods of marketing his products that were used by his father and grandfather.

The pleasure automobiles in Charlevoix are mostly owned by men of families. From now until snow flies again these automobilists will be scouring the highways and byways for a hundred miles around Charlevoix. If the farmer would offer for sale to these cash customers the products of his farm, how long would it take for the householders to become accustomed to running out into the country to get their fresh eggs, butter, chickens, and farm and garden products?

All that is necessary to start this new method of merchandizing is to have reasonably good roads from the city to the farm districts and for the farmer to buy signs and show his merchandise, as the city merchant does. This would result in bringing the producer and the consumer directly together to their mutual profit.

The farmer merchant would get a better price for his product and the consumer would benefit by getting fresh produce at slightly less price than he now pays.

Can you tell me how to eliminate a noise occurring in the differential of my car and how to adjust it so that I will not have to buy a new gear?

The only adjustment of the rear axle gears necessary is to obtain the proper mesh of the two driving gears. If these get out of proper adjustment there will be an excessive humming noise in the rear axle.

To adjust the gears remove the plate at the top rear of the driveshaft housing. Turn the adjusting collar by placing a tool in one of the small holes through the collar, turning the collar to the right meshes the gears tighter. It is a good plan to make this adjustment while driving the car on a smooth road.

The new $615 Overland car is now on display at my garage—Benj. Brown. Adv. 1411f

In these days of quality production with the leading automobile manufacturers of the United States planning for the turning out of a round million of cars the present fiscal year the question of what may be termed the automobile population of the world naturally arises. Where do these thousands of American cars and additional thousands made in foreign countries go?

According to statistics compiled by the Horseless Age, a leading automobile trade magazine, following its efforts to obtain an automobile census of the world, there are approximately 3,114,000 automobiles in use.

U. S. Holds Lead.
An idea of the position the United States occupies in the motoring field may be gained when it is known that the 714,000 cars in service in other sections of the world represent less than the total of cars registered in the states of New York, Ohio, Iowa and California.

There is one important factor in connection with the compilation of these figures which has to be reckoned with, but which tends further to advance the standing of the United States as a nation of automobiles. This is the war now raging on the other side of the Atlantic. The leading nations involved in this struggle include the foremost of the European automobile builders and users. In Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria, Russia and Italy practically all the private owned motor vehicles have been requisitioned for military service, in which their period of usefulness is decidedly limited. The absence of official figures on the number of cars in use in these countries makes it necessary to estimate the "motor population," using as the basis for this approximation the number of vehicles officially recorded before the war, adding the machines shipped from the United States to the various countries since the spring of 1914 and also including a moderate allowance for the vehicles that might have been made at home in the war period. It must be remembered, however, that in view of the fact that the various factories are in effect government controlled, the number of cars produced for private consumption is indeed very small. In Great Britain practically all the motor car factories have been converted into munition plants, but in France several of the automobile companies are permitted to assemble parts made before the war into cars for private use.

Cars in Europe.
Many of the countries recorded in the accompanying table do not, officially enumerate the motor vehicles within their borders, the figures shown having been obtained from reports from consular officers and United States government export statistics. The United States of course, ranks first, having more than three times as many cars as all the other countries combined. Great Britain comes second with its 276,690 cars, which represents about one vehicle to every nine in this country. France and Germany, with their network of good roads and years of advance over the United States in the general manufacture of motor vehicles, occupy third and fourth places respectively with 98,400 and 71,450. It is interesting to note in connection with these four countries that their standing in the automobile manufacturing line is relatively the same as that given above for consumption.

Canada, on the other hand, has never been a quality manufacturer of automobiles, but has always been the heaviest buyer of cars made in this country. Within the last few years several American manufacturers have established plants in the Dominion where cars are assembled. Most of the cars, however, have been made for export purposes, the Canadian assembled machines getting a preferential tariff over the United States cars when being shipped to the British colonies.

Canada Good Buyer.
While Canada ranks fifth in the motor nations with 55,660 cars, Mexico, on our southern border, is well down on the list with but 4,290 cars. Australia is a country of exclusively imported cars, a large portion being sent from America, and contains about 20,350 machines. Of the South American countries, with their total of over 23,200 cars, Argentina holds the leading portion with 12,550 cars, with Brazil and Uruguay following with 5,400 and 1,810 cars.

Russia until three years ago imported all its automobiles. About a year before the breaking out of the war two motor car manufacturing plants were established, one at Riga and the other at Moscow, but the little progress made along production lines was abruptly halted by the war. Among the concerns that distributed the 15,360 machines in use in Russia are several representatives of American car manufacturers. Austria's manufacturing activities are also modest, a majority of the 13,160 carrying Austrian license plates being made outside its borders. Italy, the home of several cars which have gained considerable prestige in this country and the land where the automobile owner pays, or at least did pay before the war, 50 cents a gallon for his gasoline, is ninth on the list of motoring nations with 13,000 cars.

The price of gasoline, not only in Italy but in all of Europe has had an important influence on the development of the automobile. Although automobile owners of the United States are at present in a furor over gasoline being retailed at an average of 22 cents a gallon, it is not a hard one after considering that before the war motorists of Great Britain were paying in the neighborhood of 26 cents a gallon and car owners of Continental Europe from 40 to 50 cents a gallon for their motor fuel. The great distances from the American and Russian oil fields to the European centers of population and the government tax placed upon gasoline brought about these high prices. A comparison of the six cents a gallon levied on this fuel by the British government and the one cent a gallon proposed for this country is also interesting at this time.

Incense the Magneto.
A little splash of water, either from drips on the fan in filling the radiator or from washing the car, will often put the magneto out of action until the moisture dries out. Magneto should be incensed.

Care of the Vibrator.
If a master vibrator does not work properly clean the platinum points and readjust, using a common visiting card as a gauge of distance between the points. The vibrations must be very rapid.

Many of Them Do.
"Did you say he lived in New York day in and day out?"
"No, day in and night out."—Judge.

MOTOR ITS BIG TALKING POINT

CHEVROLET TELLS OF CAR'S MECHANICAL MERITS.

Valve-in-Head Type, Has Detachable Head, Best Bearings, Small Cylinder Bore, Highest Efficiency.

The Chevrolet company regards its motor as one of its greatest talking points.

In the first place, it is of the celebrated valve-in-head type. It is different from the ordinary valve-in-head motor, having a detachable head (containing all of the valve mechanism) which can be easily disconnected, permitting the grinding of the valves and removal of carbon at the bench.

It is different from the ordinary valve-in-head motor in that it has no valve cages, doing away with the 64 unnecessary parts, very materially reducing the weight and permitting direct cooling of the valves.

It is different from the ordinary valve-in-head motor in that it is built with Doehler bronze back bearings—the best bearings money can buy.

It is different from the ordinary valve-in-head motor in design, balance, proportions and accuracy of timing, resulting in a motor which produces more power for its size and weight than any other motor in the world.

It is different from the ordinary valve-in-head motor in that it has a very much smaller cylinder bore; but with proper port areas, perfect vaporizing of fuel and our peculiar method of vacuum exhaust we obtain more mileage per gallon of gasoline than any other motor of its size yet produced.

It is different from the ordinary valve-in-head motor in that there is the utmost accessibility to magneto and generator, with no heat interference to destroy the efficiency of these important instruments; the exhaust pipe also carries the heat away from the toe-board and floor boards, making the front part of the car most comfortable and requiring no ventilation.

It is different from the ordinary valve-in-head motor in that the wiring is enclosed in flexible metal tubing, preventing any burning of the wires or soaking with oil to cause short-circuiting. The system of wiring is entirely new and is not used on any other car on the market at the present time.

It is different from the ordinary valve-in-head motor in that we use the world's standard Zenith carburetor, the simplest in construction, most efficient and economical ever designed, enabling us to obtain a mileage of 26 1/2 to 30 miles per gallon.

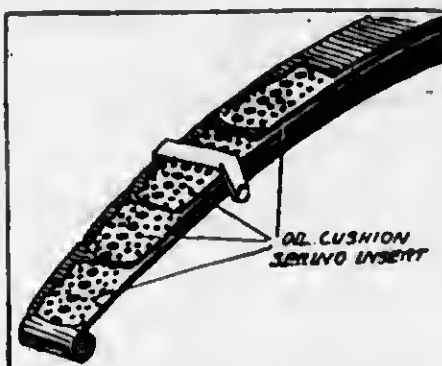

Because of these differences the Chevrolet motor should have your consideration. As a rifle is to a shotgun so is the Chevrolet to any other motor built.

The Chevrolet cars are represented in this issue by F. S. Bettes, Charlevoix; Hall & Ashley, East Jordan, and J. H. Elzinga, Ellsworth. Any of these men will gladly demonstrate the car to your satisfaction.

The clutch collar used on the CHEVROLET models is one of the greatest refinements made in automobile construction in the last ten years. This is a patented device, owned by the company covered by eleven claims, and used exclusively on the CHEVROLET car. It cannot be found on any other car at any price.

The collar is cored bronze casting, holding about a cupful of oil. Through the shell at proper distances, special wood plugs are inserted, extending into the oil receptacle, through which plugs the oil to the center of the clutch hub. The centrifugal motion then carries it to the outside, preventing friction, heating and cutting. The collar carries sufficient oil for about two months' use, and can easily be refilled through a cover in the top of the casting.

UNIVERSITIES ARE FOR ALL CLASSES

HOW THEY CO-OPERATE WITH ALL HIGH SCHOOLS.

Thirty-three in State are Affiliated with Chicago University, Including Charlevoix H. S.

One of the most interesting educational developments in recent years is the manner in which universities have become popular institutions. Everyone knows to-day that they are as clearly "for the people" as they used to be for the fortunate "elect." The big universities now reach out a helping hand to the smaller secondary schools. It makes no fundamental difference whether these schools happen to be in great cities or in small towns. The relationship is the same. "And it is of interest in this connection to note how the privately endowed colleges vie with the public state university in being a "big brother" to the high schools.

Anyone whose familiarity with higher education in the United States covers a period of twenty-five years can easily recall the day when the term "co-operation" to describe relations between colleges and universities on the one hand and secondary schools on the other would have been unintelligible, if not inconceivable. At that time the attitude of the colleges was one of indifference or arbitrary dictatorship; that of the schools one of awe or fear of rebellion. Now the situation has changed so entirely that it is merely commonplace to speak of the cordial relations with which these two types of educational institutions are working together.

Every state university calls into council superintendents and high school principals from every part of the territory covered by its sphere of influence. A short time ago athletic events presented almost exclusive points of contact. To-day they receive no more attention than that given to occasions upon a purely educational level. The colleges and universities no longer reach down. They reach out to the secondary schools. The two, with mutual interest and sense of equality, combine for promoting the interests for which they stand in common.

The "big brother" attitude of the university toward hundreds of training schools of the country more or less "just grew." It may be that the new conception of educational relations was sure to express itself at a certain period in the development of educational technique. At all events, it was taken up with gravity by numerous state universities, and at its founding by the University of Chicago, which has probably given the matter more attention than any other strictly private institution.

The original plan of this university was unique in that two types of relationship were contemplated. One was known as affiliation, which involved no financial relationship, but gave the university control of the secondary school's educational procedure. Obviously, such an arrangement could be entered into only in the case of private secondary schools. The relationship between the university and public high schools was therefore put on a different basis, and was from the outset designated by the term "co-operation."

By the process of elimination the University of Chicago has adopted a system which comprises "accredited" schools, from which a graduate presenting regular high school blanks, indorsed by the faculty and principal and showing that the required amount and prescribed subjects of college preparatory work have been done, will be accepted at the higher institution without entrance examinations. In addition, the officers of the "co-operating" school have the privilege of nominating one member of each graduating class for an honor scholarship at the university. Other scholarships in this newer system of co-operation are granted to the boy and girl winning in an annual oratorical contest held at the university, and to seniors in co-operating schools who pass a competitive examination in certain subjects.

As one considers this new method of co-operation it grows increasingly interesting. For instance, the principal, superintendents and instructors in co-operating schools are members of an educational conference held annually in Chicago, at which time the bonds between the higher and secondary institutions are strengthened, and matters of mutual concern naturally considered. Moreover, many of the high school instructors join the ranks of graduate students at the University of Chicago during its summer quarter, which is perhaps the busiest and most varied season at the big Middle West seat of learning. The friendly spirit of their relationship is indicated by the university's half-rate granted to such instructors. Junior college classrooms at the university are open to these secondary teachers for observation, and often many of the co-operating instructors sit as visitors to see what really is expected of their charges when they reach the college lecture room.

Broke His Leg.

About the first thing that happened to George Bassett after he had purchased a new motor cycle last week, was a bad accident that will lay him up for some time. Bassett was near Bay Shore when the machine skidded and fell on him, breaking his leg. He was taken to the Petoskey hospital where the bone was set and afterward brought to his home in this city.

HELP TO FORM ASSOCIATIONS

PART OF THE WORK OF COUNTY AGRICULTURISTS.

Ten Already Formed in State and Are Producing Wonderful Results.

Ten of the county agricultural agents of Michigan have formed county potato associations in their counties. These organizations are for the purpose of getting the united action of the farmers of the county upon the more important problems of the growing and marketing of potatoes.

Among the potato-growing states Michigan ranks second, but the future of the industry will depend largely upon the associated efforts of our potato growers. The profits of this crop now depend largely upon co-operation. In those counties where associations have been formed the farmers agree to produce only pure varieties of the type that is in greatest demand by our best markets. These potatoes are then inspected at various times throughout the season for the purpose of keeping the varieties pure and also for the purpose of keeping them free from the more serious potato diseases. There is a rapidly growing demand for disease-free potatoes for seed.

In addition to this there is great need for our potato growers to act together for the prevention of the spread of potato diseases. These diseases may be spread by shipments of seed from other states or by the use of diseased seed grown in this state or within the county. If we are to stay in the potato business we must keep out the diseases that are destroying the industry in other places. By concerted action in getting pure varieties and keeping them free from disease the growers are in a position not only to get good yields but also to sell in the best markets. The best markets want medium size potatoes of a certain type and color.

If the growers act together they can supply these markets in carload lots and in addition to this they will be in a position to enter the best seed markets of the south and other portions of the country wanting Michigan potatoes for seed.

WINDOW DROPS ON HIS NECK

SHOCKING ACCIDENT FRIDAY AT HOPKINSON SCHOOL.

Walter Burns Instantly Killed While Making Exit from Schoolhouse Through Window.

One of the most shocking accidents that ever took place in this section occurred last Friday noon at the Hopkinson schoolhouse, just south of Greensburg Hill, when Walter Burns, the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Burns, was accidentally killed by a window falling, striking him on the neck.

The accident happened during the noon hour. The teacher, Miss Edna Strigley, had been invited to the home of one of the neighbors for dinner. Before dismissing school prior to the dinner hour she informed the scholars where she was going to spend the noon hour and cautioned them not to enter nor attempt to enter the schoolhouse during her absence, and locked the door when she left.

The Burns boy, as well as many other scholars from a distance, carried their dinner, and as the day was a pleasant one, ate them in the schoolyard. After the young Burns boy had eaten his dinner he went to the schoolhouse and entered it by raising one of the windows. Upon making his exit, in some manner the window fell, striking him across the back of the neck, breaking it and holding the body hanging from the window until discovered by the teacher when she entered the schoolroom after returning from dinner. The boy was dead when taken from the position found in, the weight of the window breaking his neck.

The body was removed to the home of his parents, who live on the Hammett farm south of the school house.

Walter Burns was born in Escanaba, June 2, 1908, and would have been nine years of age next month. He was a bright little fellow and stood well in his classes. He will be greatly missed by his playmates, as well as his heart-broken parents.

Funeral services were held from the home Monday morning at ten o'clock. Rev. Quinton Walker, officiating. Interment at Brookside cemetery.

SEND SEVEN DELEGATES TO STATE CONVENTION

Charlevoix County Represented by Wellknown Party Workers.

The following delegates were chosen to represent Charlevoix county at the state Democratic convention held in Lansing on Wednesday of this week at the county convention held in this city last Friday:

R. E. Sloan, Charlevoix.
T. George Finnean, Charlevoix.
Patsy Flanigan, Charlevoix.
W. J. Lewis, Boyne City.
Frank J. Pierce, Boyne Falls.
John Monroe, East Jordan.
Dr. R. A. Risk, East Jordan.

SATURDAY IS DOLLAR DAY

MERCHANTS MAKE PREPARATIONS FOR BIG EVENT.

Various Forms of Amusement Provided to Entertain the Big Crowd Anticipated.

Saturday is Dollar Day. Charlevoix merchants have been busily engaged for the past week, arranging stocks and preparing for the big event. Every store in the city will be prepared to greet the big crowd of bargain hunters and it is anticipated that the hundreds of dollar bargains will go with a rush.

This is the first big event of this nature pulled off under the auspices of the Charlevoix Commercial Association, and the effect of the heavy advertising campaign conducted for the past two weeks will be anxiously watched.

Every merchant is offering at least two big bargains for a dollar, and many have more. They are real values, too, for the amount asked. In many cases goods to the aggregate amount of from $1.40 to $2.00 are being offered for a lone dollar. It is the intent of the merchants to impress upon the people that just as good bargains can be obtained in Charlevoix as any other place, mail order catalogues included. And the best part of it is that the money will stay at home—right in this community.

Farmers and citizens are urged to respond to the offers made, and make this a red letter day. If you want your dollar to have almost double purchasing power, now is your opportunity. You will be a distinct loser if you fail to grab the offers made.

Come to Charlevoix—bring the family—make it a day of outing. The merchants have provided entertainment and have opened their doors to you. Ask for free tickets to the matinee at the Majestic during the afternoon. Watch for the Boy Scout parade.

Get together, visit, shake hands, and the future will be brighter and your work easier accomplished for many days to come.

DIXON AVENUE TO BE A LIGHTED BOULEVARD

Will Make Most Beautiful Street in City When Completed.

A big majority of the citizens residing on Dixon avenue presented a monster petition to the common council on Monday asking that the street be equipped with the boulevard lighting system.

The route to be covered is as follows: Michigan avenue from north line of Pine River to north line of Dixon avenue. Dixon avenue from waters of Lake Michigan east to Mercer boulevard, and Mercer boulevard from the south line of Cherry street south to Chicago avenue; thence on Chicago avenue east to the waters of Pine Lake; also from the westerly line of Mercer boulevard westerly to the right of way of the Pere Marquette railroad.

The petition was unanimously adopted by the council, and as soon as possible the work of installing the system will begin, which will consist of three globes on standards, like those on both approaches of the bridge. When completed the street will be one of the most beautiful drives that any city can point to with pride.

A Correction.

The Courier reporter was misinformed last week when given the details of the Wripley-Herrington wedding. As the article appeared, it stated the knot was tied by Rev. Quinton Walker, which should have been Rev. L. C. Vinyard. However, the knot was well tied and should stand whether a Baptist bowline or a Methodist lanyard.

COUNTY EIGHTH GRADE EXAMS.

COUNTY SCHOOL COMMISSIONER DIRECTS THE WORK.

Over 240 Take Examination at Various Headquarters Throughout the County.

The eighth grade examinations were held on Thursday and Friday of last week in five places in the county. The county commissioner of schools, Miss Mae Stewart, had supervision of the examinations held in the normal room of the high school building in Charlevoix and those at East Jordan. Examinations were also held at Boyne City, Boyne Falls, and St. James at the same time, in charge of A. T. Greenman, Supt. Holiday of the Boyne City schools, Miss Mary Ford at Boyne Falls, and Miss Mae Donoghue of St. James.

Each examiner was furnished with the necessary blank by the county commissioner, and also with the lists of questions to be answered by the contestants for the trip to the Detroit state fair. The five boys standing the highest in the answers to these questions and also in the examinations can later appear before Miss Stewart and the master of Pomona grange and the president of the farmers institute for a further test. The winner gets this trip to the fair free and only boys are eligible.

There are 69 schools in the county, five of which maintain high schools. Over 240 pupils took the examinations, and these were all from the 64 rural schools of the county.

School Census Year.

The time for taking the annual school census is now at hand, and Miss Stewart has mailed to the directors of each school in the county blanks for taking the 1916 school census. This census has to be completed 15 days before June 1. She also sends to each director blanks for a statistical and financial report of the districts. All these blanks must come back to her, properly filled out by August 1, and she is expected to file them with the state superintendent of instruction before September 5. The census of this year is used as a basis for making the annual appropriation of primary school money next year, and the compilation must be a complete one. It includes all children of school age—from 5 years to 21. Miss Stewart keeps two copies of the census reports, and one is kept by the director.

DEATH CLAIMS A. T. BURNETT

WAS A PIONEER AND INDUSTRIOUS BUSINESS MAN.

Settled in Northern Michigan in 1863—Resident of Charlevoix Since 1895.

In the death of Amos T. Burnett, which occurred shortly before two o'clock Friday afternoon at his home on Park avenue, Charlevoix and northern Michigan loses one of its earliest pioneers and most industrious business men. Up to ten days prior to his death he had been actively engaged in his business affairs, and the care of the grounds about his home. During the first days of his illness it was not thought to be serious, but as the course of the disease continued, little hope was held for his recovery on account of his advanced age.

Amos T. Burnett was born on a farm in Ashtabula county, Ohio, February 18, 1840. Soon after reaching his majority he went to Cleveland, where he found employment in an oyster house. Here he made the acquaintance of Captain Fargo, whom he joined in a fish buying expedition to northern Michigan. They landed at Harbor Springs in September, 1863.

Mr. Burnett was so favorably impressed with the country that he decided to remain there. He remained in Harbor Springs about five years. In the fall of 1868 he entered the employ of Capt. John Wagley and went to Cross Village, where he took charge of a store. In 1869 they succeeded in having a post office established at that place and Mr. Burnett was appointed postmaster at a salary of $12.00 a year.

On December 2, 1871, he was united in marriage to Miss Sarah C. Wagley. To this union three children were born, Mrs. Nellie E. Hinchey of this city, and H. L. Burnett of Lansing and E. A. Burnett of Harbor Springs.

In 1877 he engaged in the general mercantile business for himself. Cross Village became the natural trading place for the northern part of Emmet county and Mr. Burnett lent a helping hand to many a struggling homesteader. He became prominently identified with the affairs of the township and county, having held the office of supervisor, county clerk and register of deeds.

On the first day of October, 1895, he moved his family to Charlevoix and engaged in the dry goods business. In the fall of 1903 his store burned and soon thereafter he engaged in the insurance and real estate business, which he continued up to the time of his death.

He was identified with the Presbyterian church at Cross Village from the time of its organization in 1866, until his removal to Charlevoix, where he became a member of the Congregational church here. For a number of years he was a member of the board of trustees and was a deacon at the time of his death.

Funeral services were held from the Congregational church, Sunday, at 3:00 p. m., Rev. C. E. Taggart, officiating. Interment at Brookside cemetery.

Sustained Painful Injuries.

Last week while Raymond Stafford of Norwood, was working in the field with a drill, he attempted to back the team. The pole flew up, striking his face and causing him to bite his tongue half off. It is said that the attending physician was compelled to take nine stitches in his tongue and five in his throat. The injury was a very serious and painful one.

RHEUMATISM ARRESTED

"Many people suffer the tortures" of lame muscles and stiffened joints because of impurities in the blood, and each succeeding attack seems more acute until rheumatism has invaded the whole system. To arrest rheumatism it is quite as important to improve your general health as to purify your blood, and the cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is nature's great blood-maker, while its medicinal nourishment strengthens the organs to expel the impurities and rebuild your strength. Scott's Emulsion is helping thousands every day who could not find other relief. Refuse the alcoholic substitutes.

Man's Limitations.

Man has been able to learn some things, but has forgotten many others. He has not added one sense to his senses, one limb to his limbs, one faculty to his soul. He has merely explored another region of the circle in which he is confined. The human mind is always in motion. It runs from one point to another. It exalts what it embraces and forgets what it has abandoned. It never manages to cultivate one part of its domain without leaving the others fallow. "The Inequality of the Human Race."

When the sunlight warm and cheery Makes your winter clothes look weary,

And your heavy underwear begins to cling;

When the garden's mammoth ash-pile Marks the tomb of last fall's cash pile,

And the dicky birds and bards begin to sing;

When the women's clothes grow brighter And the clouds and bills grow lighter;

Then it's pretty safe to gamble that it's spring.

Walter G. Doty in Judge.

Not long ago the editor of an English paper ordered a story of certain length, but when the story arrived he discovered that the author had written several hundred words too many.

The paper was already late in going to press, so there was no alternative—the story must be condensed to fit the allotted space. Therefore the last few paragraphs were cut down to a single sentence. It read thus:

"The earl took a Scotch highball, his hat, his departure, no notice of his pursuers, a revolver out of his hip pocket, and, finally, his life."—Everybody's.

A young couple went to a minister's house to get married. After the ceremony the bridegroom drew the clergyman aside and said in a whisper: "I'm sorry I have no money to pay your fee, but if you'll take me down in the cellar I'll show you how to fix your gas meter so that it won't register."

After a period of six months of widowhood Bridget consented to again enter the married state. Some weeks after she was led to the altar, says London Tit-Bits, her old mistress met her in the street dressed in the deepest mourning.

"Why, Bridget," she exclaimed, "for whom are you in black?"

"For poor Barney, my first husband, mum. When he died I was that poor Oi couldn't afford to buy mourning, but Oi said if ever Oi could Oi would, and me new man, Tim, is as generous as a Lord."

This story which started on the Chautauqua circuit is passed along by Everybody's: A hooking agent for a Chautauqua bureau visited the most prominent man of the town "Mr. Jones," said he, "I called to see you in regard to a Chautauqua." "It won't do a bit of good," spoke up the prominent citizen, "my wife and I have looked over all the catalogues carefully and have already decided on another machine."

School Commissioner's Notes

A big eighth grade class; at least 250 that took the examination.

It is to be hoped that every boy and every girl receiving a diploma will attend high school next year. Tuition can and must be paid up to $20 per year if application is made before the fourth Monday in June.

If the teachers who are planning on attending the state normals this summer wish to send in their names together with which normal they plan on attending, the commissioner will make out a list of those from this county attending each school, so that by consulting the list they may know who is there from home. Then it would be an easy matter to have Charlevoix county parties as well as minor Charlevoix county mass meetings, and yells at the faculty receptions. Just meet to appoint a yell master and leader, that's all.

Athletic meet at the fair grounds for South Arm township. That rainy day rather spoiled it. Nothing fair about it.

On a more careful figuring of the score, the East Jordan Agriculture Club found that in the Wilson athletic meet the Knopp school was in the lead, with Afton a close second.

Time to take the census now. Everybody's busy.

Twenty-two certificates will be issued from the April teachers' examinations.

Mrs. Cowles plans on being here for a canning demonstration June 30th. Complete program published later.

COUNTY NORMAL NOTES.

Catherine LaLonde.

Sadie Donlevy was absent from school, Monday morning, on account of illness.

Ruth Chellis and Renn Carroll spent the week end at their respective homes.

Florence Maddaugh was absent from school, Wednesday morning, on account of illness.

A new set of practice teachers began their work last Monday. Mary Boice has work with the sixth grade history, Rena Carroll and Catherine LaLonde have the third grade language, and Sadie Donlevy work with the chart class.

Last Thursday and Friday the eighth grade examinations were held in the normal room. During this time the normal class held their regular sessions at the library and also did observation work in the first, second and seventh grades.

Miss Carrie Geiken visited the normal room last Tuesday afternoon and gave a very interesting talk concerning her profession, which is that of nursing. Miss Geiken was called home from her duties on account of the illness of her father.

Last Monday evening the class enjoyed a trip to the Walker school for the purpose of being present at a district meeting. Miss Stewart and Mr. Colfee had charge of this meeting during which the plans for a standard school were discussed. Refreshments were served by the school children, under the direction of their teacher, Miss Grace Meggison, and an excellent program was given, which consisted of speeches, songs, and yells. This meeting shows the co-operation and progress of the Walker school district.

Suffrage Notes

"When Abraham Lincoln spoke of a government of the people, for the people, and by the people, he put in the fewest possible words all that we can think of as desirable in government. I do not see how we can have a government of the people, for the people, or by the people, until our women have an equal voice with men. They share with us to the full in everything except the ballot. They should share with us in that not only because it is just and right, but because they are fully as competent as men to use that ballot wisely."—Henry C. Wallace, editor of Wallace's Farmer.

Senator Shafroth of Colorado, in a speech before the U. S. senate recently, stated facts which absolutely disprove imagined objections to the ballot for women. He said that that the good women outnumber the bad ones overwhelmingly, and vote in much larger proportion; that women do not neglect their homes; they vote independently, and so better nominations are necessary; the polls have been cleaned up and made more orderly, and a long list of improved legislation is due to the direct aid of women voters.

"The worst child labor conditions are found in states where women cannot vote," says Owen Lovejoy, secretary of the Child Labor Commission.

"In the United States, California has become the banner baby state. It has the highest birth rate in the union and a very low death rate. The lowest infant death rate in the United States is in Seattle, Washington."—The Woman Voter.

It looks very much as if giving the ballot to mothers might be the quickest and best way of solving the "race suicide" problem. California and Washington are both suffrage states.

The fight for equal manhood suffrage was longer and fiercer than anything the women are likely to be called upon to endure.—The Boston Globe.

"If women had had the right to vote it would not have taken 26 years to pass the pure food law," says Miss Alice Lakey, chairman of the food committee of the National Consumers' League.

DEMAND FOR ECONOMY.

Various candidates for governor are declaring for economy in the state administration. One wants the budget system, another some other system, but all agree that the tax rate has remained practically constant while year by year the state tax commission has gone on shoving up the valuation and that something radical must be done. Our state expenditures have advanced from four millions under Governor Bliss to nine millions under Governor Ferris, yet no one would pretend that there has been a corresponding advance either in wealth or population.

The fact is, Michigan is "commission ridden," and the people themselves are primarily responsible.
There may be and doubtless is some value in the railroad commission, but in the opinion of the Times the state tax commission law needs radical revision, if indeed it would not be to the advantage of the state to abolish it altogether. Their arbitrary methods are contrary to our conception of a free government, when "experts" with no knowledge of local conditions can invade a county and dictate to supervisors, usually better informed and able to judge accurately and justly than are these so-called "experts," arbitrarily raising values far above what local conditions will warrant. It is high time there be a vigorous shaking up in this commission and such a revision of the law as will shear away some of the power from these dictators.

It is a noticeable fact that instead of taxes being cut down according to the promise of those who advocated this beautiful scheme of state espionage, the actual sums paid have, in a majority of cases materially increased. Legislators vie with each other in finding ways to use increased appropriations and Governor Ferris has heartily approved their acts. Both parties are responsible. So we leave off as we began.
Whether it is Diekema or Dickinson or Sleeper or Leland or Gardner or someone yet unnamed, let us hope and pray that, if the next legislature attempts to slip over another inflated appropriation bill, the governor-elect may have the backbone to cut out of that bill every item of extravagance.—Mt. Pleasant Times.

In several states of the union women will vote next fall in the presidential election. Democrats profess to believe that a great majority of the women will disregard the economic fallacies of the Wilson administration, its extravagances, the impaired public service, the violation of campaign pledges and the sacrifice of national dignity, and will vote for Wilson on the theory that he "kept us out of war."

Men who thus delude themselves are doomed to disappointment.
There may be a few women who did not notice the industrial depression into which this country was thrown by the tariff legislation of 1913, but they are few indeed. Most women know when their husbands or fathers are having a hard time to make a living. Many women are in business for themselves. In either case they had very firmly impressed upon their minds in 1913-14 the disastrous effects of tariff laws that throw our markets open to the foreign producer who can undersell the American producer because of lower wage expenditures.

Most American women don't want American workmen forced to compete on an equality with the workmen of Europe and Asia. They believe in maintaining higher standards of living in the United States and they recognize the necessity for a protective tariff in order that this may be accomplished.

Women believe in the merit system in the government service and have been active in promoting the civil service reform which this administration has endeavored to overthrow. Women who have brothers or sons getting on in the industrial world are believers in efficiency in government as well as in private business. They will not give their approval to an administration which has at every opportunity demonstrated its incapacity for the management of large affairs.

The up-to-date woman reads the news—not the society and fashion columns only—and she knows that it was the war that brought a temporary relief from the hard times caused by Democratic tariff tinkering.
The politician who thinks he can fool the women regarding the real issues of the coming campaign is fooling nobody but himself. Trying to evade the facts of 1913-14 by the false plea that "he kept us out of war" will gain no more votes among the women than among the men, and the reunification of the Republican party indicates that there will be exceedingly few misleads.

Secretary of Commerce Redfield says the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce has had difficulty in securing suitable men for its foreign investigations. This is the first intimation we have had that any effort has been made. Upon the recommendation of the Secretary of Commerce, the new commercial attaches were exempted from the civil service test as to qualifications. This was a pretty plain indication that "suitable" was regarded as synonymous with "deserving Democrat."
If not, why relieve those candidates from a competitive test?

Now the Democratic publicity agents tell us that the Republicans are "without an issue." Only a short time ago President Wilson declared that the tariff is the only issue we have left. Never mind, the American voter can find plenty of reasons for giving the Democratic party a rest from what has proven to be a task beyond its capacity.

President Wilson is putting up a "non-partisan" plea now that election is near at hand. That is all right, Mr. Wilson, we shall be just as non-partisan as you were in naming the Federal Reserve Board.

THEATRICAL

The famous romance of the ranch and the railroad, "The Love Route," by Edward Peple (author of the current comedy triumph, "A Pair of Sixes"), is the latest Famous Players Film Company's four-part feature on the Paramount program, to be shown at the Majestic theatre Friday, May 19. Among the many striking effects introduced in this subject is the actual construction of a railroad, from the first spade dug in the ground to the laying of the last tie, and the final running of the mammoth engine over the newly-laid line, a distinct novelty in motion pictures. The main characters in the play are a railroad civil engineer and a young woman, the owner of the ranch through which the new railroad is to pass, which she tries to prevent, even at the points of the revolvers of her cowboys. These two characters when they meet bring forth a clash of will under circumstances rarely seen on the screen. The fact that they had previously loved each other deeply adds to the interest of the plot. To the very end she fights and ultimately triumphs, but she eventually awakens to the greatness of her love for the engineer after he is shot by one of her men, and is herself responsible for the completion of the line within the required time limit granted the railroad company.

Produced in California, the camera has clearly defined the beauties of that wonderful land. The situations calling for the united action of the cowboys and the railroad workmen and the scenes in which these two elements meet in battle display to the utmost the craft of the screen director.

The carefully selected cast includes Harold Lockwood, Winifred Kingston and Donald Crisp.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS

Events of Interest to Courier Readers

Bad Fire at Cadillac.
Fire at the Cadillac Chemical Company's plant in Cadillac Monday of last week destroyed three of the largest buildings, including the main building, where acetate and wood alcohol were manufactured. The loss is estimated at from $50,000 to $100,000, fully protected by insurance. Nobody was injured.

Fires also occurred at Laka City, Tustin and Marion at the same time. W.B. Banning's residence at Marion was destroyed with a loss of $800, insured. Fire in Blair Scott's drug store at Lake City did damage estimated at $1,000, insured. John Engstrom's fine home at Tustin was burned with a loss of $1,800, covered by insurance.

The chemical company had been busy since the beginning of the war manufacturing acetate, chief constituent of smokeless powder. It is understood the firm made a three-year contract with the British government in the fall of 1914 for the entire output of acetate at a big advance in price. The company also manufactures wood alcohol in large quantities and other chemicals. The plant is valued at $350,000 and consists of twelve buildings. It is one of the largest plants in Cadillac.

Parmelee Makes Big Lift.
The big fish tug Parmelee of Charlevoix left that port yesterday morning for St. Helena to lift her nets, and before the work was completed a northwester came up, and the captain, seeing that he would be unable to make Charlevoix, laid his course for Cheboygan, running before the gale. He arrived there this morning with his cargo of 5,500 pounds of whitefish, which he unloaded at the Booth Fisheries Co.'s dock. The Parmelee is now lying in port waiting favorable weather to proceed to Charlevoix.—Cheboygan Tribune, May 11.

Boy Nearly Drowns.
But for the presence of mind of James Hoover, who is employed at the Elm Coopersage Company at Boyne City, there would have been a drowning accident at the pond last Saturday. Some small boys were having a high time in the shallow water near the plant, when one of the little fellows while wading into deeper water stepped off into the deep water and went down. He had gone down the second time when the screams of the little fellow's companions brought Hoover to the spot. Taking in the situation at a glance, he dove into the water with his clothes on and found the little fellow on the bottom in six feet of water. Hoover was nearly exhausted from his efforts, having no time to take off his clothing, and the work of bringing the boy to the surface was a big job. After a few minutes the little fellow came too and cried lustily to go home.—Boyne City Bee.

Paper Mill Changes Hands.
According to Receiver A. B. Mudgett of the Bear River Paper & Bag Company, which for some time has owned the Petoskey paper mill, a company composed of Southern Michigan paper mill men and capitalists are at present completing a deal for the purchase of the Petoskey mill, to add to their string of three mills which they now operate.

Rumors of this deal have been heard for several days, but the arrangements had not advanced far enough to warrant any statement from the men interested.

F. H. Thurston Dead.
Francis H. Thurston is dead at his home in Tarpun Springs, Florida, at the age of 83 years. He was one of the pioneers of the village of Central Lake, having moved there in 1878, when the town was a hamlet of half a dozen houses. He engaged in the mercantile business and operated Central Lake's first store. At the time of his death Mr. Thurston was one of the firm of Thurston & Co., which operates a general store at Central Lake, although he had lived in Florida for some years on account of failing health. Mrs. Thurston survives him.

"I AM PLEASED TO ENDORSE TANLAC"

Albert Somerville Says That Use of The Medicine Has Done Wonders for Him.

Albert Somerville, well known citizen of Central Lake, Michigan, recently declared that the use of Tanlac, the new medicine, has been of great benefit to him in the treatment of his stomach disorders. This is Mr. Somerville's statement:

"I have suffered from stomach trouble for a long time, but never got any relief until I took Tanlac, a short time ago. My chief symptoms were a dull, dead pain in my stomach and loss of appetite. I tried all kinds of medicines in an effort to get relief, but without any good results. Recently I became interested in Tanlac through reading testimonials given by people who had used the medicine. I purchased a bottle of the medicine and since using it have gained great relief. My appetite has returned and the pain in my stomach has left me. I am pleased to endorse Tanlac."

If you suffer from stomach, liver or kidney trouble, nervousness, a run-down feeling, catarrh, rheumatism, or sleeplessness, you will find Tanlac the ideal corrective. Many Michigan people have endorsed Tanlac as the best medicine they have ever seen.

Tanlac may be obtained here at the store of B. A. Herman.

HIGH COST OF LIVING.

Things That Are More Comfortable Now Used to Be Luxuries.

No economist has put enough emphasis on the fact that if the cost of living is higher now it is to a large extent because the average man is demanding more comforts and luxuries, and these must cost more. Before the days of plumbing and bathrooms the workman missed some onerous bills, but he is not ready to throw the plumbing out of the house.

Oil is cheaper for light than electricity, but people pay more for a modern light because they want the better service even at the higher price. Workmen by the thousands have phonographs, a form of entertainment unknown until a very few years ago.

Even street cars are rather a new thing, and the poorest families spend many dollars every year for this service, which has become indispensable. Magazines are purchased now by many people who ten years ago had never subscribed for such a publication.

Thousands of articles are for sale in every department store, of which a large percentage are purchased at some time or other by the average wage-earning family.

Modern living does cost more assuredly, but it also yields more.—Milwaukee Journal.

SPEED OF A STAR.

With a Thought That Points a Moral to Impatient Humanity.

There is a star—reddish star known as Arcturus—that is traveling at the rate of 150 miles a second, and what is interesting about it is it is coming this way and will come for many years, but it is so far away that it doesn't seem to have any motion at all. It is exactly the same spot, so far as our vision is concerned, where it was a century ago.

There is another star known as the "runaway" whose speed is twice that of Arcturus—that is, it could sweep across Ohio in a second & time.

We refer to this fact that the gentle reader may understand how insignificant are the little concerns of life that tear his patience into tatters and turn the world into woe. Long after he has gone Arcturus will be traveling 150 miles a second and to all appearances not nudging an inch. How modest and patient should this touch of near-laziness make us all! And yet, as Tenyson says:

We cannot be kind to each other here for an hour.
We whisper and hint, and chuckle and grin at a brother's shame.
However, we brave it out; we men are a little breed.

—Columbus Journal.

Saves the Tires.

He doesn't look like a very important part of a big automobile organization, this stooped, grizzled man, but the president of a great motorcar company says that "Magnet Bill" saves his salary a dozen times over every day he works. Rain or shine, summer or winter "Magnet Bill" may be seen walking slowly about the automobile plant, his eyes on the ground. "Magnet Bill" gets his nickname from the fact that his tools consist solely of one tin bucket and a big steel magnet strapped to the end of a shovel handle. It is his duty to save automobile tires by removing from the roadway every nail and bit of metal that might cause a puncture. Thousands of cars are run over the roadway to the testing place, and it is figured that without the precaution taken by "Magnet Bill" the cost for cut and punctured tires would be $20,000 every year.—Popular Science Monthly and World's Advance.

Origin of a Japanese Dance.

The origin of the Kume-mai, the dance performed at the coronation of the mikado, is traced to Jimmu Tenno, an early hero, who while on his eastern expedition found a certain chief, tala called Tsuchikumo most obstinate in his resistance and unobtainable. Thereupon he ordered O Kume Nishino Mikoto to entice out the chieftain, to whom sake was offered and dances were shown with the result that finally he was overcome and slain. The descendants of O Kume Nishino Mikoto put this fact into songs and music, from which sprang the dance.—Argonaut.

From the Ship's Wall.

An old lady on board a vessel observed two sailors pumping up water to wash the decks, and the captain being near, she accosted him as follows:

"Well, captain, so you've got a well board, eh?"

"Yes, ma'am; always carry one," said the polite captain.

"Well, that's clever. It's so much better than the nasty sea water, which I always dislike so."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Fate of a Duchess.

We have had excellent morals drawn from the substantial waist of the Venus of Milo for the admonition of the fashionable woman. But what can we say about the Duchess de Mazarin, who (G. Dore tells us in "Shadows of Old Paris") "died in 1775 from tight lacing, although she had posed for a statue of Venus?"

Exactly So.

"The doctor knows I hate gamphor." "So?" "Yet first he made me sniff it, and now he has prescribed it as a treatment." "I call that rubbing it in."—Kansas City Journal.

A VISIT TO WASHINGTON D. C.

PEN PICTURE OF MANY HISTORICAL SPOTS AND PLACES.

Home of Washington Well Preserved—Mount Vernon, Alexandria and Other Points of Interest.

The following interesting letter from the pen of Mrs. Jack Amick, nee Rota Jarvis, daughter of Mrs. A. M. Jarvis of this city, tells of her recent visit to Washington, D. C., and will prove very interesting to many Courier readers:

"Of course you know that the country around here is the seat of our glorious nation, and of the greatest interest to us all, so I will tell you of our visit and what is to me the greatest treat of my life—a visit to Washington, D. C.

"Washington is the most beautiful city I ever saw. But I was greatly surprised to learn it is distinctly Southern as to style, atmosphere, accent, etc. The people are all very Southern in their manners and also very nice. We stopped over a few hours and engaged an auto and a chauffeur who knew the city well, and saw every building of interest and even drove all over the navy yard, where we saw the president's private yacht, the Mayflower, anchored, and she sure had several little machine guns on board.

"The buildings are the most beautiful I ever saw. Every department, such as land, irrigation, etc., has a separate building, and words fail me to describe them. They are simply beautiful.

"The bureau of pensions is the

SIGNS OF DANGER

That Should be Heeded by Charlevoix People.

There's serious danger in neglecting any weakness of the kidneys. The warning that Nature gives should not be overlooked. If troubled by too frequent passage of the kidney secretions; burning or scalding; if the secretions are highly colored and contain sediment when left standing—if you have backache, too, with frequent headaches and dizziness, make up your mind that your kidneys are affected and begin using some reliable kidney remedy. Deaths from kidney disease have increased in the United States alone 72 per cent in the last 20 years. The risk is great—you can't afford to delay. Charlevoix people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Can you ask for better proof of merit than the statement of this Charlevoix resident:

Mrs. R. M. McKeel, 214 Muson street, Charlevoix, says: "I had been troubled for several months by kidney disease. My body bloated quite badly and I had a weak back and severe pains in my kidneys. I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills at the Ivy Drug Store and they gave me relief in every way."

Price 50c., at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. McKeel had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

largest brick building in the world under one roof. The White House is just as beautiful as it can be, and, of course, the Capitol building is wonderful. The D. A. R. have a magnificent building. The new mint, where all the money is made, also the treasury building—in fact, they are all wonderful and grand. We also passed the Washington monument, 500 feet high, with elevator to top, from where you can see all over the city and surrounding country, but did not have time to go up into it.

"Then we drove over to Mount Vernon, a perfect paradise, and the house and resting place of George Washington and family. I cannot begin to tell you how wonderful it is to one as patriotic as I am. I can't express my feelings.

"The same old carpet in the main parlor, presented to Washington by King Louis XVI., and hundreds of the very things right in place as they were used. Washington's sword—the room he died in, just as it was then, even to the homespun bed hangings and coverlid. The coach he rode in stands in a little barn where you can see it, also a wonderful big coach. One of the stables, which is in good condition, was built in 1733. Of course they take every precaution and repair every brick, etc., that starts to crumble or decay. One tree that Washington planted has three tons of cement in it where it hollowed out and would have fallen long ago but for the cement.

"And the wonderful garden just as it was arranged then, laid out in designs, each part bordered with the box hedge. There is a part they neglected to show us where the date is farmed with little dwarf pines, which was Mrs. Washington's idea, and it is kept up by the gardeners exactly the same, as is everything about the place. The kitchen is wonderful, copper, brass and pewter utensils, an immense fireplace where the cooking was done, a lot of beautiful old china, too, blue and white. You should see the funny little high-chair in the dining room.

"On our way to Mount Vernon we passed the Episcopal College where Phillips Brooks graduated. Also saw the road which was the king's highway, over which Washington rode to and from Alexandria and Mount Vernon.

"We also saw Lord Fairfax's original property, which adjoined Washington's little farm, of 8000 acres.

"Mount Vernon, on the Potomac, is the most beautiful spot on earth. The home is a mansion even in these days.

"Alexandria, Virginia, is a great old historical town. We visited the old Episcopal church and sat in the same pews used by George Washington and Robert E. Lee. They (the pews) are in the same condition as then. Think of it. The church was built in 1767, nine years before this was a real country, 1776. The same queer little baptismal font, communion table and many other things are still there.

"Alexandria was the seat of Fairfax county. The Carlyle house, which is still there, was the headquarters for all royal government meetings. Here the first suggestion was made to tax the people, and John Muson (I think his name was John) drew up the first rules, which later formed a part, at least, of the Declaration of Independence.

"General Braddock drilled his soldiers in the old public square. Gen. Washington's first office was aid to General Braddock, you know. The building where the first blood of the revolution was shed stands there. You know a man ran up and tore down the American flag and was immediately shot for his impudence, and a riot followed.

"The property is owned by the United States (not by the government) and each state has a room to keep up. The whole territory is of historical interest. This town (Fredricksburg) is the home of Washington's mother, also John Paul Jones."

UNIVERSITIES ARE FOR ALL CLASSES

To further this alliance there is a standing committee made up of instructors from the university and secondary schools, and each high school furnishes annually data concerning studies offered and its teaching staff, together with other details that may be of benefit.

Such in the main is the general plan developed by this single university, which in many ways has been the pioneer in the co-operative movement, and which still is unique in the system it has perfected. But co-operation is continually taking on new and more intimate forms. Now arrangements have been made with certain high schools whereby excellence in high school may receive excess credit toward entrance at the university, and other arrangements include the granting of junior college credit for work done under prescribed conditions in co-operating schools. To give advanced credit for high school work is indeed a far step forward.

All of this spirit of co-operation takes visible form when the annual conferences are held on the University of Chicago campus in April. College officials mingle with high school officers and teachers, and the crowd is augmented by many secondary school students, present to participate in competitive examinations or in oratorical contests. There are general sessions for the discussion of educational problems of broad interest, and departmental conferences to discuss matters of special concern to the various departments through which the high schools and the university have mutual interests. In 1915 almost 800 high school officers and instructors were in attendance, and there were with them more than 300 high school boys and girls. On the 14th and 15th of April this year the attendance at the conference was larger than ever before. There were over 1200 registered visitors, including principals and teachers of high schools, with the officials of the board of education and of the university, and the leading scholars in the senior high school classes. There was more responsiveness and a more earnest spirit of co-operation manifested than ever before.

At present there are 430 high schools co-operating in this plan with the University of Chicago. Of this number 33 are in the State of Michigan, including the Charlevoix high school. In all, 30 different states are represented, a fact which may tend to prove that out of the chaos of plans springing from the vital need of co-operation some 25 years ago, a definite course has gradually formed which meets the requirements, and materially strengthens the dignity, integrity and scholastic standing not only of the secondary schools but also of the colleges and universities affected.

A Social Warning.

"What are you going to do with all the money you expect to make?" asked Miss Cayenne.

"I'm going to have a fine house and entertain sumptuously," replied the prize taster.

"Yes, but in the meantime you are rendering yourself so unpopular that no really nice people will come to your parties."—Washington Star

STREET PAVING WORK AWARDED CONTRACTORS

Conflicting Prices Force City to Do Part of the Work.

Upon opening the bids for the building of the new State street paving at the council meeting on Monday night it was found that the city would be money ahead by rejecting all bids for the base course and doing the work themselves.

The work of constructing the combined curb and gutter was awarded to Sid Henry of this city. Harman, Green & Sonman of Grand Rapids were awarded the contract of putting on the finishing course, also re-surfacing Bridge St.

The council also ordered the purchasing committee to buy a Studebaker pressure oil distributor for oiling the streets, a move that should have the approval of all citizens.

The south Bridge street paving proposition is in the air, and probably the people in this vicinity will do without the pavement for a time at least.

BOY SCOUTS TAKE A TRIP

CAMP IN PORTER'S WOODS ON SIX MILE LAKE.

Members Drilled in Camp Life and Instructed in Trailing and Wigwag Code.

Friday night of last week the Scouts gathered at Mr. VanSkiver's boat house, with their camp equipment, and under the direction of Gustave Beuker and Scout Master Max Brail, they proceeded to take their places in the two boats which had been procured for them. They then proceeded up the river into Campbell's lake and again in the upper river to Six Mile Lake, where in the Porter woods they landed and made camp.

At eight o'clock everything was in ship shape; the tent up, the camp fire built and branches cut for bedding. Then supper was served, each boy doing as much of the cooking as was possible. After the supper came the dish washing, which most of the boys went at with a will.

Supper being over and everything being in readiness for the night, the boys gathered around the camp fire, telling stories and singing songs. Bed time came and each rolled up in his blanket in the tent and went to sleep, leaving only the two watchmen to take care of the fires. During the night each two boys served as watchmen, waking up the next watchmen at the end of their watch.

Morning came and all the boys were out bright and early. The order was given to proceed to the creek where they made their toilet in the crude, primitive fashion, after which they marched back to the camp fire. A. Beuker then instructed them in the art of trailing with some practical illustrations, the boys trailing him for nearly a half hour. On their return they ate their breakfast, which consisted of bacon, eggs, bread, fried potatoes and cakes.

After breakfast, dishes were washed and camp cleaned up.

Signaling or wigwagging was next on the program. The boys were very much interested in this and did their best to pick up and learn the code. The wigwagging was carried on out on the lake in boats at a distance that one corps would not hear the other. The messages differed in word and thought, but on the most part were of importance to scouts.

Fishing was the next game the boys turned their hands to, some being quite apt at the sport. As time passed enough fish were procured for dinner, and, as that was next on the program, it was prepared and eaten with a relish.

After dinner the camp was packed and loaded into the boats, which were put in tow, Frank VanOrman having come to the camp for the purpose of towing the boys and their luggage home with his launch.

The boys report a good time and seem to be much interested in the work of scouting.

MAKING IMPROVEMENTS.

Store of George Klooster & Son Undergoing Many Changes.

The store of George Klooster & Son has undergone many changes within the past two weeks which greatly add to its appearance. The interior of the store has been repainted throughout, the side walls and ceiling being white and the woodwork and showcases finished in oak.

Before these gentlemen are finished with their improvements the exterior of the store will also be repainted, and other changes in its appearance made. One cannot help but notice the fine appearance of the interior of the store now when entering this busy place.

Elect Their Officers.

The Epworth League held their annual business meeting and election, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Delbert E. Clow, president; Mrs. D. Patterson, first vice-president; Mrs. M. Struik, second vice-president; Miss Esther Carpenter, third vice-president; Miss Effie Larsen, fourth vice-president; Miss Blanche Boss, secretary; DeWitt Patterson, treasurer; Miss Lillian Patterson, organist. On account of the heavy winds last week eight or nine telephone poles were blown down Sunday night in front of the homes of Wm. Hoffman and Cornelius DeVries, making it almost impossible for rigs to drive by there.

Word was received here from the Rev. G. G. Huan, a former resident of this place, now residing in Pella, Iowa, that the trees are all in blossom there and gardens—all up—and that the weather is real hot. A box of home-grown lettuce was received from there. It certainly was fine.

NEW BREECHES BUOY.

Portable Apparatus That May Be Carried on a Man's Back.

A complete breeches buoy outfit that can be carried around by one man and is capable of being operated over a distance of from 450 to 1,200 feet has been developed by an old English seaman. Each outfit has four lines and four rockets, which may be fired in quick succession, the lines being arranged in the case in such a manner as to run out at high speed without danger of kinking.

APPARATUS SET FOR FIRING ROCKET.

The apparatus can be readily set up on the ground or the deck of a ship or may be fired when suspended from ropes or the rigging of a ship, as it is made to balance automatically. In a recent test with a six pound rocket and 1,050 feet of line the line was thrown a distance of 900 feet against a strong wind.—Popular Mechanics.

SAFETY ON THE RAIL.

Automatic Device Prevents Train From Passing Danger Signals.

A device designed to prevent a train from running past a block signal set against it was tested recently on the Long Island railroad near New York city.

A special train was used. On the first trial the train was run at a speed of about thirty miles an hour. As it passed the signal a long metal arm connected with the air brake lever and extending through the roof of the last car came in contact with a crosspiece of steel hung at the top of a supporting post. As the arm struck the crosspiece the air brakes were automatically set and the train stopped within 750 feet. On the second trial the train was run at forty-five miles an hour and was stopped within 600 feet. On the last trial the speed was nearly fifty-five miles an hour, and the train was stopped in 1,200 feet.

The device is simple in construction and not expensive to install. Its inventor claims that it cannot be affected by snow, ice or sleet and will stop a train even if the engineer fails to observe a danger signal. It can be attached to any system of semaphores used on railroads of this country. The general idea of the invention is not unlike the automatic tripping stop used in the subway, but it is overhead and may be used either on electric or steam roads.

Filler For Metal Surfaces.

In finishing a piece of machinery use a filler as follows: Dry filler, six parts; whiting, three parts; tallow in oil, three parts; pulverized silica, six parts. Make this into a paste with a liquid composed of three parts of rubbing varnish, two parts of conch japan and one part of turpentine, all by weight, says Popular Mechanics. Mix to a stiff paste and run through a paint mill or work up on a slab. Fill the surface of the metal with the paste and when it has become dry and hard rub smooth with fine sandpaper. If it is desired to have a darker color add some lampblack. Thinned, the filler can be used as a paint for iron.

A Curtain Hanger.

A close coiled spring, about one-quarter inch in diameter, makes a much better hanger for a short curtain than a small rod. The spring should be about one inch shorter than the width of the window and fastened with screw hooks. The spring is preferable not only because it is less apt to tear the fabric, as it will give some if the curtain is pulled, but also for the reason that it is much easier to put it through the hem than the rod.

Tying Strings on Tools.

A wrench dropped accidentally into the gear case of an automobile caused the workman to spend about one hour's time trying to fish it out with a piece of wire. This could have been avoided if one end of a length of string had been tied to the wrench and the other to his wrist. It is always best to tie a string to any tool and fasten it to the person if the tool is to be used where dropping it would cause trouble.

Calculating Pipe Size.

To ascertain the proper diameter of a pipe to take the flow of water from two pipes of any given diameter lay out a right angled triangle with the base equal to the diameter of one pipe and the height equal to the other. The length of the hypotenuse will be the desired diameter. A carpenter's steel square is handy for this problem within its limits.—Popular Mechanics.

Noiseless Brake Shoe.

A brake shoe having a strip of asphaltum let into the surface has been adopted for use on street cars in New York recently. The new brake is said to be practically noiseless, while having good wear-resisting qualities.

HOW TO CROCHET A PRETTY SILK PURSE.

Material required: Half ounce of crocheted silk, dark green or red, 1 hank steel or gold beads, No. 10, steel crocheting hook, No. 18. Make a chain (ch) of 35, work 1 treble croch (tc) 1 ch into the 4th ch from the hook. Repeat with 3 ch and work * 1 tc, 1 ch into each space between the tc stitches of last row and repeat from * to end of row. Work 5 more of these rows, break off the silk and make a second piece to correspond. In the 5th row of the second stitch join to the first with a single stitch and commence to work around with 3 ch. Work 3 rounds in the same manner, joining each with a single stitch. At the place where the two sides are joined one will be higher than the other. After the 4th round is joined work one round thus: * 3 d c, 4 ch, miss 3, repeat from * to end of round; end 1 d c. Break off thread and string the beads on to the silk with which you will continue. From this point you will begin the beading. The rounds of beading are worked * 1 d c into the last stitch of the group of chain of previous round, 1 d c into the next d c, leaving 1 d c of last round not worked into; repeat from * all around. This will make a diagonal strip of solid crocheted. For working in the beads draw the silk through once in each d c, then draw n bead close up to the hook before finishing the stitch. The beads will be on the inside of the work, i. e., on the opposite to that on which you are working, and will follow the diagonal strip. Work 13 rounds in this way and then 2 rounds of 3 ch, 2 d c, 1 round of 2 ch, 2 d c, 1 round of ch, 1 d c and draw up for the end of purse. When finished turn the beading side outward. Sew the two sides of the mouth on a pair of cross-bars with a ring and drop for the other end of the purse.

FOR THE HORSEWOMAN.

How to Ride Horseback Even if You Aren't a Cowboy.

In riding sit erect and don't slouch along. Don't try to be a cowboy if you are not. We have the real simon pure cowpunchers and broncho busters, also we have the thorough variety of the same species. Steer clear of the latter; also be careful not to get into this category yourself.

Remember that a horse is only flesh and blood and not an auto. He gets tired and thirsty, and for goodness sake treat him accordingly. Because he is a lively horse and you are paying his hire treat him white just the same. Remember that some one else rode him yesterday and another will probably do so tomorrow. Give your horse the same kind of a deal you yourself would demand if you were in his place; even a broncho has "feelin's" and will appreciate your thoughtfulness.—Outlook.

How to Make a Unique Dust Cloth For the "Shower."

The next time you are invited to a novelty shower in honor of a bride to be or a bachelor girl who is getting ready for a two room apartment have ready a two in one gift. By this is meant a duster and glove combined. Buy a piece of cheesecloth measuring twelve inches square and then get an other about eight inches square. Featherstitch the smaller to the larger piece, allowing one side to remain unattached. Trace the outline of some one's right hand on the little piece of cheesecloth and stitch along the lines directly through the two pieces. By stitching the hand in the dusters thus formed the neat little housekeeper can dust her furniture and protect her hand with the one article.

Should this gift seem insufficient you might make a bag of dark green calico. Make it fifteen inches long and nine inches wide. Finish it with a casing and run green tape through it. Across the front of it outline the word "Duster" with yellow cotton.

How to Make Clam Broth That Is Delicious For Luncheon.

A delicious clam broth may be easily prepared by the following methods: Scrub and rinse the whole clams until the shells are bright and clean. Place on the bottom of the cook pot, hinge side up and close together. Cover about half the height of the clams with cold water and bring to the boil, when the clams will open and discharge their juices. Strain and serve. A little pepper and butter will improve the flavor.

How to Beat an Egg Quickly Without the Fuss of Whipping It.

Break the egg into an ordinary glass tumbler. Place a piece of clean tissue paper on the top. Hold it firmly down all round to keep out the air. Place the other hand on the top of the paper and shake the tumbler vigorously two or three times. The egg is then ready to use without any further effort and is as well beaten as if whipped for ten minutes.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS.

Entertained at Home of Their Leader, Miss Lone Swinton.

Saturday afternoon the Po-Wa-Su group of Camp Fire Girls entertained at the home of their leader, Miss Lone Swinton, a number of friends with a tea and some of the most excellent camp fire work. All were fully arrayed in camp fire attire, the neatness of which convinced all of the careful and skilful direction of Miss Swinton, as each girl made with her own hands her full suit. Camp fire work teaches the girls to work not only with their hands, but heads and hearts as well. The various exercises and singing were of most excellent quality and showed fully the careful sort of work by each girl.

Everyone enjoyed a good time and went away with best wishes for the continued success of the Camp Fires.

JUNE 9 THE DAY OF REWARD

TWENTY-THREE IN 1916 GRADUATING CLASS.

Nineteen Girls and Four Boys to Receive Diplomas—Personnel of the class.

"What is so rare as a day in June," with its brides and sweet girl graduates? From scores of high schools and colleges the seniors are looking forward to the day of graduation. The day of reward of four years or more of toil and study. As a slave feels at the gift of freedom, so must the graduate feel as he stands on the border land and looks into the new land. The pent up enthusiasm of years of study and preparation, and the desire to take part in the great work of the world, to put in practice his store of knowledge, makes graduation day a day of days, one to be looked forward to, and one never to be forgotten.

Graduation is a stamp of attainment, the reaching of a definite and specific goal. Those who reach this stage have at least some of the force as that in the world of affairs makes for success. To persevere, to go through the grind of mastery, to see a goal and finally to reach it, belongs to only the select few.

In a few weeks Charlevoix will have a fine graduating class of 23 splendid young men and women from the high school. The class has a large majority of girls. Of the 23 receiving diplomas 19 are girls and four are boys. It is one of the largest graduating classes.

In many ways it is an exceptional class. It contains many young people of promise. Foremost on the list is the valedictorian of the class, Miss Anna Driggett. Miss Driggett has led the class in scholastic ability for the four years and is without doubt a student of great ability. The instructors predict for her a great future. A close second in point of scholarship is Miss Marybell Hair, who is the salutatorian of the class. Following closely those mentioned in scholastic ability are Miss Ruth Hammet and Perry Mason.

Besides those who have distinguished themselves in the classroom are many who have played a large part in the activities of the high school. Leslie Shapton, a member of the class of 1916, has played an important part in athletics, having made the football, basketball and track teams. In the Charlevoix county meet Leslie Shapton won the medal for the highest point winner. Edward Krulik is considered by the students as a consistent athlete. His work in all lines of athletic activity has helped materially to make our athletics a vital factor in the school life. Mr. Mason has played an important part in the musical organizations of the school. This has been especially shown in his management of the orchestra.

Space does not permit to narrate the separate abilities of each member of the class of 1916. Each has his or her special qualities without which the class would not be the unit it is, or would not have attained to its present standard.

WARD AINSIE FATALLY SCALDED

WAS FIREMAN ON THE FISH TUG PARMELEE.

Escaping Steam From Boiler Literally Cooks Him From Waist Up—Funeral To-day.

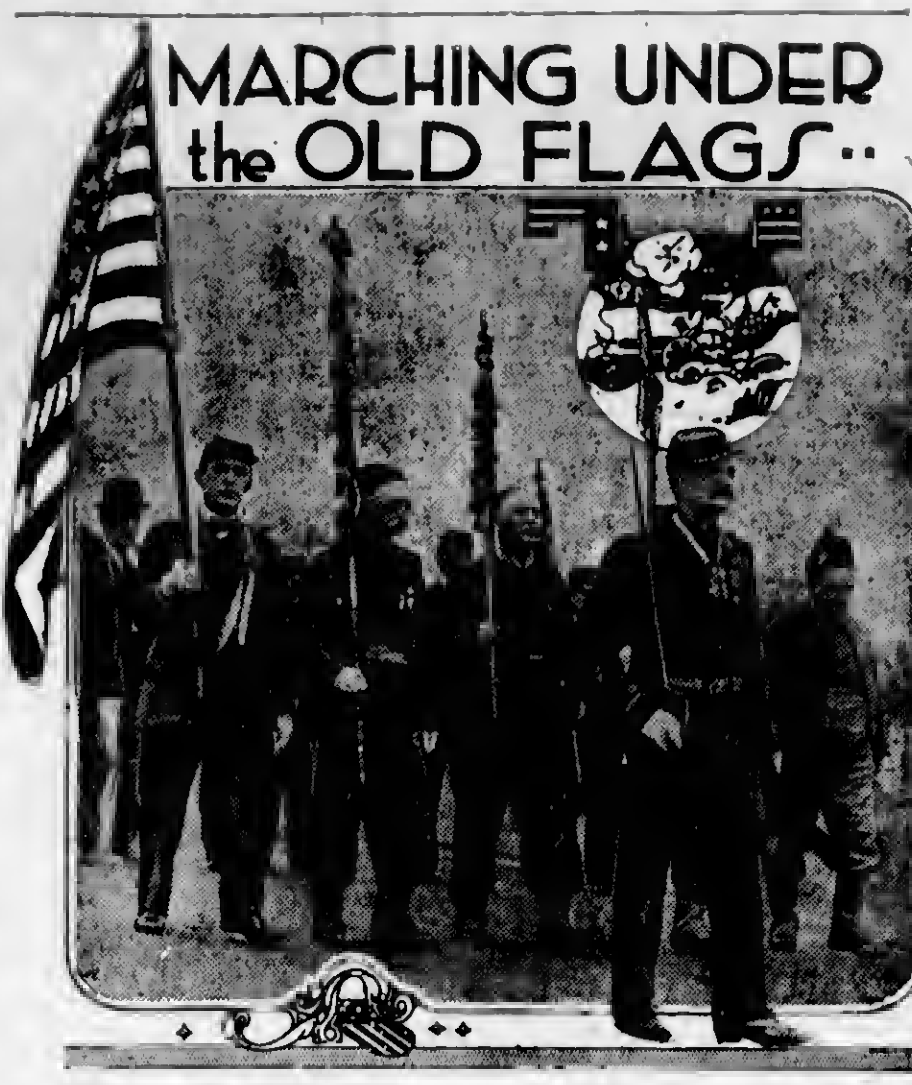

Ward Ainsie, well known in this city, died Monday morning at his home on Petoskey avenue from the effect of being severely scalded late Saturday afternoon.

Ward was fireman on the fish tug Parmelee, which had just returned from lifting nets on Lake Michigan. After the boat had been docked at the O'Neill landing he was told to make preparations to clean the boilers. Considerable steam was in the boilers at the time, and he proceeded to the hold to open the valve, thus allowing the steam to escape. While occupied in doing this he either opened the valve too far or removed the cap, allowing the steam with its entire pressure to escape, striking him in the breast and face, the live steam literally cooking him from his waist up. Walter Yemman, also an employee on the tug, heard his cries of agony and removed him from the boiler room in a semi-unconscious condition.

He was taken to his home and everything possible done to relieve him from his terrible agony. Later he recovered consciousness for a time and it was thought he might recover, but a turn for the worse came Sunday night and he died Monday.

Deceased was born in 1872 and was 44 years of age at the time of his death. He spent his early life in Charlevoix, then moved to East Jordan, living there until about six years ago, when he came back to this city. During this time he farmed for a few years and spent the balance of the time on the lakes. He was married at Kalamazoo, February 9, 1898, to Miss Ameta Herson, and is survived by a wife, aged mother and three sisters—Mrs. Flora Lewis of Grand Rapids, Mrs. F. A. Kenyon of Mackinac Island, and Mrs. F. W. Mayne of this city.

Funeral services were held from the home Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. C. E. Taggart. Members of Pine Lake Lodge, No. 122, Knights of Pythias, of which he was a member, acted as honorary escort and conducted ritualistic services at the grave.

WILL THRIVE ON LIGHTER SOILS

GROWING OF LEGUMES NEEDS ENCOURAGEMENT.

County Agricultural Agents of State Encourage Farmers to Grow It.

The growing of legumes in Michigan needs all the encouragement that can be given. They gather from the air the most expensive of all our plant foods and store it in the soil for other plants to use. Of all the legumes none is more promising for thousands of Michigan farms than hairy or winter vetch. It will thrive on lighter soils. It does not prevent the farmer from growing his regular crop, for it can be sown in the corn or potatoes or after the crop is harvested and grows late in the season and very rapidly in the spring. It thus furnishes a good cover for fields that often lose more in their bare condition than cropping takes from them. Vetch as a food for animals is richer than alfalfa and as a green manure it has no superior.

Realizing the value of this wonderful plant, the county agricultural agents have done all in their power to encourage farmers to grow it. They have not discouraged its growth where wheat is grown extensively, but there are large areas of the state where there is no legume that can take the place of hairy vetch.

Through the efforts of the agricultural agent in one county for two years there are now over 7,000 acres of hairy vetch protecting the soil in the winter and ready to enrich it with green manure in the spring or to be used as hay or to produce seed. One man in that county has realized a handsome income this season from the sale of vetch seed. This seed is quite high in price and, as most of it comes from Europe, it looks now as though growing vetch seed in Michigan would be a good business.

C. H. S. WINS FOURTH YEAR

EIGHT FIRST OUT OF POSSIBLE FOURTEEN.

East Jordan Second and Boyne City Third—Saturday Big Day in Athletics.

For the fourth year in succession Charlevoix high romped away with the county track meet, which was held last Friday in Boyne City. The final count in points was as follows: Charlevoix, 55½; East Jordan, 37½; Boyne City, 33.

The local team took the heavyweight relay in easy fashion, thus securing the cup for that event for all time. The team consisted of Hampton, Mason, Krulik and Taggart, running in the order named. The time was 1:46.

The lightweight relay went to Boyne City. Charlevoix scored eight firsts out of a possible fourteen. Shapton was the highest point winner, taking fifteen by winning the pole vault, 220 yard low hurdles, and 120 yard high hurdles. Taggart came next for Charlevoix, annexing the 100 and the 220 yard dashes and tying with B. Cross of East Jordan for third in the high jump. Hampton, who looks to be a comer, took the 440 yard dash in 58 seconds and was second in the 220. VanAllsburg took third in the 100, shot put and pole vault, and first in the broad jump. Charlevoix was strongest in the sprints, entering five in the 100 and four in the 220. The first five places went to the locals in the former event and the first four in the latter.

The Northern Michigan meet comes off Saturday in Boyne City and the boys are working hard in preparation for this, the climax of track and field events of the year.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS GO TO PELLSTON

Give Public Exhibition of the Lesson of Friendship.

Pellston and its inhabitants will long remember May 23 as Knights of Pythias day, as on this date members of the order from a number of neighboring towns visited the city and gave the home lodge a boost and assisted in the work.

Grand Chancellor Sharpe of Sault Ste. Marie and G. K. R. & S. W. E. Hampton of this city were the guests of honor. A class of fifteen were initiated in the first degree, which was followed by a public exhibition of the lesson of friendship given by members of Pine Lake lodge of this city.

The real Pythian spirit was expressed by the citizens and members of the lodge in their reception to the visiting members, and the meeting was a most successful one. Those from Charlevoix who attended were: A. L. Fitch, Oluf Nordrum, G. W. Priest, Richard Lewis, Ray Dickie, A. J. Hamilton, William Cowan, E. J. Hiller, W. R. Barney, L. F. Brower, Harold Bedford, A. J. Usher, Lee R. Smith and wife and S. B. Carey and wife.

MAY CELEBRATE FOURTH.

Charlevoix to Get Into Line with Other Live Towns.

A committee of five men were appointed at the last regular meeting of the Charlevoix Commercial Association to formulate plans for a big celebration here on the Fourth of July.

Charlevoix had her last celebration in 1908. Since then she has been in such a deep slumber that even the Fourth of July giant fire crackers exploded in neighboring cities nearly every year could not awake her.

Charlevoix has never pulled off an event of any kind that drew a small crowd. This year it is the plan of the committee in charge to pull off a celebration that will be in keeping with Charlevoix and its business men if the necessary funds can be raised. Merchants are asked to co-operate with the committee in their efforts to make this celebration one of the best ever held.

The committee appointed are: Charles E. See, H. R. Fowler, Henry Jacobs, C. L. Conser and A. J. Usher.

PROGRAM FOR MEMORIAL DAY

DAY TO BE GENERALLY OBSERVED IN CITY.

Procession to Form on Bridge Street at 10:00 a. m. and March to the Cemetery.

Decoration Day will be fittingly observed in Charlevoix this year as in years gone by. The committee on arrangements have completed their work with the following result: The procession will form on Bridge street in front of the I. O. O. F. hall at 10:00 a. m. sharp and march to the cemetery in the following order:

Drum corps leading the procession, followed by carriages for the members of the C. A. R. and W. R. C., with guard lines of Boy Scouts, with the Camp Fire Girls in the rear.

Next in line will be the school children in charge of Superintendent Craig, fraternal orders and all others who wish to take part in the parade. Every person who owns an auto is urgently invited to fall next in line. Carriages and horses will bring up the rear.

Rev. L. C. Vinyard will have the program of the day in charge and with his troop of Boy Scouts will attend to decorating the graves. All are asked to decorate and carry a flag.

Program at Cemetery. Music—High school orchestra. Prayer—Rev. C. E. Taggart. National anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner," by six young ladies.

WAR PRODUCING PROSPERITY.

Administration officials and Democratic newspapers lose no opportunity to minimize the effects of the European war on our export trade and resultant prosperity, and to credit it to Democratic legislation and control. They say: "Oh, yes, the war helped in the beginning, but to-day the whole country is prosperous and many industries are running at full capacity without making a dollar's worth of goods for the European powers." Senator Underwood, author of the present tariff law, made such a statement in regard to certain mills in his home city, Birmingham, Alabama, and it transpired that those mills were handling contracts sub-let to them by northern mills handling war orders.

The fact is that the war, and nothing but the war, is to be thanked for our present prosperity. First, because it has curtailed European competition in our market, and, second, because it has expanded our export trade to a point which threatens the stoppage of certain industries because they have used up all their raw material and can secure no more. Every man engaged in business knows there was a terrible depression beginning in 1913, with the Democratic tariff tinkering, and lasting until some two or three months after the war began. As "The Iron Age" expressed it: "Those who were weary, almost to hopelessness, with the long fight against adversity, which began in 1913 and seemed destined to continue indefinitely, have been reinvigorated." To-day any kind of a plant must be run most inefficiently to have its balances written in red ink. And Senator Newlands (Democrat) of Nevada is frank in his statement that the depression was on before the war began.

It does not follow that because a plant is manufacturing for sale exclusively in the United States, or making goods which cannot be designated as war orders, that it is not a beneficiary of the abnormal prosperity of to-day. As an instance of this let us cite the recent order for $91,000,000 worth of beef stew recently placed in Canada by the British government, $71,000,000 of which has been farmed out to packers in the United States, and the cans for the stew, valued at $5,000,000, to be made by an American company.

The packers will buy their stew ingredients from the raisers of cattle and vegetables. The company which manufactures the tin cans will buy its materials from the mines. Overhead charges will be distributed, and the wear and tear on machinery must be made good by new purchases. The producers of the food products and minerals necessary to the war will increase their production, which means more wages paid on labor, more food for cattle, more equipment for the mines. The contractors, likewise, will add large sums to their payrolls. The wage earners will have more money to spend for food, clothing and the movies. The vendors of food and clothing will have more work for clerks and laborers, and so, as the ripple caused by throwing a stone into a pond becomes an ever-widening circle, reaching the shore and returning to the center, this $71,000,000 will in time touch the four extremes of the United States, and back again, growing less and less as each industry absorbs a profit. That is how the war restored prosperity to this country, which was industrially so stagnant before July 31, 1914.

Democratic leaders know full well the cause of our present prosperity, and they are barricading themselves behind the heaps of those slain on the battlefields of Europe. But it behooves every voter of this country to look ahead, not to permit this transient state of affairs to lend him astray, and to entrust the affairs of this country during the next four years to the Republican party, which never had to rely on a world war to make good.

For some reason or other Democratic members of the present congress have not seemed to enthuse over the latest turn in the diplomatic relations with Germany. Both publicly and privately they have been decidedly mum in discussing the situation and while everybody is rejoicing the crisis has apparently passed for the present, yet no one has yet had the temerity to rise up and hail the outcome as a great administration victory.

STATE AUTO TAX IS UPHELD

HALF OF IT TO COME BACK TO EACH COUNTY.

Horsepower and Weight of Machines Basis Upon Which License is Computed.

The validity of the automobile license law passed by the last state legislature was upheld by a decision of the supreme court last week. The law taxes automobiles according to weight and horsepower, and the state collects this money, returning half of it to the road fund of the county from which it came, the other half going into the state highway department, by whom it is paid out on reward roads. The constitutionality of the law was attacked by Wayne county, that county being especially opposed to it because it removed from the personal assessment rolls a great amount of taxable property, and Wayne county, having her highways practically completed, did not feel in a mood to assist the rest of the state. A similar law enacted by the legislature of 1913 was declared unconstitutional, but the present law was drafted to correct the illegal features of the former law.

Three state departments were especially pleased with the decision. The legal department was overjoyed because the court sided with their view of the law; the state department was tickled because it would not be necessary to pay back the money which the automobile owners have already sent in, while the highway department sees ahead the greatest era of road building it has ever experienced.

Work in the highway department for the season has not been started, as it was deemed advisable to wait and see what the court did with the money which belonged to it under the Newell Smith law. Work which was started last fall on both state reward roads and some township roads on which the state has to pay a reward was finished this spring, despite the uncertainty of the financial result. The balance due on these road contracts will be the first to come out of the state highway fund when the department finally gets control of it.

WHAT OUR NEIGHBORS ARE SAYING ABOUT US

The Charlevoix Courier issued an automobile number last week and it required a 28-page paper to get all the reading matter and display advertising in. Of the 168 columns comprising the paper—nearly 100 columns were display ads neatly set. It was a fine achievement for the enterprising publishers, Messrs. DuBois & Usher, and speaks well for the business firms of that city, who are wise to the value of printers' ink rightly used.—Otsego County Advance.

The Charlevoix Courier came out Wednesday, May 10, with their first annual automobile number, consisting of twenty-eight pages. Twelve pages were devoted mostly to automobile advertisements, representing 18 automobile, garage and accessory firms. The edition was well printed and the ads were attractively gotten up. The number would be a credit to a city much larger than Charlevoix.—Mancelona News.

The Charlevoix Courier issued a 28-page automobile number last week, undoubtedly the largest and best edition of a newspaper ever published in this part of Michigan. Aside from a large amount of automobile and general advertising it contained a lot of valuable information concerning motor cars, highway improvement and other kindred subjects.—Bellaire Independent.

The Charlevoix Courier has installed a linotype, and, by the way, the Courier is one of the best papers in this section. A 28-page automobile number was issued from that office last week which would be a credit to any print shop in the state.—Elk Rapids News.

The Charlevoix Courier issued a 28-page automobile number last week and it was a beauty. The Courier has recently installed a typesetting machine, and can justly claim to be the leading paper of Charlevoix county.—Mancelona Herald.

SYNOPSIS.

Dudley Larnigan, district attorney, because of his fight on the vice and liquor trusts, is killed by an agent of a secret society, the committee of fifteen. The fight is continued by his son, Bruce, who is elected district attorney, and by another son, Tom. Bruce is in love with Dorothy Maxwell, whose father is head of the insurance trust.

FINAL EPISODE.

The Milk Battle

Suggested by FREDERIC S. ISHAM, Author of "The Striders," "Under the Rose," "Aladdin From Broadway," Etc.

"Is there a chance for his recovery?" The doctor, who was heading over the side of the wheel chair, shook his head slowly as he looked up at the young woman who had asked him the question.

"I won't try to deceive you or raise false hopes, which may never be realized, Miss Maxwell. Mr. Larnigan is in a very critical condition. Death may come any day. The best we can do is to hope and pray."

A sturdy, thoughtful man of perhaps thirty-five waved his hand toward her from an automobile, which had drawn up beside the gate.

"Good morning Miss Maxwell. And how is our patient today?"

"About the same, Mr. Harding," said the young woman sadly, as he assisted her to a seat beside him.

Robert Harding, Bruce's lawyer cousin, reached over and patted her arm gently.

"There is one thing that I am going to do, Miss Dorothy, and in which you can give me real assistance. I am going to continue the battle against the graft trust where Bruce left off, and I am going to fight to the death!"

The girl impulsively caught his hand. Harding told the girl that he had induced wealthy philanthropists to finance a milk company that would fight the milk trust.

Six weeks passed—six strenuous weeks on the part of Robert Harding and the newly organized People's Milk Supply company. The People's Milk company as a legitimate, sound business enterprise was coming into its own, but it was increasingly plain that the mysterious opposition it was receiving would stop at nothing to put it permanently out of commission. For instance, the prices of the trust began to drop steadily, so steadily, in fact, that from a financial viewpoint it became impossible for Harding and his associates to meet them.

Harding called a hurried meeting of his associates in his private office and the men responded with dubious fuses, for the venture had already cost a considerable amount. "Gentlemen," announced Harding, coming to the point without delay, "we are here because we are confronted with a grave crisis in our affairs. Unless we can raise more immediate cash and are prepared to continue our operations for the near future at a loss I fear that we must decide that our project is a failure."

In a short time $50,000 was realized, and Harding was delighted.

He telephoned the good news to Dorothy Maxwell, who received it with for her car, determined to drive to the office of the independent, the newspaper which Bruce Larnigan controlled in the interests of his father's life.

Almost the first person she met in the editorial office was Robert Harding, who hurried toward her eagerly.

"I think I have found a way to help you," she said impulsively. "I have remembered that father has at home a book with the names of the members of The Fifteen and their secret by-words, minutes, and so on. That book ought to let us know who the mysterious head of the milk trust is. We can then force him to come out into the open."

"Good!" echoed Harding, with enthusiasm. "When you have the book let me know."

"I will," the girl promised, and then she caught her breath sharply. Just behind them stood Stanford Stone with a slight smile on his lips.

She felt that Stone was watching her intently as she passed out of the office, and she quickened her pace. But her mind was made up.

"I'll find the book," the girl decided. "and then take father to our home in the mountains. Mr. Harding can come there for it."

This decision made, she lost no time in carrying it out. Her search for the Journal of the Fifteen was a short one, as she knew the book was in her father's private desk in the library and had not been removed since his seizure.

With the little red covered book in her possession she rushed preparations for their departure to the mountains so hurriedly that by 9 o'clock that evening she and her father were on their way and a note had been sent to Harding telling him where he could reach them.

It was at 10 o'clock the next morning that Dorothy, reading to her father in the cheery living room of their little country home, glanced up to see the figure of Stanford Stone entering the rustic gate of the grounds. She stopped abruptly. The pretentious book was in the bosom of her dress, but she knew that Stone would stop at nothing, not even physical violence to her, to gain possession of it. Her glance traveled swiftly about the room. On a table lay her father's silk hat. With a quick movement Dorothy caught up the hat and slipped the book into the lining just as Stanford Stone was announced.
